Parade the flag of Lincoln,
Awake the triumph bell ;
For they who fought for freedom,
Fought well, fought well.

Then silent stand, uncovered ;
It is the heroes' knell ;
But they who died for freedom,
Died well, died well.

APPRAISAL OF NEOPHYTES

ROBERT CALVIN WHITFORD, Z and AA

"Rushing" is well named. For in the precipitant process of gathering freshmen into the fraternal fold the race is generally to the swift and the first come is the soonest chosen. The eligible freshman with a fat pocketbook is in a position to say, "Who will open the bidding, gentlemen? What am I offered?" It is an unfortunate truth that at many institutions of higher learning there is each year a mad inter-fraternity or "Pan-Hell" scramble for desirable pledges; one suspects that, in accordance with the Malthusian principle, the fraternities increase more rapidly than the means of their subsistence,—freshmen. Nevertheless we sometimes wish that we had looked before leaping upon the neck of this or that youth and pinning our button to his coat-lapel. I am almost willing to assert that slap-dash pledging is almost as reprehensible and, in the sequel, disappointing as kissing in the dark. It is well enough to seek to judge a man's character by the grip of his hand or the glint in his eye, but nobody ought to rely absolutely upon such evidence. We owe it to Phi Sigma Kappa to pick our freshmen carefully, selecting boys who are suited to our particular needs.

This is a good idea but not very practical, you say? At least we can judge our selected colts after we have them once thrown and roped. To be sure, every brother is a fine fellow even under the present system; there is a mystic alchemy in the initiation which makes him a first-rate fraternity man by virtue of having clambered into our select company. But he has faults as well as virtues, and it is worth our while to find out about both as early as possible. And the best time for us to conduct our researches and make our discoveries is while he is yet a mere novice, a pledge. At that time we can test and estimate his worth to his chapter. We can discover his aptitudes and set him at work for which he is suited. If he seems good for nothing, it is not too late to get rid of him.

I realize that I am proposing nothing new. Judicious selection is always the ideal. Yet we might make a closer approximation of the ideal than we commonly do. In order to emphasize the need for more careful appraisal of the value of our freshmen, I am going to outline here a scheme for the analysis of the green material. In each of our chapters the scheme as a whole will prove impracticable. Perhaps it will carry something of suggestiveness for at least a few.

Let us agree that, in general, the alumni and upperclassmen of a chapter should know as much as possible about the capabilities of the freshmen. To the end of acquiring such information, the sources at present available ought to be used to their utmost; we should judge the boys carefully by personal observation and we should consider whatever opinions their friends and enemies will venture concerning them. In addition to gaining knowledge in these ways, we may learn something by submitting the freshmen to definite tests.

For convenience let us, after the fashion of debaters, classify the pledge's qualities in three arbitrary categories: physical traits, mental traits, and moral traits. For the sake of knowledge of the physique of our freshman, we ought to have available the results of a thorough and recent medical examination. The importance which such information might have for us is obvious. If the pledge has a communicable disease, we should bar him from our house until he rids himself of it. If he has a weak heart or a weak stomach we ought to bear his trouble in mind and treat him accordingly; disciplinary "tubbings," never excessively humane, are cruel and sometimes even dangerous for such a man. Also the data obtainable from the physical examination may be very valuable to the upperclassman whose duty it is to suggest to the freshman lines of "college activity" in which he might profitably enter. Indeed such data would be useful in many ways, and they should not be very hard to obtain. Few chapters will care to hire physicians to examine all their freshmen. But colleges do employ medical officers for just that purpose. And it ought to be possible to induce the college authorities to make pledges' records available for the legitimate uses of the fraternity. One example will demonstrate the usefulness of such data. Probably the most troublesome physical defect among fraternity men is alcoholism; if the disease could be discovered and dealt with properly very early, much trouble could be avoided.

Next to the drunkard, no brother is more of a nuisance than the chronic flunker. Therefore it would be worth our while to attempt to discover a pledge's mental strength and intellectual aptitudes early in his fraternity life. If he is a moron disguised as a young-man-about-town, we ought to cast him from us. Of course some "boneheads" are highly valuable to the fraternity; they make themselves attractive in society. It is a matter of proverb that beauty and brains rarely exist together. But if we discover that a freshman is weak in reasoning power and memory, we ought to be pretty certain of his extraordinary virtues and merits of other kinds before we make up our minds to burden the "chapter average" with his low grades. We should seek definite information about the mental ability of every freshman amongst us. And in many colleges we shall soon be able to find it ready to hand. It is a matter of common prophecy among educators that within the next five years most American colleges will adopt the policy of supplementing entrance examinations and individual interviews by the use of group mentality tests. These examinations, similar to the "Alpha" which most of you took in the Army, will be, of course, tests of quickness of wit. If college authorities can be persuaded to permit responsible upperclassmen to consult the records of the pledges of our fraternity, we shall have access thus to a fair amount of reliable data concerning the thinking power of our freshmen. If a boy is shown to be deficient in mathematical skill or in logic we can begin at once to bolster up his weakness by means of coaching and judicious advice as to the selection of courses of study. If he seems hopelessly unintellectual, we ought to think twice before taking him into our brotherhood.

Physical defects and mental deficiencies are serious, but faults of character are worse. And for such deficiencies we have no ready-made criteria. The university psychologists have not yet ventured to prepare series of questions by which to estimate the consciences of their victims. Perhaps they feel that in so doing they would encroach upon the field of the theologians. More probably they have given up the problem as impossible of solution; the physiognomist, the trained judge of faces, is the only scientist who makes any pretence of being able to appraise a man's character without long association with him. And the physiog-nomist's science is largely guesswork. Nevertheless, stepping in boldly, a pedagogical charlatan might propose a morality test after the style of the mentality test already mentioned. One has visions of pages full of such problems as these:

Underline in the right hand column the phrase in each case which completes a sentence expressing your sentiments:

| 1. If I found a brother drunk in the gutter, I should                | look the other way.pick him up and give him a dollar.take him home and put him to bed.rebuke him for his misbehavior.call a policeman.                                 |
| 2. If I found two brothers fighting in their shirt-sleeves, I should | offer to act as referee.persuade them to arbitrate.steal their coats.have them arrested for disorderly conduct.knock their heads together.                             |
| 3. If a brother struck me in the face, I should                      | turn the other cheek.report the matter to the House President.break his jaw with a baseball-bat.go quickly to my room and lock the door.square off and defend my self. |

Obviously this is chicanery. Such questions could never be reliable tests of character. To reduce the matter to an absurdity, imagine testing a man's honesty by asking him what he would do with a double eagle that some good brother left in his hat.

Yet it is not absolutely impossible to gauge the character of a freshman. The task will not be an easy one, but its results might be so valuable to the fraternity that the work would be worth undertaking. As a brother recently remarked to me, it is important to know not only whether a fellow has brains but also whether he has the inclination to use them in study. Is he ambitious and persistent or lazy and indolent? Possibly we can appraise his character by some such means as those employed in the Army for estimating a young officer's value to the service. First we must decide what are the important characteristics to be sought in our candidate. For a while I thought that we might look for the four distinguishing traits of Abraham Lincoln as enumerated by Herbert Croly: culture, sympathy, magnanimity and humility; these, however, do not represent all the qualities which a brother should have and which the Great American himself possessed in common with many lesser Americans. Next I pitched upon what Hilaire Belloc enumerates as the great virtues: mercy, justice, courage, the love of freedom and the service of one's country. But this list seemed too general for our comparatively narrow purpose. Therefore I decided to consult the fraternity and so discover the virtues which the brothers themselves think desirable. I asked a group of alumni, active men, and pledges to list for me the traits of character which they thought the ideal brother should possess. Each man wrote a series of five words, names of five qualities. The five which were most frequently mentioned were:

- 1, Loyalty; 2, Honesty; 3, Determination;
- 4, Good fellowship or friendliness;
- 5, Good breeding or refinement.

The next five were:

- 6, Unselfishness; 7, Ambition; 8, Popularity;
- 9, Cheerfulness; and 10, Foresight.

Undoubtedly this series of ten words does not represent an infallible analysis of the best brother's character. It is, nevertheless, highly suggestive because it does represent what one chapter thinks the ideal brother's character ought to be.

In order to explain my scheme, I shall take this list as a working standard. During the months between pledging and initiation, let each senior or junior observe carefully each freshman in the house, looking particularly for evidence of the extent to which the candidate possesses each of the ten virtues. Then on an evening of formal discussion of the candidates for initiation let each upperclassman produce his estimates of the worth of the freshmen. These estimates might be prepared in the following manner: Write a list of ten virtues. After the list rule three columns and head them "High (10)," "Medium (5)," and "Low (1)." In the space after each name of a virtue write in the appropriate columns the initials of the brothers of your acquaintance who possess that quality to great, moderate, or slight extent. Now rule as many more columns as you have freshmen to judge. Think whether the first freshman resembles in the matter of loyalty the man whose initial you have put in the first column rather than him whose initials you have put in the second column. If he falls halfway between the two, write a 7 in his column on the line with the word Loyalty. Consider each candidate in turn for each of the qualities, representing his relative possession of that quality by a numeral between 1 and 10. If a boy is loyal and honest, friendly and refined, but rather weak willed, his score might run something like this for the first five lines: 8, 10, 2, 8, 8. For the second half it might be: 3, 5, 9, 8, 6. Add the numbers and you have as your estimate of his desirability from the point of view of character a score of 67. The maximum, you see, would be 100, and the minimum 10.

The upperclassman's individual rating card, with his choice of high, medium, and low standards, might well be kept secret. All that he needs to do by way of announcing his judgment of a candidate is to read his total for that man or his numerical estimates opposite the names of the ten virtues. No doubt even the numbers could be recorded by secret ballot, but there seem to be certain advantages in open discussion among the upperclassmen. Assuredly the estimates ought not to be looked upon as infallible. They are merely supplementary to the old haphazard tests and opinions; they will act as a check upon the hasty mental arithmetic of our casual impressions.

If we have the patience and methodical persistence to gather these results with regard to physical, mental, and moral qualities of our freshmen, what ought we to do with our data? In exceptional cases we should take them seriously as warnings to get rid of weak pledges instead of taking them into the fraternity. Once the boys are initiated, we should use our data as suggestions for our guidance in helping the brothers to make good in college and in the world. The freshmen themselves ought to know the details of their own ratings, if not of each other's. If I had known at the time of my initiation that the chapter thought me lacking in "good fellowship," for example, I might have learned to be a "mixer." Similarly if a rough lad knows that the "bunch" thinks him lacking in good manners, he will probably try to acquire at least the external aspect of refinement,—to the advantage of both himself and the fraternity. The freshman who discovers that he has a reputation for being a "grouch" is likely to try to become more cheerful. And so on. You can easily manufacture further illustrations.

My point, then, is that we should select our men very carefully and gauge their worth very carefully. Perhaps the coldly pseudo-scientific method which I propose is faulty, but surely the end which I think it would attain is an extremely desirable end. The introspective advice, "Know thyself!" might well be applied to the chapter as well as to the individual. If there is a coward or a self-seeker among our freshmen, it behooves us to discover the evil and weed out either it or its victim before he spreads trouble among the rest of us.

Delta Tau Delta's sixtieth anniversary occurs this year. It was organized in 1859 at Bethany College, W. Va., where the students were largely southern. Of the six founders, one was killed in the Civil War, two died within the last two years, and three survive. Delta Tau Delta now numbers sixty-one Chapters. There is no special program planned as yet, but its convention meets in Boston, August, 1919. Sherman Arter, the old standby of the Karneas, to whom we are indebted for this note, adds: "For our fiftieth anniversary, we met in Pittsburgh, and a party left at the close of the convention and visited Bethany for a day. A meeting was held in the very room in the house where the Fraternity was organized, presided over by one of the founders."—The Delta.

SHOULD WE INITIATE FRESHMEN?

More and more the radicals of the fraternity world are saying that no freshman should be a candidate for initiation into a fraternity. They feel that a period of probation would insure a better start in the college course and that a year without fraternity affiliations would make for a truer undergraduate democracy. Some of them would forbid any pledging until the end of freshman year; others would depend upon the delay of initiation to insure a certain leisureliness in rushing. Some would require a definite scholastic performance as a condition of ultimate acceptance; others would avoid that as an unnecessary instance of arbitrary legislation. Of course the introduction of the innovation would presuppose the coöperation of at least a respectable minority of the fraternities represented in the institution or institutions concerned.

To bring this matter more forcibly before our readers we have invited some of our more prominent alumni still in touch with the educational world to express their attitude toward the fraternities' agreeing not to initiate candidates until after they have satisfactorily completed one year of college work.

Dr. Thomas Fell, Sigma. President of St. John's College:

"I do not approve of the custom of rushing freshmen into fraternities, as it is likely to bring into the organizations a good deal of undesirable material. Students should be tried out by at least one year of college life, to prove themselves as satisfactory, morally, intellectually and physically.

"But there is this to be said on the other side, that unless there is an agreement between the different fraternities, and unless all strictly adhere to the compact, advantage may be taken by one of them of the waiting time to pledge the most desirable material, to the detriment of the others."

Mr. George J. Vogel, Gamma '91, Court. Superintendent of Schools in Torrington, Connecticut:

"According to my theory, a chapter of a fraternity is a large family in which the upper classmen are the older brothers, who guide and help the freshmen to adjust themselves to college standards of work and living. I have seen this theory justified in some chapters. Whether the freshmen should be tried out through a half or whole year in college before being initiated is something which experience must determine. I do not know the result of this trial. It does not seem to me that fraternity standards should interfere with the proper development of work and life and attitude toward the university. As always; the salvation of the family depends upon the older brothers."

Prof. Edward F. Miller, Omicron. Massachusetts Institute of Technology:

"I am not sufficiently well posted to have an opinion which is worth much, but I believe that if the fraternities all wait a year before bringing men in, they would be able to secure students of better standing as far as marks are concerned, but unless all the fraternities agree to wait it would, in my judgment, be unadvisable for such a move to be made. On the other hand, the extra year which the men live together under the arrangement which now exists is worth something to the men because of the better acquaintance which they have with one another."

Walter C. Brandes, E '16. Affiliated with Lambda, George Washington University:

"Lambda chapter has not found it necessary to postpone the initiation of freshmen until they have completed one year of work at the George Washington University. In view of the fact that freshmen have formed so distinctive a factor in the life of the chapter and in view of their quick acknowledgment of their responsibilities in maintaining the life of Lambda, the postponement of their initiation would deprive the chapter of one of its real features. No fraternity at the University has found it necessary to impose rushing regulations, and the faculty has suggested none. A rapid canvass of the leaders in fraternity matters in the University does not show any pronounced tendency to regulate the fraternities in regard to freshmen."

Dr. Charles Sumner Howe, A '78. President of the Case School of Applied Science:

"I would prefer to have the initiation of candidates for fraternities postponed until after the first year, for two reasons:

"First: A student when he enters college as a freshman has all he can possibly do to carry his college work. If his time is occupied by fraternity men who are trying to size him up or if he knows that he is being considered for one or more fraternities or if he is worrying because he is not being considered by any, his attention is distracted from his work and he cannot succeed as well as though he were perfectly free to devote his whole time to those things for which he entered college. A student should be free from every outside distraction until he is well started in his college course.

"Second: A certain number of freshmen drop out during the first year. As a rule they leave because they fail in their studies. It is a great disadvantage to a fraternity to have among its members some of the men who are forced to leave because they cannot keep up with their work. And yet this must inevitably happen as long as initiations take place during the freshman year. I therefore believe it would be a good thing for the fraternities to postpone their initiations until the close of the freshman year."

Prof. Robert P. Armstrong, A '10. St. Lawrence University:

"This world of ours to-day is done with institutions that live for no purpose except to perpetuate themselves. Fraternity men must thus be prepared for a keen scrutiny of their fraternity to be ready to justify the existence of such an organization.

"As a useful organization the fraternity is bound up first with the lives of the men who have entered its fold, and through them with the university or college in which they have matriculated. The fraternity should thus foster right living, scholarship and a democratic spirit. That fraternities have been criticized for failing on all of these points is to state a platitude. That the initiation of candidates be deferred until they have successfully completed one year of college work would remedy these evils is a debatable question. For the affirmative the following points are suggested without elaboration or proof:

"By delayed initiation a democratic spirit would be nurtured by the freshmen associating together before they enter the fraternity.

"The personnel of the chapter would be strengthened by the elimination of possible freshmen flunkers and men who drop out during the first year.

"Congenial men could be chosen through having proved their worth during the freshman year. Men are taken in on snap judgment and often prove undesirable. Those would be eliminated by a trial year.

"Freshman conduct would be raised to a higher plane by the knowledge that freshmen were under close scrutiny by the fraternity men. Freshmen would have freer choice in the selection of the fraternity they join. This would have a salutary effect upon the fraternities."

Mr. Herman H. Hanson, K '02. Until recently associated with the University of Maine:

"Having lived in a fraternity house for three years and in a college community for nearly sixteen years after graduation, the writer had an opportunity to observe fraternity life rather closely, and it seems to me that at no period of his college career does a student need the companionship and steadying influences of a good fraternity more than during his freshman year. Note that I say a good fraternity; for while, speaking in a general way it is true that occasionally certain influences not of the best will be found in individual chapters such influences will be encountered more often outside the fraternities.

"From a purely selfish standpoint probably the fraternity would be somewhat benefited by delaying to initiate until after a period of probation. No doubt but that by this method occasional undesirable members could be avoided; but viewing the matter in a broad light and taking into consideration the question of help and assistance both to the individual and to the institution, the writer is not at present in favor of such a plan."

Prof. Homer P. Little, X '06. Colby College:

"The proposition that it would be desirable for fraternities to delay initiation of candidates until after they have successfully completed one year of college work has much to commend it. Two advantages are very evident. The first concerns the fraternity—it would prevent the organization from becoming harnessed to a fellow with much ambition to wear a fraternity pin and little ambition to stay in college after he has once obtained it. This is far from a hypothetical case. The second advantage concerns the initiate—if he finds that he is associated with an uncongenial crowd it is not too late to change. A freshman frequently knows a fraternity by what it was in his father's or brother's time, and it takes a very few years to change the type of 'crowd' in any fraternity.

"These considerations must be especially weighty in any institution where men are often pledged the spring before they enter college. There must be—indeed we all know there are—misfits where this method is in vogue. Deferred initiation would prevent some lamentable mistakes."

THE STORY OF A BARB

THE EDITOR

We never knew how it happened that he was overlooked. Of course he was not prominent in athletics the fall of his freshman year, which meant that for the time being he was not prominent at all. Still that would not explain it wholly. Perhaps it was because he lived in a third-floor single room in old Alumni Hall. Yet it was not a matter of funds; he was well-to-do. Perhaps it was because he was downright homely in feature. Yet his homeliness was of the clean-cut kindly type which is attractive rather than otherwise in most eyes. Perhaps it was because he gave himself up largely to his lessons during those first crucial weeks. Yet his door was never closed to the freshmen in the entry who rather inevitably gravitated into his room for a rough-house and a smoke. Perhaps it was due as much as anything to the cut of his clothes which was that of maturity and the business world rather than that of the campus. And yet the quality of cloth was good and a crease was never lacking. Be the explanation what it may, the fact remains that when the season was over he had not been offered any pin, had hardly been rushed at all.

Was he disappointed? Did the oversight rankle in his inmost heart? When that butterfly wisp of a man across the hall brought in his mystical symbol for felicitation, did he indulge in bitter comparisons as he spoke the conventional words? When the athletic lads, football and crew, dropped in and modestly related their good fortune, did he wince and wonder? When the great hulk of good-nature rooming at the foot of the stairs lounged in and languidly confided the fact of his election, was he hurt by his comrade's news? I do not know. If resentment was in his heart, certainly not one of them guessed it. And why was it, too, that they came to him, all sorts of fellows as they were, first of all? Which they did. And why did they not pass along the word of their obscure friend, in their newly found fraternal homes? Which they didn't.

After all, freshman year was a happy one. There are no responsibilities for the freshman. All he needs must do is to pass his courses and set a few lines for the future. And the courses are never as hard as he tells his folks at home. True he studies all night during his first examination period, coming to the class room with haggard face and a deep sense of the fatality of the occasion, but he does it more from a feeling of the traditional fitness of the thing than from a fear of failure. In spite of the hostility of the sophomores he feels that he is among friends, for juniors, seniors and faculty are all on his side, custom notwithstanding, and he enters the underclass rivalries with a deep realization of the abiding justice of his cause.

And he of whom I write was a freshman. He took part in all the freshman stunts and enjoyed them. He took a simple delight in relating to the folks at home that Christmas found him with only one unbroken piece of furniture in his room. He was the one to think of an old abandoned bath-tub when the gang from the other entry attempted an invasion with the gardener's hose. He loved the long smoke-fests late at night, when the boys threw cold hands to see who should go down to the dog-cart to procure refreshments for the crowd, and the others in bath-ropes, or less, lay about the room making all kinds of noise to the timid accompaniment of a mandolin. If he did not carry as much of naïve campus enthusiasm to the faculty tea as did his comrades, still he was one of the first to reach the bell rope in the old chapel when news of a football victory over a mighty and ancient rival was telegraphed to town. If he was lonesome without his entry cronies upon fraternity nights, still he did a lot of serious reading by himself and gave no sign.

In the class elections the following autumn he was chosen vice-president to the general satisfaction of the sophomores and the bewilderment of the upperclassmen. Who was this man? To his classmates it seemed manifestly fitting that he should be thus honored, and yet it did not seem to occur to them to rush him for their various societies.

As a senior there wasn't a freshman who did not know him by name and sight. And many a first-year man knew him in a more intimate way. It was strange in how many instances he had somehow found his way into an unknown youngster's room and in the course of a little informal chat had established a comradeship which years would not undo.

"What about the fraternities?" a lad had asked him once during his early days in collegiate halls.

"Good," was the prompt reply. "They are like the old college herself. They make men and break them; they increase your opportunities and your temptations; they add to the joy of your life and to the responsibility."

And still he was a barbarian. Yet he knew the fraternities, knew them first-hand; with the exception of the goat-rooms he knew their houses nook and cranny. He had been a dinner guest so often and with so many different crowds. Members of more than one of them had sometimes said, "Why, he never was initiated, but you might almost call him a member of our bunch."

And why had he never been initiated? Perhaps because during those two short years he had seemed preëminently and harmoniously right just as he was. I would not venture to say. Among his classmates the old freshman relationship had continued to prevail; he had seemed to belong to too many of them to belong to any few. Certain it is that, one of the most popular men in the class, he had never been asked to join a fraternity. Now underclassmen were asking why, and the matter was brought up in the meetings of various chapters. In every instance the conclusion was the same: "It would be an insult to ask him now." Proud of their societies as these men were, they felt that this man had outgrown them. And would he have been glad to join a fraternity now? I do not know.

His room, on the ground floor now but still in Alumni Hall, was the rendezvous for all kinds of men. White, the football captain, kept a jar of tobacco there. Johnson, the class fusser, used to station himself in his window-seat to watch the Sunday vesper guests. The president of the Y. M. C. A. had the end of a bookshelf reserved for certain Association records. Men of every fraternity—Zetes, Dekes, Phi Doodles, Kapps, Phi Sigs and down the list—found the room a handy place in which to leave books and sweaters. Seminars of all kinds, in biology concerning which he knew nothing, in French literature upon which subject he was the undergraduate authority, in baseball and campus politics in which every man considers himself omniscient—were held in his room. Many a man had sometime left it at midnight for his palatial abode in Fraternity Row with a new and mighty inspiration for better things; but long after he had forgotten himself in sleep, his erstwhile host was still at work upon to-morrow's lessons.

His was not exceptional ability as undergraduates construe the word. He was active in college affairs it is true, but not those which command the highest respect about the campus. In athletics he was a nonentity. But in all matters requiring enthusiasm and judgment he was a leader. His hobbies caught the imagination of the crowd. He had a way of bringing unpopular practices into vogue. It just happened that he added to the aesthetic appreciation of the campus, but it was not because he excelled in dramatics and music that he brought this to pass. His was the contribution not of genius but of personality.

If the fraternities felt that they could no longer honor him, the college, the greater fraternity, knew no such difficulty. His last weeks were rich in the customary expressions of confidence and regard.

The conclusion of the whole matter is simply this. There was no better fraternity man in the whole college than this man who belonged to none. There was no one whose testimony was more helpful to the fraternity cause. There was no one whose associations tended more to uphold fraternity traditions and customs. There was no one whose daily life more nearly exemplified the fraternity ideals. There was no one who really did more to correct abuses in the fraternity system than he.

Our fraternities are most potently worth while. They are justifying themselves more successfully every year of their activity. But they are not infallible in their judgments. Because a man is elected to their membership proves nothing regarding his inherent superiority. The fraternities do get most of the best men, it is true; but with them they get a lot of trash. Furthermore membership in a fraternity will in itself bring to pass no miracle in character. The organization simply gives a more favorable field for growth. In the final analysis the man's the thing. There is no substitute for personality; there is no short-cut to personality. The little character sketch of this man who was overlooked and triumphed gloriously after all is worth something to us. It is a matter for reflection. It is an inspiration, too.

THE CHAPTER AUTHORIAL

In the Journal of English and Germanic Philology (University of Illinois) is an article upon satires, by Robert C. Whitford, Z '12. This article presents a contemporary critical view of the beginnings of romanticism and shows how the buds looked to those who watched them come into existence.

Our House, a novel by Prof. Henry Seidel Canby, E '99, published by the Macmillan Company.

This is a story about the adventure of authorship. The New York Evening Sun has written of it:

"There is one class of readers who will welcome Our House with no uncertain expressions of approval. This class is made up of all young writers who have not yet passed their, say, sixth acceptance, and all young people who are not yet writers but intend to be. This is equivalent to congratulating Prof. Canby on having written a sure best seller. His sales should run into the millions."

Education by Violence, a book of essays by Prof. Henry Seidel Canby, E '99, published by the Macmillan Company. The New Haven Courier-Journal writes editorially:

"Prof. Canby deals with the subjects of international relationships, the outlook for the great nations, education, reconstruction and the war's ending. On each essay he presents the fruits of education by violence. A worth-while book, instructive, interesting and suggestive. A historical evidence of how the war and its aftermath affected one discerning American mind."

Maurice Francis Egan has written in the New York Sun:

"No essays since I read Emerson's have stimulated me so much as Dr. Canby's."

"Greatly begin, though thou hast time
But for a line, be that sublime;
Not failure, but low aim, is crime."

PRESS PROVERBS

If "no news is good news," some chapters are making phenomenal progress.—Phi Gamma Delta.

The real business of a fraternity is to create friendship, to stimulate the love of worthy ideals, in a word, to lead its members to choose the best things of life and to walk on the higher levels of life.—Kappa Alpha.

Some chapters have taken time by the forelock and have already provided some sort of memorial for their soldier members; there is reason to believe that in this matter haste may mean lack of taste.—Beta Theta Pi.

We shall not have mastered the Graduate problem until we give the graduate something to do as well as something to read and to pay.—Garnet and White (A X P).

There is a very present danger that ours is becoming a brotherhood of miscellaneous assorted and diversely advantaged men rather than a union of closely bound and congenial members held together with common interests and ideals.—Delta.

Buying a ticket to a dance or a pig feast and not attending does not make one a good Phi Gam.—Phi Gamma Delta.

The fraternities grow and change with the schools; they have made every necessary adjustment with the realities since their founding and will continue to do so or perish.—Sigma Chi Quarterly.

For twenty-two years membership in T N E or kindred underclass organizations has been prohibited.—Rainbow (Δ Γ Δ).

Fraternity life in the past has been too smug, too largely a close-circuit of kindred interests.—Palm (Δ T Ω).

We Americans have just had a tremendous lesson in idealism.—Banta's Greek Exchange.

A venereal patient needs medical aid as much as a tubercular one; a policeman's club, a shocked prude, or a hypocrite's smirk are all poor substitutes.—Tomahawk (A Σ Φ).

Our actives need not worry over awol nor the proper rendering of the "flip"; however chapter letters and military data must come in on time.—Purple, Green and Gold (Δ X A).

Now is the time for alumni to come forward with positions for our returning brothers; anyone having or knowing of a position should notify the Editor at once.—Rattle (Θ X).

In this time of "having made the world safe for democracy" we feel that it is unnecessary to caution against money aristocracy, snobbishness, or exclusiveness—the old bete noire of the fraternity system.—Scroll (Φ Δ Θ).

Is your reading limited to the bare necessities of your professional training?—Paper Book (Δ Θ Π).

BETWEEN OURSELVES

THE following quotation from a Lambda letter is notable, as pointing the way which some of the other chapters might conveniently and profitably take. Perhaps the intimacy described is not so rare as this emphasis would suggest, but certainly it is something to be commended wherever found and recommended where absent.

"Fifteen couples from Lambda are going to visit Sigma the 24th of this month, being kindly invited over to Crabtown by the sea for a dance at St. John's. The feeling between these two chapters is more than one chapter can feel toward another; it is more like that of two parts of the same chapter. Sigma visits Lambda and Lambda visits Sigma and believe you us, in the words of the cub reporter, 'a good time was had by all.'"

THE Fraternity, through the Council, has subscribed to Banta's Greek Exchange, a copy to be sent to each chapter beginning with the September (1919) quarterly. Mr. Banta's magazine has had a tremendous influence in breaking down inter-fraternity antagonisms and giving expression to the essential brotherhood between the different societies. Phi Sigs will be interested in reading what other fraternities are doing and of what their leaders are thinking. And, whether they wish it or not, their fraternal outlook will become more catholic and their sympathies more universal and benign.

WALTER WOOD HANCOCK in the last edition of The Watchword of Alpha Deuteron again sounds the old cry for a fraternity song-book.

"It is inexcusable that a fraternity of the standing of Phi Sigma Kappa has no song-book. Procrastination is the reason our song-book has not been published long ago. We want a song-book."

It sounds familiar, doesn't it? Convention after convention has made recommendation and appointed committees. We think we are right in saying that a committee with certain powers to act is at present organized. A report is due at the next convention. It ought to be the kind of report that will lead to action.

WHERE is Williams? Our records show that among the Brothers Astray there are five men by the name of Williams. And there are too many others, with common or unusual names. Be sure to look over the list in this SIGNET and send in any information you have. Of course incomplete addresses or those absolutely transient are of very little value. Moreover the work on the directory is to be pushed through at once, and so promptness is imperative. Where is Williams? And where the rest of them?

THE Phi Delta Theta chapter at Franklin made thirty little street urchins extremely happy Christmas night. Every member of the fraternity entertained one boy as his guest for dinner at the chapter house."

Doesn't that give you a thrill? Doesn't it make the word Fraternity mean more to you? Isn't it most splendidly worth while?

NOT many years ago a group of distinguished leaders of various fraternities passed a formal resolution discountenancing the service of liquor at fraternity functions and then blithely went forth to banquet with Bacchus in his accustomed place. The paramount temptation is being rapidly removed. The drastic act has been passed.

From the standpoint of the fraternity the SIGNET is profoundly glad. We have seen too many brotherly assemblages degenerate into maudlin irresponsibility. We have seen too many potential leaders of men suffer debasement of their capabilities for service. The fraternities should have been the first to stamp out intoxication from society. Some of our chapters have most enviable records in this respect. But in general we, the fraternities, have missed an opportunity.

The new law will not be wholly enforced. Perhaps it ought not to be. But it will make drinking in college and fraternity no longer in style. For our boys it will remove a peril of vogue. It is a good thing.

PROMINENT UNDERGRADUATES

For the sake of better acquaintance with the young men who hold places of leadership in the various chapters, we have asked the secretaries to tell us something about one of the more prominent seniors. The failure of some secretaries to do this may be due to war-depleted ranks in the chapter.

RICHARD D. COLE, SIGMA

Brother Cole holds several important positions in the student body. He is president of the senior class, president of the Student Senate, a member of the Hop Committee, and Cadet Captain of Company A. In a competitive drill held recently between the companies of the cadet battalion, Captain Cole's company scored the highest number of points and he will be awarded the prize saber presented each year to the captain of the winning company. Brother Cole is one of the most popular and influential men in St. John's and we are justly proud that he is a Phi Sig.

LOUIS A. DROESCH, IOTA

Louis Droesch is one of the most influential men at Stevens Tech. He is president of Iota, a capable and enthusiastic leader in all our endeavors. He is a member of Tau Beta Pi, the honorary scholastic society, and of Khoda, the senior society, consisting of the twelve men who are considered the best Stevens men in every sense of the word. He has been on almost every class committee and was class secretary the past two years. He was manager of the Junior year book, the Link, and a very efficient one at that. He is chairman of the Honor Board, a trying position, requiring a man of keen perception and enduring energy and utmost fairness in judgment. He is well fitted for this post. Due no doubt to his manifold responsibilities, Brother Droesch has not been in the best of health during the past winter, but has stuck to the job. His loss to the chapter will be severely felt.

ROBERT D. CHISHOLM, ALPHA

Good old Bob, it is with a feeling of regret that we underclassmen think of coming back next fall ungreeted by your smile. But Bob has left a record for all of us to look up to. Three years consistent work on the hockey team, the last two as coach and captain, a member of Senate and Adelpia, holder of many offices, committeeman for Junior Prom, Commencement, and similar occasions,—this is his record on the campus. But however busy, he has always found time to help a brother, and his cheerfulness and optimism have done much in making the chapter one big family. Here's wishing him the best of luck in the big game of life into which he goes.

RAYMOND SAVAGEAU, EPSILON

Ray, the class secretary, has been pretty busy lately arranging the family history of the members of our class for the archives of the University and our collegiate characteristics for the class book. Aside from this Ray is much interested in various experiments in the chemistry laboratory.

FEATHERSTONE AND KUNKLE, TAU

There is no distinguishing. Both men are leaders in fraternity, class and college. Feather is on the Dartmouth editorial staff and the press club. He is also a member of the medical fraternity, Alpha Kappa Kappa and the Dragon senior society. Kunkle is a member of the senior executive committee, the leader of the mandolin club, and a member of Dragon.

JOHN M. VAN HOUTEN, GAMMA DEUTERON

If you hear anybody call "Johnny" on the Iowa State College campus you know at once that he refers to Brother J. M. Van Houten who leaves Gamma Deuteron this June with B.S. in horticulture on his sheepskin. Johnny came to us from Chicago, wanting to be an Ag; and an Ag he has certainly been, taking prominent part in many of the activities of that division.

He has been a member and officer in two honorary fraternities; Alpha Zeta, the agricultural society, and Sigma Delta Chi, that of professional journalism. He has been most active along journalistic lines, in two years having risen from "cub" to editor of The Student, from which office he later resigned to take over the editorship of the Iowa Agriculturalist, a farm journal published by the students of the college. He was also student assistant in the Department of Journalism. In this connection he has been editing Better Iowa, a weekly clipping sheet sent out by the College, and has had charge of the state publicity sent out by that department. He has also contributed not a little material to various farm journals about the country.

Johnny prepared at Nicholas Senn High School in Chicago, where he was a two-letter man on the lightweight football team. However, after playing on his college freshman team for a season he decided to use his athletic prowess in Mexican style. The result was a deluge of literature. The Hort Club has had him in every office except the presidency. He was the representative of his department on the Ag Council, the governing body of agricultural activities. This year he supervised the Ag dance, the first farmer costume dance ever held at Iowa. The prizes for the best costumes were a bread-mixer and a pitchfork.

At present Johnny is in a quandary. He will teach journalism in the department this summer. He has had chances in both farmer journalism and orcharding. He claims that in another year anyway he will be out where the grass is green.

RALPH O. METZLER, ALPHA DEUTERON

Phi Sigma Kappa, Alpha Kappa Psi, commercial fraternity, Sachem, honorary junior society, Ku Klux Klan, interfraternity junior society, Skull and Crescent, interfraternity sophomore society, senior hat committee, prom committee, cotillion committee, homecoming committee, junior councilman of Illinois Union, Brother Metzler is one of the best known and most respected men on the university campus. It seems as though a jinx has followed him in regard to the presidency of the Union. Once he was beaten on a technicality and again by a very small margin. He is a very good student and an energetic worker in the Fraternity.

W. A. NUZUM, ZETA DEUTERON

Brother Nuzum is our only senior, being the only one able to get out of the army in time to graduate this June. He was instrumental in the reorganization of Zeta Deuteron, and it was through his untiring efforts that we were able to move back into the house at the beginning of the third quarter.

AUSTIN HORACE WELCH, EPSILON DEUTERON

Brother Welch prepared for Worcester Tech at the Fitchburg high school and at Worcester Academy. October 23, 1915, marked the beginning of his life as a full-fledged member of Phi Sigma Kappa. In his first term he was elected class treasurer and manager of the class football team. During the next year he became involved in more and different activities on the Hill. He played a leading rôle in the Tech Show, was on the editorial staffs of the Tech News, Y. M. C. A. handbook, and The Journal, and throughout the year was president of his class. In both of those years he was on the Tech Council and marshal for the chapter. His junior year he was manager of the dramatic association, a member of the junior prom committee, president of the fraternity and initiate in the honorary society, the Skull. He has been in the service so much of this year that he has taken little part in campus affairs. Upon his return, however, we made him editor of The Star and Crescent, which position he has filled with marked success.

JOHN BLAINE SHAMBAUGH, PI

Brother Shambaugh came to us from Albright College at the end of sophomore year, but he has become a valuable asset to our chapter and well merits the admiration the brothers have for him.

He has a remarkably pleasing personality and is always ready with a good word and a smile. At Albright he was one of the best linemen on the football team. In April 1918 he enlisted in the army and was soon commissioned a second lieutenant. Upon being discharged last winter he returned to Franklin and Marshall and has since contributed largely in bringing the chapter back to firm foundations. He stands well in his class as well as in the chapter. He will take up chemistry as a life-work.

THE CHAPTER INVISIBLE

EDWARD LAURISTON BULLARD, GAMMA '20

Lieut. Bullard died of injuries in France on April 8. He was born in 1897, the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Bullard of Revere, Mass. He prepared at Phillips-Exeter and then entered the College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y. In the summer of '17 he attended the Officers' Training Camp at Madison Barracks, but did not receive a commission. Then he entered the air service, receiving training at Princeton, and Wichita Falls, Texas, and in May was made a second lieutenant. He sailed for France in September and saw action in the Argonne with the 90th Aero Squadron ten days before the armistice. Since then he has been detailed to ferry service in the Metz-Nancy-Briey section and at Colombey-les-Belles. Details of the accident which resulted in his death are not known at this writing.

ROBERT FRANKLIN BRATTAN, SIGMA '13

News has reached the chapter that Brother Brattan was killed in France in a motor accident some time last April. No details were given.

CHARLES MONIE, NU '19

We grieve the loss of Charlie Monie, wounded November 3, 1918, and dying that same day in France, just eight days before the armistice was signed. His home was in Moosic, Pa.

ROY E. BRIGGS, XI '05

Brother Briggs was one of our founders and most loyal workers. In college he was engaged in many activities, identifying himself with nearly every branch of athletics. In his senior year he was captain of the track team. Three or four years ago his health began to weaken, but he won a temporary convalescence by going into the West. He undertook to take up his work again and his family moved West to be with him, but the old trouble recurred, finally resulting in his death. The sympathy of the chapter and of its alumni goes out to Mrs. Briggs and her children. The chapter feels keenly the loss of this brother, loyal to his faith both within college and without.

C. L. BRADY, MU

DR. A. H. CUTTER, ALPHA '94

Word has come through that Dr. Cutter died during the epidemic. Another in his profession writes:

"A. H. had a big reputation as a surgeon in Lawrence."

MURRAY C. WHEAT, ZETA '13

Brother Wheat was a private in the national army and was killed in action in France.

CHAPTER DOINGS

We held a most successful dance on May 24, our annual farewell affair. About fifteen men came over from Lambda, several from Baltimore and some of our own alumni were present. On the receiving committee were Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Fell, Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson, and Mr. John Green.—Sigma.

We are desirous that all our alumni send us their names and addresses to enable us to bring our records up-to-date.—Sigma.

The following are among our prominent undergraduates: Belluci, manager of baseball; Hart, member of editorial board of the college paper; Poole, attack on lacrosse team; Ellis, star on track team; Behr, also on track team; Nicoll, chairman of Calaulus Cremation committee; Robe, associate editor of Link.—Iota.

The chapter started the term with five brothers, but the number has been increased in geometric progression. Concerning the fraternity home we have postponed action for the following reasons: most of the brothers live at home, the situation in New York de property, and the costs would be out of proportion to the satisfaction of our wants.—Zeta.

Chi held a highly successful reunion in connection with Commencement, over forty alumni being back to attend the banquet and annual business meeting.—Chi.

Brothers Spink and Crofts have been score-getting members of the Williams track team this spring, and Coe and Lester have been elected to Gargoyle, the senior honor society.—Chi.

Ten of our men are rooming at the house and twice as many are dining there, this indicating the success with which we have re-established ourselves since the war. Brother Kosman was manager of the baseball nine this year.—Pi.

We have won the large silver loving cup awarded to the winning team in the inter-fraternity bowling league—Delta Deuteron.

The house is quite a social center again. On May 24 we entertained one of the track teams competing in the four-state interscholastic track meet. Upon March 11 and 29 we held dances with over twenty couples in attendance at each. On May 17 we held an alumni dinner smoker, which the Detroit Phi Sig club attended in a body. Over Decoration Day we held our annual May party at Whitmore Lake near Ann Arbor. Initiation took place May 27 and 28.—Delta Deuteron.

The chapter is once more on its feet in its new home at 240 Packer Avenue. Membership has increased from two to fifteen. The house will be open all summer and our latch-string is always out to Phi Sigs who happen in town.—Nu.

The past term has been a busy one for Alpha, starting off with a bang-up house party and ending with the winning baseball team in the interfraternity league. In fact there have been two house parties, one in connection with the prom and chaperoned by Brother Richards' brother and his wife, the other on May 17 featuring Bon Chisholm and Skinny Campbell as jazz artists.—Alpha.

The chapter has been well represented in athletics this spring, having Faxon, McCarthy and Richards on the varsity baseball nine and Allen, Bond and Thyberg on the track team.—Alpha.

During the week-end of May 17 we held a most pleasant spring dance. Cliff Prann continues his good work as shortstop on the university nine. Reid and Russert are playing on the lacrosse team.—Epsilon.

Tau held her annual initiation banquet on May 3. The lack of alumni was noticeable. Delegates were present from Alpha and Epsilon Deuteron. Brother Featherstone spoke about the new house we are planning to build next year. Fifteen girls were on hand for our house party in connection with the prom. Kay was in charge of the business end of dramatics and Prentiss and Andretta also on the prom committee.—Tau.

Lambda is slowly getting back to a peace time basis but it is very gradual. However, we hope to be the same old chapter both in point of numbers and pep which we were before the war. Lambda still intends to keep open house during the summer; the welcome sign is on the door and the lock is never turned. So come ye Phi Sigs who are weary in Washington and we will do the rest.—Lambda.

Brother Kane has established a new college record in the hammer throw at St. Lawrence. Charles F. Keegan has been elected president of the Thelomathesian society, which is the greatest honor the students of St. Lawrence can confer. Brother Wysocki is an actor in the dramatic club as well as being stage manager and property man. We are planning a new house fund and it will not be long before the blank notes reach our alumni.—Xi.

Omicron has been well represented in the activities about the State, academic, social, athletic. We have had several dances at the house and a house party during junior prom. Perhaps the greatest event for us for some time is the organization of the Alumni Association for Omicron. It is the link which will connect the active chapter more closely with those who have gone before. This year we have no seniors at the house so there will be no change in personnel next fall.—Omicron.

May 11 we entertained the fathers and mothers who were able to visit us. Thirty-seven were served at dinner. Dances were held on April 5, May 24 and June 6. Founders' Day banquet was held as usual.

Joe Dawson is an active man about the campus. He holds a musical club shingle, holds practically all the honors forthcoming from the Law College, won the Boardman scholarship, is a member of the Order of the Coif, editor of the Law Quarterly, chairman of smoker committee and of the Spring Day committee, and is waiting to hear from a tryout for the Masque.—Gamma.

The new chapter house is now beginning to be known by our older brothers and during the past few months many of them have been around to see us. At present we have 28 active members, 16 living at the house. A Mothers' Club has been formed by our mothers and they have done much to make the house a fine home for us. New curtains, new cushions and other much appreciated articles we owe to it. The club holds bi-weekly meetings at the different homes. We certainly are fortunate in its interest in us.—Omega.

Frank Champion,  $\Omega$  '21, has been playing on the California baseball team and was given his big "C." It took lots of hard work but he came through with a strong finish, being the third best hitter on the team. He has been elected to Winged Helmet and U. N. X.—Omega.

We began the third term with nine members and eight pledges, which justified our going back into our fraternity house. Six of the pledges have since been initiated. A prom party and informal dance have added to the gaiety of life. Smith is on the varsity track team.—Zeta Deuteron.

Beta Deuteron is witnessing the ending of a very active year. We have held to a high scholastic standard, but have done much besides. Brother Hough has been made president of the Masquers Dramatic club, of which Fossen, Hankins and Holland are also members. Hough is also vice-president of the Junior Laws, member of the Grey Friars, the board of The Daily, and of the athletic board of control. Brother McHale is president of the sophomore class, a member of Silver Spurs, and has just put on a very successful vaudeville. Bert Baston is back from France and recently entertained a university smoker with a wonderful account of his experiences with the Fifth Marines.—Beta Deuteron.

Brother William N. Bispham's suggestion is indeed a laudable one and deserves the hearty endorsement of all the chapters of Phi Sigma Kappa. By placing neatly framed service records in the various chapter houses much will be done to perpetuate among future generations the honor and distinction attained by those who have rendered such valiant service to their country during the great war. These records will also serve as an inspiration to Phi Sigma Kappa men in future years. Therefore Mu heartily endorses Brother Bispham's suggestion and is at present engaged in compiling such statistics and such data as will be of permanent value.—Mu.

The interfraternity track meet was easily won by Phi Sigma Kappa with 51 points, the nearest competitor having but 38, and the third but 16.—Epsilon Deuteron.

This is the first year in five that we have failed to land the cup in the interfraternity bowling league; this year we finished third in our division. The baseball team has started the season well with four wins and one defeat. In basket ball we finished second in our division.—Alpha Deuteron.

UNIVERSAL ASSIGNMENT TO FRATERNITIES

(From Star and Crescent of Epsilon Deuteron.)

In the last issue of the "Signet," appeared a proposal entitled, "A Challenge," based upon the supposition that the college authorities inaugurate a system whereby a sufficient number of fraternities should be established to provide for the entire student body, and the trustees of the institution have charge of the distribution of the freshmen to the various organizations strictly by

lot. It called for comments from fraternity men, either in favor of or in opposition to it, and it indeed warrants the attention of any Greek Letter man.

While it is true that we are living under a democracy and in an age tending toward the more democratic in college life, it does not seem plausible that any one instilled with the ideals and fundamental purposes of a fraternity, can see in a favorable light this proposition which would instate such radical changes.

Under an institution of this nature, the fraternity would cease to exist as such, and would even lack the scanty privacy of even an ordinary club.

Within a real fraternity should prevail brotherhood and good will. Men are chosen with these facts in mind, and while every student in a school might be a good fellow, every one would not possess a personality or nature which would make him a "mixer," so to speak, in any group or society into which he might be cast. Every college man is no more fitted to be a fraternity man any more than every religiously inspired person is capable of being a minister.

During the recent stress which the emergency of the war laid upon us, we received countless letters from the alumni serving both at home and abroad; every one urging us to allow the chapter to go completely under, financially, rather than lower the standards of the chapter by sacrificing the quality of our new men for the quantity necessary to the support of the house. This advice coming from men of experience is to be carefully weighed in the consideration of a proposition of this nature, as they realize fully the impossibility of moulding a smooth-running, harmonious organization from unhomogeneous material.

Whatever beneficial results such an innovation might bring about, the evil effects of the experience would greatly over-balance them, and would lead ultimately to a complete annulification of our modern fraternities, which like all great works, are not faultless, but ever striving for the correction of those faults which they recognize in themselves.

ALUMNI NOTES

The brothers are requested to send in personals about themselves or other alumni, writing all names clearly, and in the case of clippings giving the name and date of the paper concerned.

W. Jefferson Davis,  $\Psi$  '07, enlisted in the army as a lieutenant in the aviation service and was promoted to the rank of major last January. He has now returned to San Diego, Calif., where he has been practising law for the past eight years.

H. O. Wood, Z '11, has been doing some interesting publicity war work of late.

The Philadelphia Ledger of March 28 contained the following account of the war experience of Frederick C. Peters, A '07:

"Lieut. Peters was one of the men from Ardmore who got into the military service and who did not have to. He was over the draft age, settled in business as a landscape gardener and forestry expert; but he promptly closed his business, went to Fort Oglethorpe and won an artillery commission. Then he came home and married Miss Mary Yarnall shortly before going overseas with the famous All-American Division. He saw action in the Argonne Forest. Later he went to the A. E. F. College at Beaune and taught landscape gardening. But the spring and summer are naturally busy times in his business. So he applied for release to General Pershing and was ordered home for discharge."

The picture of Major L. S. Eckels, M '06, who died in France last spring, appeared in a recent number of the U. of P. Alumni Register.

Among the recent promotions in the Delta service roll are the following:

H. A. Eaton, promoted to rank of colonel. He was commandant first of the Third Officers' Training Camp at Camp Grant, Ill., and later of the Central Infantry Officers' Training School at Camp Lee, Va.

J. A. Arnold, promoted to rank of colonel.

G. S. Wallace, promoted to rank of lieutenant-colonel.

C. C. Sheppard, promoted to rank of colonel, chief of ordnance department on heavy artillery, A. E. F.

Andrew H. Blackmore, E '18, has the enviable distinction of ranking first in the graduating class of 1,100 men in the first F. A. C. O. T. S. at Camp Taylor in August 1918.

John W. Greenwood,  $\Phi$ , is a member of the faculty of the University of Buffalo, giving courses in agriculture, chemistry, physics and mathematics. This sounds like a pretty big job, and his good work in it is all the more remarkable when we remember that while in the employ of the Civil Service as contracting engineer he was thrown forty feet down a shaft and after a series of operations lost his leg. His address is 296 Baynes Street.

Robert C. Whitford, Z '12, after teaching at the summer session of the University of Illinois, will remove to Galesburg, Ill., where he has accepted a position as assistant professor of English at Knox College. He received his doctorate of philosophy from the University of Illinois last year.

G. Talbot French, I '12, is a botanist in the Department of Agriculture and Immigration of Virginia, and is located at Richmond.

Howard J. McGinnis, Δ '15, is registrar of the Fairmont State Normal School, Fairmont, West Virginia.

Col. Thomas W. Salmon, B '99, has been a good deal in the public eye because of his explanations and theories concerning shell shock. Col. Salmon says that during the St. Mihiel-Argonne offensive approximately 7,500 soldiers were admitted to the field hospitals of the First Army with diagnoses that might have been twisted into "shell shock" but were not and should not have been so termed. The treatment of neurosis was for the most part highly effective, most of the men returning soon to the front.

Ensign Stephen J. Tydeman, Γ '06, is in command of Submarine Chaser No. 81. On February 18 he was at Gibraltar.

Joseph Gallagher, Γ '07, is now employed by the United States Engineer's Office at Charleston, S. C.

In a public address at Cleveland, Mr. George B. Cortelyou, Δ '96, president of the Consolidated Gas Company, said that the regulation of public utilities was always restrictive and did not vary with the conditions upon which depend both the welfare of the corporations and the service of the community. Mr. Cortelyou suggested that the public utilities cannot meet what is rightly to be expected of them if they are so reduced in their resources that they cannot make their plants fully efficient, to say nothing of making returns to the investors. The New York Times, commenting editorially upon his speech, is inclined to agree with the basic principle but is sceptical regarding the practical success of the greater publicity which Mr. Cortelyou recommended as a remedy.

Herman H. Hanson, K '02, left his position with the research department of the University of Maine in December 1917 to take up war work with the Food Administration in Washington. In September of the following year he was made captain in the sanitary corps, and on May 20 was discharged from the army. For five months he has been stationed at Camp Lee as nutrition officer. He is now connected with the Experimental Station in Morgantown, W. Va.

In a recent letter he has written of New York, "I became so fond of that awful hole that Father Knickerbocker means as much to me as Uncle Sam does to every true American."

BROTHERS ASTRAY

There has been a good response to our appeal for information concerning missing men in the March SIGNET. Of many of them, however, nothing has been heard, and there are also other addresses which the post office department report to be no longer correct. So we are printing again a list of the men for whom we have no address. Without doubt you can give us data upon at least one man, and in that way only can we hope to be up-to-date in our directory and mailing list. Please give this list your careful and prompt attention.

The fact that a name does not appear on this list does not prove that the address is correct; it simply means that there is an address at which the SIGNET is being accepted from the post office authorities. Concerning the men initiated since the last directory was issued, we might say that their names are added to the mailing list, and hence the next directory, every year as they are turned in to the Secretary for inclusion in our records.

The directory is to be rushed. Any changes must be made at once. The greatest part of the work will be after the type is set for page proof when corrections are no longer readily made. Therefore give us your help BY RETURN MAIL, sending it to the Editor's permanent address, North Amherst, Massachusetts, for greater security.

FOREWORD*

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

The League of Nations provides the machinery for peace, but the peace-loving spirit is as necessary to its success as steam is to the locomotive. If, therefore, we would have world peace, we must cultivate the good-will upon which peace rests. The world cannot be terrorized into peace by elaborate preparation for war; that plan has failed; it met its death in the most bloody and costly of all wars. We cannot turn back to the old ways; we must go forward with a desire to hasten the universal brotherhood that Christ preached among men. Love must take the place of force as the controlling influence in the new order.

* Written expressly for the SIGNET, September, 1919.

TO THE NEWLY INITIATED

CLEMENT R. JONES, Δ '94

Dean of the College of Engineering, University of West Virginia

The grand chapter and the SIGNET extend their most cordial greetings of welcome to the new members of the various chapters of the fraternity. Active chapter membership may be limited to four years or less, but fraternity membership and associations are for life. You have entered upon the first phase of fraternity life and have heard all that is embraced in the secret ritual. You have already formed pleasant associations and have caught the spirit of brotherhood. You are rightly proud of the distinction and honor that have come to you, but permit an apprentice, who has not in twenty-six years sounded its depths and who does not yet claim to be a master, to say that you have not yet grasped the full meaning of that ritual, and your appreciation of the privilege of membership in the Phi Sigma Kappa will grow with the years until you will place your initiation as one of the most important events in your career. The Phi Sigma Kappa is neither the largest nor the eldest of the Greek letter fraternities, but it has a splendid chapter roll, a splendid history, and a stalwart active alumni membership second to none. It is a vigorous, vital organization founded upon and inspired by the true spirit of fraternity and mutual helpfulness.

Just now your emotions may be somewhat mixed. You were fêted and rushed until you may have conceived the idea that you were a little tin god on wheels and you doubtless thought that you were conferring a great favor on your chapter by becoming a pledge—then horrors! the humiliation and the severity of the tests and the awkward situations that you had to meet! Instead of honeyed words you were greeted with buffs and jeers until only a grim determination not to be a quitter kept you from tearing off your mask and grotesque robes and making a break for liberty. Finally when resigned to your fate but breathing vengeance on your tormentors and perhaps planning what you would do to the next fellow, you were led into the inner sanctum and your eyes were opened to that scene which can only be appreciated by those who have passed its portals; your attitude changed from one of humiliation and retaliation to that of awe and wonder and reverence.

Now you are doing your bit—your share of the chores, and are being exhorted and lectured by the upper classmen, but the price you paid was not too high and you would do it all, and more, over again for the privileges that you are enjoying. You are glad to serve.

The sting of the paddle, the solemnity of the ritual, and the electric shock of the grip of fellowship are still fresh in your mind and you are still proud, as you have a right to be, of the words of praise and the kindnesses heaped upon you during the rushing days, but you are getting a truer perspective and are coming to the conclusion that you were chosen not for what you are but for what you are in the making. The upper classmen may lecture, advise and help you, but it is "up to you" to make good. Remember that you can't get more out of fraternity life than you put into it and also that the fraternity is only one phase of college life, and that you will be doing both yourself and your fraternity an injury if you place it above the real purposes of the college.

Many boys come to college just to get an education without any clear conception of the meaning of the term, and the writer believes, after twenty-five years in dealing with boys, that it should be impressed upon the mind of every student at the beginning of his course that there are at least four factors that should not be neglected—intellectual, physical, social and spiritual.

The intellectual factor is of first importance and should come first because this particular period in the student's life is set apart for intellectual development and growth, but there is too much to be done and to be seen and enjoyed in the world about us and too much to be learned from contact with others for any student to turn himself into a mere bookworm for the four most valuable formative years of his life, finally leaving college with lowered physical manhood and without any points of contact for putting the knowledge that he has gained into practical use. There is ample time for all of these activities if one plans his schedule with reasonable care. The fraternity will supply the means and opportunities for the proper and normal social development and may aid or hinder the other essential factors, depending upon whether the chapter stands for the best in college life or places too high an emphasis on a few activities at the expense of others.

There was a time and not long ago when fraternities were clannish. Each individual chapter was sufficient unto itself. The members associated exclusively with one another, except when electioneering; they tried to secure for their own members all the political college offices regardless of fitness; they had their own booths at the proms, and danced almost exclusively with their own guests; a member of another fraternity was an alien enemy from a foreign camp and the barb was looked upon with disdain. Fortunately the spirit of the clan is being replaced by one of coöperation, each individual chapter being one family in the group of fraternities represented at the college. This transformation is not yet complete, especially among the sororities, and there is still a tendency to keep the barb outside the pale of social recognition.

Here is a recent incident. A young man of excellent social standing had been a welcome guest at a certain sorority house during the rushing season. When the list of pledges were published his name was missing and the next time he called he was told: "I'll have to ask you not to call on me again, I don't associate with non-fraternity men." It so happened that he had been invited to join a fraternity but did not do so. Is it any wonder that he said "Oh, Hell!" as he turned on his heel from the door?

There are many opportunities for the initiates to make our colleges better and stronger, but just now there appears to be no more inspiring work ahead than to make our colleges and universities truly American and truly democratic. We trust that you will be able to translate and apply the ritual and teachings of the fraternity in terms of life and service.

THE CASE OF SMITH AND THE THICKHEAD—A FABLE

ADDISON LEWIS, BA '12

Once there was a college freshman by the name of Smith. He was a good freshman, and a good student, who, despite the ambiguity of his name, had very decided ideas. One of these was that college fraternities were boorish, plutocratic organizations, which should be eliminated, lock, stock and symbols, from the body academic.

Smith had been approached by several fraternities on the subject of joining up, but he repulsed all advances with the curt information that he was already a member of that great fraternity, the Barba-Barba-Barbs, and cared for no other affiliations, thank you. The thickheads who had been so foolish as to seek to extend to him the important privileges of their various fraternities, were at first amused by his attitude. They thought he was only joking and attempted to reason with the bird, as Smith, looked at off-hand, was a likely prospect. He was up to grade in his courses, played a decent tackle on the Varsity second, and had his hair trimmed every ten days or so.

But Smith's replies were so silly and so offensive that they soon let him be, safe in the cradle of his own thoughts, which he thought were democratic.

Then, as Guy De Maupassant would have said it, came the war.

At once the ranks of the plutocratic, boorish fraternities were decimated as the boys exchanged their fraternity pins for the little old bronze U. S. button and the uniform of khaki. Many active chapters were forced to turn the latch-key on their houses owing to the thinness of their numbers.

But our friend Smith, of the Barba-Barba-Barbs, was not so speedy in hastening toward a training camp or recruiting office. Instead, we blush to report, Smith was very busy taking on the courses and habiliments necessary to convince the world that he had a yearning to become a minister of the gospel. You see, in plain vernacular, our friend did not cotton to the U. S. Draft Law.

However, he was drafted, his arguments and his family's arguments to the contrary notwithstanding. And he went to camp with all the other short-term would-be savers of humanity.

Let it be said, however, that Smith was not a real coward, only a highly-selfish, spoiled child. So when he got to camp and had gone through K. P. a couple of times and had marched fifteen or twenty times through the rain with the rest of his buddies with equipment that weighed a long ton, he began to feel human and, breathe it softly,—fraternal! He began to cotton to the army, took advantage of an officers' training course, became a second looie, went over with the 86th, fought side by side through the Argonne with loop-hounds from South Chicago and Riverside Drive plutes—yes, and with boorish fraternity men. And in the first rush when he felt like running backward, it was one of those same boorish thickheads who tried to persuade him that the fraternity life was the only life in the good old college days, who put his arm around him and steadied him and helped him get over that first foolish fright that often hits the best of us.

So Smith went on and captured an enemy machine gun nest single-handed with the aid of a sawed-off shot gun. And some one sneaked a war cross on him. And Smith felt very humble, because the thickhead who had helped him didn't get any, but lost a leg and was sent to some hospital hole for reconstruction.

The war ended and Smith came back. Came back with the stern conviction that the spirit of fraternity among men is the greatest thing on earth, next to mother love. The general cussedness of the big scrap had taught him that. Did Smith want to join a fraternity? You tell 'em! He haunted fraternity row; he cultivated every fraternity man he knew; he let his change of heart be widely and carefully known. But was he asked?

Fraternities and fraternity men are human. One snub is enough to make them wary.

A whole year went by and Smith was now a junior, a humble and chastened junior, by the way. A very strange phenomenon, be it known, as juniors go!

Came Armistice Day. The fraternity to whom the thickhead who had steadied Smith's nerve in the thick of the scrap belonged was giving a reunion for its World War Vets. The thickhead, minus his right pin, was going to be there, and he asked permission of his brothers to include Smith.

"Pronto," they agreed, wondering why.

So Smith came, haltingly, a little ashamed.

But he soon got the spirit of that bunch of good fellows, and when some enthusiast got up to toast the thickhead who'd lost his pin, Smith arose in his place and said:

"Gentlemen, before the toast, I should like to tell you what this man did for me over there."

And he told them, all about his own fear and the way the thickhead had stood back of him and braced him. And when he finished, he took off his cross and pinned it on the breast of the thickhead. "It belongs to this bird," he said.

Well—this story has rambled longer than the author intended it should, or the editor either for that matter. The upshot was that after Smith's departure, the brothers looked at each other and said, "Here is splendid fraternity material we've overlooked. This is a new Smith. We've never met him before."

So Smith was taken in, cussing because he had only one year left to be with the bunch.

The old-fashioned moral of this fable is—two minus two often equals four. Which is not so criptic after all, when you consider the case of Smith.

TOURS CLUB DISBANDS

The Tours, France, Club of Phi Sigma Kappa, of which members of Lambda were the moving spirits, has disbanded. All the brothers are home at last. Brother George Haines, '17, brought back with him the Charter of the Tours Club. It is signed by every member of the Club and now hangs in the Chapter House, where it can be seen by everyone. The work of designing this charter was done by Brother George Haines. The members of the Tours Club were not all from Lambda, for among the names signed to the charter may be found those of brothers from Yale, Dartmouth, Massachusetts Aggie, etc. The Tours Club is a concrete example of what is meant by the word "Fraternity." These men, many of them, had never seen each other before they found themselves stationed at the same place in France. Associations were formed which have been made lasting and many what would otherwise be tedious hours were whiled away in company with brothers. After the armistice, this organization did not a little to assist the members to shorten the time they spent while waiting for orders home.

THE ALL-PHI SIG ELEVEN

The sporting editor of the SIGNET submits the following lineup for an all Phi Sigma Kappa football team representing the season just past:

Hanke, l. e., Minnesota.
 Osborne, l. g., Penn State.
 Bailey, c., West Virginia.
 Youngstrom, r. g., Dartmouth.
 Larkin, r. t., Swarthmore.
 Mansell, r. e., Mass. Aggie.
 Neale, q. b., West Virginia.
 Vanderloo, l. h. b., Iowa State.
 Holbrook, r. h. b., Dartmouth.
 Ford, f. b., Stevens.

Substitutes: Rickert of Franklin and Marshall, Keegan of St. Lawrence, and MacIntosh of Massachusetts Aggie.

In making this selection the editor has been governed largely by a desire to avoid juggling with positions and by a sense of the ability of the individual and his team. It is possible that there may be candidates from Yale and Cornell, although the comparative weakness of the teams from those colleges this year makes an omission of the chapter letter much less regrettable than usually would be the case. For errors in judgment the editor will be forgiven.

Hanke certainly seems the logical man for left end. He has played that position throughout the season on the Minnesota team, no substitute having relieved him in a conference game. The record of the team to date places it well up in the upper group of the conference with three victories and two defeats, Minnesota losing to the champions by the close score of 10-6. Mahlon Fairchild of Nevada is apparently a rather unusually good left tackle, for although he is only a junior, he is captain of his college team. That there are seniors in the lineup is evidenced by the presence of two Phi Sigs, Tam and Sirkegian, both in the backfield. Pennsylvania State has had a strong team this year and Osborne has been a tower of strength in the line; there seems, therefore, no question of his selection for left guard. Bailey of West Virginia was pretty generally chosen for the All-American team in 1917 before he went into the service, and he seems to be just as good a center as he ever was.

Youngstrom of Dartmouth seems the natural man for right guard. He is a player of great strength and much experience on good teams, and has been notable for his ability to break through the line and block kicks. Larkin, captain of the Swarthmore team, Bob Maxwell's selection two years ago for All-American tackle, may take his usual position on the Phi Sig team without further comment. Mansell of Massachusetts Aggie is the choice for the other end. He is rather light for the rest of the line and somewhat weak in defensive play, but he handles forward passes exceedingly well and is altogether a dangerous man.

There does not seem very much choice for quarterback, but the man who has been playing behind Bailey of West Virginia and running up scores of 30 odd against teams of the type of Rutgers, ought to be satisfactory to every one. Vanderloo, selected for left halfback, is not placed in his own position; he is really fullback on the Iowa State team which beat Kansas Aggies 46 to 0 two weeks ago. He seems, however, a stronger ball-carrier than any of the regular left halfbacks, and is certainly too good a man to be omitted unless absolutely necessary. Ford of Stevens is an exceptional fullback. He not only carries the ball cleverly, but is skillful in handling forward passes and a good punter. He ranks among the first dozen players in the country in the number of touchdowns scored, and was in fact the best line plunger on a team that has gone through the season without a defeat. Holbrook of Dartmouth is our choice for right halfback. In the sensational game in which Dartmouth beat Penn 20-19 he made the first touchdown for the Green after a spectacular run of 55 yards, he later scored the second touchdown, and then he kicked the goal after the third. Of these touchdowns the reporter of the New York Times declared: "Holbrook's first touchdown was the result of a wonderful piece of individual running, and his second was one of those desperate efforts, with the goal line only a few feet away, which represent more than many a spectacular play in the open field."

Three substitutes are suggested. Rickert is captain of the Franklin and Marshall team and is presumably one of the best players of a rather weak team. It is interesting to note that in the game in which Swarthmore beat Franklin and Marshall 20 to 0, both captains were Phi Sigma Kappa. Keegan is also a captain, his team representing St. Lawrence University and said to be one of the best in the history of the college. MacIntosh of Massachusetts Aggie is an unusually good center, particularly in defensive play, and will bear watching another season.

CONGRESSMAN MICHENER

Earl Cory Michener, A '03, is now in Congress, representative of the Second District of Michigan in the House. The Congressional Directory gives the following outline of his life:

"Earl Cory Michener, Republican, of Adrian; born in Seneca County, near Attica, Ohio, November 30, 1876; removed with parents to Adrian, Michigan, 1889; educated in the public schools of Adrian, law department of the University of Michigan, and graduated from the law department of Columbian University of Washington, D. C., in 1903; admitted to the bar in the District of Columbia and Michigan in 1903, since which time has practiced law; has served four years as assistant prosecuting attorney and four years as prosecuting attorney of Lenawee County; volunteered in the Spanish-American War and served throughout with Company B, 31st Michigan Volunteer Infantry; married in 1902 and has two children; was elected to the Sixty-sixth Congress, receiving 20,831 votes to 16,276 for Samuel W. Beakes, Democrat, 247 for Milton V. Breitmayer, Socialist, and 39 for Ernest J. Moore, Social Labor."

Lambda men who have called upon Brother Michener say that he is genuinely interested in the welfare and activities of the fraternity, and that anyone who thinks that the life of a Congressman is one of ease is most mightily mistaken.

OBSERVATION AND UNDERCLASS DEVELOPMENT

LOUIS W. DAWSON, F'19

How many freshmen tear the bandage of initiation from their eyes to learn that the 100% mark with which in pledge days they fancied they had passed in the eyes of their new brothers is in fact but a scant 60%! To say that our freshmen meet with perfect approval upon their induction is absurd; a large share of brothers are pledged with a clear discernment of their faults and shortcomings coupled with a belief in their ability to overcome them. Often it is but the germ of the good fraternity man that is recognized, and the development of that germ is the perennial question confronting the upperclassmen in every chapter house. Fraternal spirit is not sprung full grown from an initiation, and a fraternity pin is not evidence of a well-rounded college man. Neither can fraternity spirit be communicated in lump form by any amount of verbal rhetoric. It is rather a result of a slow process of absorption and inherent growth, an inheritance from the older members of the chapter. In this respect the freshmen follow in the footsteps of their brothers, and provided the spirit of the house is good when the new members are inducted, there is little fear that it will degenerate.

It is not in the broad transmission of such spirit that the problem presents itself to the upperclassmen but rather in the inculcation of the almost assumed requisites that are so necessary for harmonious fellowship. These are, for example, such things as neatness in appearance, poise of manner, matters of breeding and good fellowship. They are in no small degree the things by which the outside world judges the fraternity, and it is a recognition of this fact which induces the older members to advise the younger brother regarding them. Such things possess an element personal with each man, and in friendly criticism or suggestion much delicacy of method must be employed. In any direct teaching the personal element enters and advice which could contain much solid benefit is withheld because of the uncertainty of its reception. If given it may be forceless because of the personality of the giver or a misunderstanding of his motive. To urge a freshman to listen to what you have to say simply because you have been here for four years too often bespeaks conceit to the younger mind. Often it is a personality may be unintentionally overbearing. It is so difficult for the experience of four years to be conveyed.

Frequently kidding is resorted to in an endeavor to awaken an appreciation of the beneficiary's shortcomings. On some natures it is successful; it induces self analysis: in others it engenders nothing but bitter feelings. The danger is always that it is not held to its object, but becomes a source of amusement and a perpetual field in which the clever may exercise their wit. Nearly always there is some acknowledged humorist in the house and he resorts to this as sure ground to draw a laugh when original thought fails. As a result the object fails to see the truth of the remarks, and with the touch of bitterness brought by such a process is developed a stubbornness which is the opposite to the result desired. One man changed his university because he mistook the designedly instructive attitude for extensive dislike. On the other hand his close friend corrected his, in this case misinterpreted, faults, reacted and at first in self-defence and later in pure enjoyment became the most merciless and caustic kidder in the chapter. In other cases it has accomplished the intended result and acted as a mirror to faults. The result, however, is never certain, and unless carefully restrained by the President, kidding has very deleterious effects upon the harmony of the chapter. The dividing line between friendly, constructive banter and antagonistic sarcasm is much too apt to be obscure.

The proctor method is adopted in many houses, which results in one man being mentor to all the underclassmen; but too much advice from the same source supersaturates and he must limit himself to the most important fraternal matters.

Because of these difficulties many men are graduated without having obtained the greatest good from their fraternity; many others vainly wish that they could combine their present experience and their entering opportunities. There is at the present time no definite solution. A practical method was suggested in the June number of THE SIGNET, which would be of great assistance if expanded to cover this situation.

There is one element, however, which, if it could be sufficiently impressed upon freshmen would tremendously react to their benefit and that of their fraternity. The power of observation cannot be overestimated. In some it is a congenital trait; by others it is unconsciously acquired through environment; in a few its aid and power are consciously recognized and it is knowingly developed. It often marks the difference between the successful man and the failure; the well-groomed man and the lout; the gentleman and the boor. Observation means the habit of noting one's surroundings and the power of not only looking but seeing. It leads to comparisons, the distinguishing of differences, the results of such differences, and finally self-analysis. Armed with it and normal judgment no advice is needed, and the possessor will develop into the typical representative of his fraternity and college.

My theme lays stress on the apparently superficial side of college life, the ability to creditably represent a fraternity in dress or breeding. But it assumes that the freshman possesses the basic traits of a man, such as loyalty, honesty and the like. It is not in these things that the problem arises, as I have pointed out, so much as in the little points of consideration for another, conservative manner and conformity of clothing. Advice of conformity in clothing and conformity of any sort has been often attacked, but a free and uncontrolled mind is not denoted by fierce and unconventional clothing. An unpressed suit and uncut hair indicate a sloppy disposition rather than genius. Extreme clothing indicates undue vulgarity rather than untrammelled taste. The type of mind demanded nowadays is one that can conform to the accepted indications of refined breeding and retain its freedom for problems demanding unbound thought. Observation will show that this is the kind of man who leads.

Observe how others, accepted as normal, act, dress and obtain their popularity. Observe and conform in the little manners of life and jealously save the free and unconventional mind for the big actions. To so act will save embarrassment and later regret, and form a cornerstone for a successful fraternity career.

THE FIGHTING CHAPLAIN

Ray Freeman Jenney, © '17, now pastor of the Fifth Presbyterian Church and Neighborhood House of New York City, was known as The Fighting Chaplain by the lads in the Fifty-ninth Infantry. He went abroad as a casual officer, received his assignment, and reached the front just eighteen days after leaving New York. The troops were just about to enter the second battle of the Marne.

Brother Jenney took an active part in that battle, and later at the Vesle River and at St. Mihiel. After receiving two or three "scratches," as soldiers say, he was finally badly wounded by a flying shell and spent an unpleasant period in the army hospital, after which, the armistice having been signed, he was sent home on board the ship Siera and later discharged from the service. It is hard to trace nicknames to their source, but in the case of Brother Jenney there seems to be less than the usual difficulty. In the first place, he was always literally fighting for the welfare of his men, and they knew it. In the second place he wore the uniform of a private soldier, carried arms, and distinguished himself under fire on more than one occasion. Concerning his war experience he has written as follows:

"The war was a terrible page in my life history. My observation of the college men's spirit in it puts them into a class by themselves because of their spirit, initiative and personality. They were preëminently fitted for leaders or followers. It seems to me that Mazzini has rightly said 'that the morrow of victory is more perilous than its eve.' It is harder to win peace than to win war. The task before the fraternity men to-day is to make secure political and social liberties which men over there fought and died to save. We need to think a great deal about the Challenge of the Unfinished Task. We must try with all the means at our disposal to make justice, liberty and good will real. Those of us who have 'another chance,' should redeem the time for the sake of those who have given their all forever as well as for the sake of what we owe to those who shall come after us. In this day when there is so much insistence on rights there should also be an insistence on duties. What an opportunity for our fraternity men in this hour,—to help

'Give back the upward looking and the light,

JOHN ADAMS LOWE RESIGNS

John Adams Lowe has tendered his resignation as secretary to the Council, and no urging moved him to reconsider his decision. As field agent of the Massachusetts Library Commission he has been exceedingly busy for the past few years, but has still been able to carry the work of the secretaryship with faithfulness and exceptional ability. In resigning his position in Massachusetts to become assistant librarian in the Brooklyn city library, however, he feels that the time has come when he can no longer give to the fraternity the time which the secretaryship requires. The Council has appointed Frank Prentice Rand, North Amherst, Mass., acting secretary for the remainder of the term.

Brother Lowe is known in Williamstown as the Founder of Chi chapter and he has always been very closely identified with the interests of that group. He has been intimately associated with many other chapters however, being largely instrumental in introducing the Beta Theta Pi chapter into Williams, and personally offering cup prizes in some of the chapters of Phi Sigma Kappa. For four years he was editor of THE SIGNET and gave to it a literary quality which distinguished it throughout his editorship. Elected and reelected as secretary to the Council, he has been exceedingly conscientious and capable in the administration of that office. He has commanded respect and trust in many branches of his profession, and his appointment at Brooklyn is an indication of higher things ahead.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST VENEREAL DISEASE

The Public Health Service is continuing its emergency campaign against venereal disease into times of peace. It invites the college fraternities to adopt its plan of action as sent out to the various chapters from Washington, and to fill out the questionnaire enclosed with it. In case any of our chapters have failed to receive this literature, they can do so, by writing to the office of the Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service, Washington, D. C.

"OUR KIND"

THE EDITOR

In that fascinating if not always stimulating book, The Education of Henry Adams, the popularity of which, by the way, is a striking compliment to the American reading public, the writer half-bitterly deprecates the training which he received at Harvard in the fifties. Not only did the faculty fail to give him the cultural breadth and depth which he felt his due, but his comrades of the campus failed as well. And the explanation of the latter failure he found, upon reflection during the reminiscent and twilight years, in the fact that almost all of those young men were his social and intellectual twins. They shared with him not only all the inheritable traits of the Boston cult; they shared with him all the influences of its environment. They were all of the same piece of cloth. What one of them had seen or heard, they all had seen or heard. What one of them implicitly believed, they all implicitly believed. What one of them admired, they all admired. How then could any of them impart to another more than that small bit which he might indeed impart to himself?

Now, to a degree at least, this criticism still holds. We speak of the Harvard type, the Dartmouth type, the Williams type, the Virginia type. Whether this same habit of differentiation maintains among the great state universities of the West, I do not know, but there must certainly be a tendency in its direction. Of course it may be true that to a considerable measure this classification is the creature of fancy rather than of fact. Every college prides itself upon its own particular brand of democracy, and college men are a good deal alike the country over. Still, there is doubtless some basis for the practice, and if not, and the college types are really one type, perhaps it is so much the worse. The fact is fairly patent that when a youth matriculates in an American college, he enters upon a cloistered life among selected companions of his own ilk and to a large degree leaves behind him the stress and conflict of our many-colored, much-bepeopled and multifarious modern world. He is hardly likely to move in so narrow circles again.

And then, as if to accentuate the criticism which Mr. Adams made, we have the fraternities, all engaged in a carefully though frantically conducted winnowing process in search for "our kind." How often has a man been black-balled because in sooth he was not "our kind"! He is a fine fellow and a bright chap, too, certain to make a name for himself in the changing sands of undergraduate opinion. But he would not be comfortable with us, and we should not be comfortable with him. He does not fit in. He is different. He is uncharted. He is not "our kind." And so it is, particularly among the fraternities whose memorial ivies have covered the brick of their walls with symbolic and living green, that we have the Deke type, and the Sig type, and the Beta type. And we have also complicated rules to govern the pledging of freshmen in order to insure each lad's getting with his own particular type and each chapter's enrolling a delegation bone of its bone.

There is danger in inbreeding.

More than this, our policy tends to defeat the purpose of college training. If it is true, as so many undergraduates fervently insist, that the real and abiding values of college life are to be found not in the classroom so much as on the campus, not from the association with instructors so much as from that with one's mates; then indeed it would seem a calamity to limit that very important association to precisely that group of young men who can give one the least. Campus associations are narrow enough in themselves, without further restriction on the basis of common exclusive interests. And the only respect in which the restriction of fraternity membership is worse than that of mere cliques is that it is likely to be more binding and permanent; and the only respect in which it is better is that after all it is never quite so narrow and close.

If I were going through college again, I should certainly desire to belong to a fraternity; and I should very much prefer to belong to a young fraternity struggling for recognition. Such a chapter is spared all the devitalizing and sometimes embarrassing handicaps of "legacy" freshmen. It is spared the pride which cometh before a falling into lethargy. It is blessed with the scorn of the uncharitable and the knocks of a hard fortune. Not having a luxurious place of abode it must perforce make a commodity of character and ability, thus, unwillingly, perhaps, laying the emphasis just where it belongs. And in filling its delegations, it must take the men it can get, all sorts and all conditions, an occasional pampered darling, an occasional diamond in the rough; and from the somewhat unattractive, heterogeneous group which the "our kind" fraternities have passed by, it must select men, with such wisdom and insight as Heaven may grant it, not for what they have or what they wear or what their fathers did, but simply for what they are.

In such a group, held together by the strongest of all bonds, that of a common struggle, I should expect to find men as different from myself as the registrar himself might allow. I should expect to find men with patched trousers and men with fresh linen every day. I should expect to find Republicans, Democrats, Socialists; I might even be lucky enough to find a genuine bolshevik (though I should expect the fraternity and college to do something for him during his four formative years with them). I should expect to find men who could swear, and those who could not; men who would drink and those who would not. I should expect to find fussers and misogynists. I should expect to find devotees of Walter Camp and devotees of Henry James. In brief, I should expect to find a varied and lively company who would jog my mental processes at least once every twenty-four hours.

I would not seem to be casting reflections upon the men in the older fraternities. They might be as good as our best. And it is highly doubtful whether any fraternity ought to elect men who are vicious in temper and listless in aim. The point is simply that the men in the established chapters are too much alike, too essentially and sincerely "our kind." A chapter composed of one man, taken by random, from each of the other fraternities in a college ought to be a very good chapter indeed.

I realize that such a chapter might not be the most congenial imaginable, that it might not be the most comfortable on the campus. But adaptability should be a college product, and tolerant breadth of view, and an outreaching love for other men. And such a chapter would promote these traits. It would stimulate, as well as solace. It would provide a wholesome clash of tastes and opinions. It would have all the educational benefits of argument, in which the participant discovers not only what the other fellows but also what he himself is really thinking.

It would unite men on basic foundations rather than on a superficial common interest. It would test men, and try them, and train them. It would make them bigger in mind and bigger in heart.

Well, of course we cannot all be young struggling chapters, nor can any of us be such very long. And perhaps my eulogy of the state of blessedness enjoyed by such is a bit fantastic. Still there is a good deal to be said in criticism of an exclusiveness which tends to keep out every one different, every one not "our kind." If we really could exclude from our daily paths every one not "our kind," life would be too dull, too hopelessly dull, for endurance.

NEWS OF THE PRESIDENT

Dr. Conley took the western round last September in the interests of the Fraternity. He visited all of the chapters in the West, and incidentally happened along just in time in some instances to lend a hand in rushing. The lads out yonder say that he is certainly a popular president.

He also visited the Seattle and Chicago clubs and alumni in other places, picking up some highly interesting information regarding opportunities for expansion in the West. He found the men everywhere enthusiastic over the next convention, and promising to double the attendance of the one in Worcester.

Probably the most interesting report at the Interfraternity Conference, November 29, was that presented by Dr. Wieland for the Committee on Social Hygiene, of which Dr. Conley was a member. This committee was continued for further service. Phi Sigma Kappa was represented at the conference by Brothers Conley, Burrows, and Rand.

W. W. Galbraith, Σ '03, has become president of the Youngstown Pressed Steel Company, at Youngstown, Ohio.

Clark S. Bogart, M.D., H '14, is located in the Guardian Building, Cleveland.

George L. Winslow, Σ '12, went to France with the Rainbow Division and went through the various engagements without a scratch. Since his discharge he has returned to his old job as assistant supervisor of the Penn Railroad with headquarters at Philadelphia.

IN THE NAME OF OUR DEAD*

FRANK K. HOFFMAN, II '03

Thus have they died. And though saddened at the separation, our tears are for the living rather than for the dead. For the desolate fireside, bereft of its loved ones, for those who sorrow at their going, we may weep, but not for our heroic dead. While their sun went down in the early morning of their lives they still live for us and bid us think of life, not death, of life to which they lent the passion and the glory of the Spring. And we feel that somehow, in the great mystery, they must know their Alma Mater cherishes their memory.

When we think of the tragedy of it all we are not surprised that there are those who even wish to deny their German ancestry. When one beholds the German nation drunk with egotism and having the effrontery to insult the decent opinion of mankind by proclaiming the brutal doctrine of the biological necessity of war, and by proclaiming the cowardly doctrine that it is not only the right but the duty of the strong to overcome the weak, we are indeed appalled.

Well may the intellect itself of man but blush when German universities through eminent professors and led by Harnack himself attempt officially to justify the rape of Belgium. For where in all the world of learning has scholarship sunk so low?

Though foul deeds meet their commendation, they sometimes seek to justify themselves through what they term their virtuous inner feeling, which usually they say we do not understand.

In realizing our privileges and responsibilities arising from the war, and in perfecting any international engagements or League of Nations while maintaining a high purpose and a resolute courage, we must at all times exhibit the clear thinking that rests upon the solid foundation of sound judgment. We must see to it that nothing be done to place in jeopardy the institutions of government bequeathed to us and that every proper thing be done to aid and assist men and nations everywhere. This challenges at once the attention of our colleges and universities, and demands the wisest, the noblest and the best that is in us all.

No matter whether we approve or disapprove the conduct or the methods of any man or group of men, this great problem must rise above all personal considerations, and never must it in any way be tainted by the partisan motives of any political group. To prostitute it thus would be to offer insult to the very dead and the cause for which they died. And Senators must not mistake the silence of our people as an indication of their indifference. They will presently discover it is required of them that they approach this lofty problem and seek its solution in the light of our day, but only in the spirit of the fathers of the Republic.

To those leaving the college to-day I would but add they are going forth into a world with opportunities at every hand, and into a world mellowed by common sacrifice and suffering. No previous time has been so favorable within which to achieve material, moral or spiritual success. Few men succeed because they are naturally brilliant. Success is due usually to persistence, determination and healthy ambition. Any man can cultivate these qualities. Well has it been said, and I would have you remember this always, "The greatest of faults is to be conscious of none." Be true to the teaching you have received here and you will remain on the highway to attainments. May you be ever ready at the call of your Alma Mater and at the call of your country.

THE CHAPTER INVISIBLE

EDWARD B. SAUNDERS, XI '04

The Rev. Edward Butler Saunders died at his home in Lunenburg, Mass., on September 16, after an illness of several months from myxoma of the glands. Brother Saunders was born in Farmington, Conn., in 1877. He was a graduate of the academic and theological colleges of St. Lawrence University and later did special work at Clark. His first pastorate was at Potsdam, N. Y., and from this he went to the First Universalist Church of Fitchburg. He continued this work for nine years, but in 1913 he gave it up to become efficiency expert for the Simonds Manufacturing Plant of that city. He became assistant to the president of the company, also serving as employing, welfare, educational, and efficiency expert for the five plants and twelve branches in all parts of the country. He was also industrial expert of the international committee of the Y. M. C. A., and for two years secretary of the industrial betterment committee of the National Association of Manufacturers, and for a time was consulting expert for The Associated Industries of Massachusetts. He was always an active member of the local Y. M. C. A., was also a member of the school board, was executive secretary of the New England Safety Committee, was a member of Charles W. Moore Lodge, the Fay Club and Rotary Club, the City Club of Boston, the City Club of New York, and was a prominent public speaker. The Fitchburg Daily Sentinel refers to him as "one of Fitchburg's most prominent and beloved pastors," and "one of the leading men in the industrial circles of the country."

CLIFFORD B. THOMPSON, ALPHA '07

M. W. Thompson, A '09, refers to his brother's "sickness and recent death," presumably in Selama, Perak, where his location had been for some time.

EDWARD L. BULLARD, GAMMA '20

Brother Bullard's death has been already made public in the SIGNET, but the following details, not at that time available and since then sent in by his father, will doubtless be of interest to those who knew him. The facts were cabled to Senator Lodge by General Pershing. "The accident occurred in line of duty. It was a motor car accident on April 7, near Colombey-les-Belles. The car overturned, caused by the breaking of the rear axle. He lies now in the military cemetery between Colombey-les-Belles and Barisey-la-Cote, in the department of Meurthe-et-Moselle, not far south of Nancy and Toul."

FRED C. MYERS, BETA '10

Dr. Myers and Dr. Sweeney, whose name appears below, were killed in an automobile accident in Albany on July 30. They were driving in New Scotland Avenue when the car struck a rut in the street, swerved, and crashed into a tree near B Troop Armory. The third member of the party, Dr. J. J. Murphy, escaped with injuries. The bodies of both dead men were badly mutilated, and death was declared the result of cerebral hemorrhage.

The Knickerbocker Press writes that Dr. Myers "was one of Albany's leading surgeons, having been senior surgeon at St. Peter's Hospital for the last five years. His practice was one of the largest in Albany." He is survived by wife, parents, a brother and four sisters. He was a member of many associations and the flags of the county building and the Elks were lowered to half mast in his honor.

WILLIAM P. SWEENEY, BETA '15

Dr. Sweeney suffered death with Dr. Myers, as described in the notice above. He had just been discharged from the army after nearly three years' service under the American and British flags, and was on his way home to Saratoga, N. Y. He was an intimate friend of the Myers family and had stopped off in Albany for a call on his way home. He was a captain in the service. He is survived by a brother and two sisters.

THOMAS STAPLES MARTIN, PSI HON.

The death of Senator Thomas S. Martin of Virginia on November 12 removes from Washington a long-familiar figure and from the fraternity an eminent and honored brother. Seventy-two years of age, he was unable to carry the tremendous burdens of wartime legislation, and broke down several weeks ago. His death took place in "Dixie."

Senator Martin came from colonial stock, was born among the Blue Ridge Mountains, received his education in the Virginia Military Academy and the state university, and in 1869 was admitted to the bar. His political career began in the 80's and in 1895 he was elected to the United States Senate, after a bitter contest with General Fitzhugh Lee of the famous family of that name. He had been a member of that body ever since, being chairman of the powerful Committee on Appropriations during the war. Although a participant in many political quarrels he was never known to lose the suavity of manner for which he was famous.

Senator Swanson said of him, "He was the most sagacious legislator in the Senate. The enactment of a large part of the measures that enabled us and the Allies to win the war was due to his untiring efforts and able management as Democratic leader." President Wilson said of him, "I regarded him as one of my warmest friends and feel that Virginia and the country have sustained a real loss."

The New York Evening Sun paid him the following tribute: "With the death of Thomas S. Martin the Senate loses one of its oldest and most astute leaders. Despite his quiet and unobtrusive personality, his dislike of the spectacular, his inability to speak, Senator Martin was a power both in his native state and in Congress. This power he acquired through his ability as a party organizer, in which he was second to none, save perhaps to his fellow Virginian, Thomas Jefferson."

FRANCIS G. FAXON, THETA '20

Brother Faxon was killed two years ago, September 13, 1917, but no notice was received by or published in the SIGNET at that time. He was about to leave home the next day for camp and had been out with his step-father, Dr. James H. Shawe of Huntington, N. Y., to call upon some friends and say good-bye. On the way home the automobile in which they were riding turned turtle, and Brother Faxon was instantly killed.

LEWIS W. PRESCOTT, OMICRON '15

Brother Prescott was reported missing in action April 20, 1917, has never been heard from, and is believed to be dead. He was with the Royal Flying Corps.

LARS E. G. LARSON, OMICRON '21

Brother Larson died this summer in Sweden of infantile paralysis.

CARL KEMPER, ETA DEUTERON '16

Brother Kemper, a graduate of the College of Electrical Engineering at the University of Nevada, suffered death from drowning. The chapter has received no further details.

HAROLD N. WILLARD, ALPHA '16

Brother Willard died last winter in Salisbury, Conn., of influenza. His wife died the following week of the same disease. Their two baby boys are being taken care of by their grandfather, Daniel Willard of the B. & O. R. R.

BETWEEN OURSELVES

THE resignation of John Adams Lowe as secretary to the Council will be the cause for universal regret among the members of the Fraternity. The reason for his action is exactly as stated in the news item: the press and growing demands of his profession. For a considerable time he has felt that he could not give to the secretaryship the time which he felt its due, but his sudden change of field, professionally, precipitated the action. The members of the Council appreciate the seriousness of our loss more keenly than any others possibly can. The secretarial records and processes were in perfect shape when he turned them over.

But although we are losing Brother Lowe in an official sense, in a truer conception we shall never lose him. For after all, his great service to Phi Sigma Kappa has never been in the meticulous attention to records and correspondence nor even in the unerring wisdom of his judgment and loftiness of his fraternal ideals, but rather in that personal brotherly regard for every man who wears the pin. In every chapter of the Fraternity there are men who feel the personal friendship of the retiring secretary. His kindnesses, extended toward individuals and chapters alike, and usually the less conspicuous individuals and the less firmly established chapters, will never be generally known. But to him who did them, be he official or simply brother, the men of Phi Sigma Kappa in gratitude, devotion and loyalty will always turn. His signature on many a shingle is a priceless autograph to him whose initiation it attests. The Fraternity will never allow him to retire beyond call.

In a peculiar sense the SIGNET pays this feeble tribute, for it was Brother Lowe who gave it caste and standing among the fraternity journals of the country.

IN our opinion some of the chapters are initiating altogether too many freshmen. Twenty-six is the largest number reported, but there are others close behind. Of course there may be exigencies which call for drastic remedies or there may be rushing systems which do not readily allow the chapters to regulate their numbers. But the fact remains that a delegation of twenty-six, or sixteen for that matter, is in serious danger of losing the peculiar and subtle sense of brotherhood which gives to fraternity life its greatest charm. We have actually known instances in Phi Sigma Kappa of full-fledged members not knowing all of the other active men in the chapter by name. Whether the large delegation is due to the inability to resist a good man, or the desire to advertise the power of the chapter or the need of initiation fees, or something else, the result is equally in the long run unfortunate. One varsity brother is worth two varsity acquaintances any day. An abnormally large chapter may turn out as well as the best but it is working under handicap. Unwieldy delegations are to be discouraged.

THE directory, bad as it is, represents over 1,000 changes of address, the elimination of over 50 duplicates, and the addition of over 900 new names. And by the way, the temporary combination of editorship and secretaryship is in some ways a good thing. There are chapters which after five years still send their SIGNET letters to the secretary, and the editor has frequently received requests for information about a shingle.

WEST VIRGINIA BUYS HOME

Delta chapter has recently purchased the house in which it has been living since 1907. For some years the chapter has owned a house lot with the intention of building some day, but for various reasons the building has been constantly postponed and the men have been living in a very attractive rented house. Last year the chapter decided to abandon the project of building a new house and to purchase the house in which they were living. A sale was effected with Mr. Grant, the owner, who, by the way, later refused to take advantage of a technical but wholly legitimate right to turn the property over to another bidder who offered him $2,000 more than Delta had offered for the place. The chapter alumni have backed the deal most loyally, and it is in large measure due to them that the purchase has been possible. The new house is 100 by 200 feet in size and overlooks the campus.

 HOW DIRTY DOZEN BECAME PHI SIGMA KAPPA BOYS

This is the headline in The Globe which recently came to the attention of Dr. John Ashburton Cutter, than whom no more zealous Phi Sig exists. And when he went on to read that The Dirty Dozen were a gang of cop-baiting lads on the East Side, reclaimed by the Y. M. C. A. under a new name, he reacted just as you or I should have done,—only more so. The fact that the Greek letters in this instance stood for “fellowship, sportsmanship, character” did not convince him of the appropriateness of the title. The club adopted another name not long after.

GEORGE WASHINGTON WINS

FOUR CHAPTERS DEFAULT

George Washington was not only the first of the chapters to get its chapter letter to the editor, but it followed it up with powerful postscript a few days later. Altogether the letter contained some seven or eight nicely typewritten pages of news, a great majority of which was pertinent and acceptable. The other letters trailed in as indicated, about half of them following the editor's second appeal. The four chapters which have given no sign of life are presumably like Lazurus, "not dead, but sleeping."

MASSACHUSETTS AGGIE—5

Twenty-five brothers came back to Alpha this fall and twenty-two are safely stowed away in the house. With the addition of our fifteen pledges making a total of forty, the coming year looks to be a knock-out for Phi Sigma Kappa. November 22 we opened the social season with a house dance in conjunction with the Tufts game, and music was furnished by our own Frosh Orchestra.

UNION—24

Beta chapter has been very busy endeavoring to secure a house. The members have called upon the alumni for help, and the latter have responded wonderfully, giving much of their time and support to the project. Real estate is badly tied up in Albany, but there is every reason to expect an establishment soon.

The active chapter has an enrollment of twenty-four and the following men have been initiated (making a total of thirty-five): James C. D'Aprille, Harold W. Dargeon, John A. LaBate, Thomas R. McCool, John F. Connor, Anthony Devito, John A. Donohue, Raymond I. Gosselin, James H. Glavin, Francis Mulcare, and Mark Brinthaup.

CORNELL—no letter

WEST VIRGINIA—2

Delta starts the school year with twenty-five actives, including Bob Moore, affiliate from Sigma. Twelve men have been pledged. An account of our new house appears elsewhere in this SIGNET.

YALE—no letter

NEW YORK—17

Initiation was held November 2 and 3 in Brother Sweeney's bungalow on Long Island, the following men being admitted: Hefflinger, Melden, MacDonald, and Carruth. November 22 an alumni banquet was held at Hawthorne Hall, with President Conley the guest of honor. November 28 a Thanksgiving dance was held at Brother Stebin's home. Brother Smits has been elected to the faculty of the Physics Department of the college and has distinguished himself by uncovering certain novel experiments in connection with electric currents.

MARYLAND—no letter

COLUMBIA—12

Theta chapter faced the new year with great obstacles ahead of them. Because the loyalty of the brothers drew them all away from the campus during the war, it was necessary to rent the house. The lease had not yet expired this fall, so the few brothers that returned faced the task of building up the chapter without a house. Their time has been devoted therefore, not only to rushing, but in working for the return of their chapter house with the result that they are practically sure of a place by next fall. The chapter now numbers ten active men.

STEVENS—19

Twenty-four actives at Iota. Harold Burke Anderson of New York and Francis William Wilcox of Montclair, N. J. have been initiated. Dunn and Robe are the college cheer leaders. Nicoll is associate of The Link and Hart is assist-manager of The Stute.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE—16

At the recent Pennsylvania Day House Party many of Kappa's alumni were back. Among the number were Love, Milholland, Scloch, Deane, Culp, Bechtel, Linn and Neff. The occasion was the launching of a campaign for a new chapter house. A building site has been purchased and all indications are that within a year the house will have been begun.

GEORGE WASHINGTON—I

Ralph Nagle, '22, is a member of the Staff of The Hatchet, the George Washington newspaper. Doc. is carrying a column known as "Sayings of Stupid Steve" which is taking very well with the students.

R. W. Marvin, '23, has been accepted to play the part of villain in the next university play.

The following is a list of our initiates: Ralph Pressly Aten, Washington, D. C.; Howard Merle Brock, Toledo, Ohio; Waldo Appleton Clark, Washington, D. C.; Marcell Conway, Washington, D. #### PENNSYLVANIA—7

Mu chapter has forty-three active men back, eleven of whom will be graduated in the spring. It survived the war financially better than we anticipated, and is well on the road to the payment of our building loan on the new house. Our alumni, under the name The Mu Association, cannot be given too much credit for keeping the house going while the active men were in the service.

We held a Hallowe'en dance on the 31st: fifty couples, beautiful decorations, good chow and a premier collection of girls. We also held a tea and open house after the Pittsburgh game and a dance after the game with Cornell. The sophomores are scheduled to entertain the chapter at the Christmas Tree Celebration.

Some of our lovers of animals purchased a parrot recently, but are much disappointed in the bird because in spite of many earnest lessons it refuses to talk. If it ever does, we shall not dare to keep it.

LEHIGH—3

Nu opened the year with nine members and four have been added since. We have moved to 338 Wyandotte Street. The new house is much larger than the old one and can easily accommodate twenty-four men. We have initiated the following freshmen: Marvin T. Fagan, Weatherly; Franklin T. W. Lazarus, Bethlehem; Harrie L. Day, Ogdensburg, N. Y.; Henry K. Dierkoph, Washington; Henry J. Schrauff, Jersey City; Richard T. Settle, Drexel Hill; John H. Wright, Hazleton; Theodore O. Wohlsen, Lancaster; William K. Henry, Lancaster.

ST. LAWRENCE—13

Xi has thirty-two men in the chapter this fall. Among the number are several returned from service overseas: Joels, twice gassed and cited for bravery; Corcoran, still suffering from the effects of being gassed; Gaffney of the 6th Marines; Sullivan, eighteen months the chief pharmacist's mate on the Missouri.

Xi is particularly proud of Brother Kane who holds the college record in the hammer throw.

MASSACHUSETTS TECH—15

All told we have thirty-two men, as against twenty-three last year. The following have been initiated: Cyrus Day, Summit, N. J.; Edward Campbell Vernon, Portland; Hilary Sanford Swenson, New Bedford; Arthur Wesley Graves, Clinton.

FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL—no letter

ST. JOHN'S—22

Due to the expiration of the lease of their house, and the absolute impossibility of getting another in town, Sigma has been temporarily forced to rooms. It is expected, however, that a house will be available by the first of the year. There are twelve active men and seven pledges at present. There were seven Phi Sigs on the varsity football team, with four others on the squad and one acting as assistant manager. A number of the men were on the scholastic honor roll last term.

DARTMOUTH—11

During the sesqui-centennial celebration at Dartmouth Tau chapter entertained many of her alumni, among whom were the following: Sturtevant, Clark, two Holbrooks, two Huntresses, Baker, Bean, Streeter, Morse, Montgomery, Leighton, Kimball, French, Hall, Heald, Enwright, Butler, and Barstow.

BROWN—6

Upsilon started the year with eight members, six of whom came back from the army. Five new men have already been pledged, James R. Bland of Brooklyn and Harold E. Chapman of Providence having been initiated. We are planning to be in our own house next year.

SWARTHMORE—8

In accordance with a new interfraternity agreement no man is to be initiated into a fraternity until he has passed twelve credit hours of work. Seven men have been pledged and will be initiated after mid-year's.

WILLIAMS—14

On November 8 a banquet, attended by actives, alumni and delegates from other chapters, was held in honor of our initiates. Their names are: Raymond Anthony, Richard Lyon Brown, Herbert Bernard Greeff, Edward Rogers Monjo, Francis Batchelder Shepardson, John Albrecht Smidt, Clifton Heald Stowers, and Samuel Winthrop Webb.

Brother Winslow is editor of the class book, and Elliot the photographic editor of the Junior year book. Seaman is college singing leader.

CALIFORNIA—25

The Omegan for November, a very attractive chapter booklet, came in too late for extensive quotation. A feature of the number is the honor roll of 124 names under the title Omega Militant.

ILLINOIS—23

The Watchword from Alpha Deuteron announces ten pledges, contains an alumni directory, and sounds the first gun for the Phi Sigma Kappa campaign upon Chicago next fall.

MINNESOTA—20

Beta Deuteron has pledged fourteen freshmen, who, by the way, have organized a delegation football team with games scheduled with the 23 delegations of D. U. and Delta Tau Delt.

We might mention some of the activities that the brothers are connected with: The Minnesota Daily Staff and Board, the Foolscap, the Masquer Dramatic Club, the Wing and Bow, the Athletic Board of Control, the Track Team, the Swimming Team, the Rooters Club, the Spanish Club, the French Club, the Commerce Club, the University Band, the Engineering Society, Tau Shonks, Triangle, Tillikum, Adelpian, Sigma Delta Chi, honorary journalistic fraternity, Tau Beta Pi, honorary engineering fraternity, Grey Friars, honorary senior fraternity, Silver Spur, honorary junior fraternity, Phi Delta Phi, legal fraternity, Theta Tau, engineering fraternity, Alpha Kappa Kappa, medical fraternity, class offices and class control and council positions; all in all, a very comprehensive showing in our college life. Besides this, we are making a very good record scholastically, the ratings for last year have just been received from the registrar and out of the thirty-four Academic Fraternities on the campus we stand sixth from the top—not so bad, is it? This year we are going to boost our standing up a few notches more, and next year a little higher, till we get to the top and stay there.

IOWA—10

With small upper-class delegations, but with ten good pledges, Gamma Deuteron starts the new year in a new house at 815 Burnet Avenue. The chapter is bent upon buying or building a house of its own and a meeting of alumni was held November 15 at Ames to organize upon that proposition. Brother Bell, chairman of the social committee of the Cardinal Guild, is one of the busiest men in the college, having charge of all kinds of dances, McCormick concerts and the like.

The Epistola is striking the right note when it urges alumni who cannot return for various home gatherings to send a written message to be read, and thus to preserve the link between alumni and actives.

MICHIGAN—4

Delta Deuteron opened the year with thirty-five active members and have pledged five more. Subscriptions for the building of a new chapter house are being solicited in the form of promissory notes from both alumni and actives. Practically all of the latter have already subscribed. The chapter bowling team, holders of the university cup, have entered the annual tournament with confidence and enthusiasm. A dance on October 25 and an alumni home-coming in connection with the Minnesota game have been the social features of the season.

There follow some of the more important individual records: Forbes—vice-president of class, assistant manager of track, member Senior Board Athletic Control, and interscholastic manager; Dunn—class treasurer, president Delta Sigma Rho, debater, and high man of the chapter in scholarship; Sandford—debater and member of Daily board.

WORCESTER—9

Epsilon Deuteron opened with thirty-eight men back, twelve after war absence. The chapter basketball five has won the first three games played. A smoker September 19 with a faculty guest, a dance with music furnished by the Chapter Band, mind you, an initiation banquet with an overflow alumni party in New York mark the social life of the chapter. The chapter room has been renovated and enlarged for the convenience of the goat.

Chester Currier holds the college championship in tennis; Dudley, Brown, Huntington, Barrington, Bushnell and Robinson hold class offices; Stoughton and Bauder are captain and manager of the basketball team; Whitmore, Perry, Burleigh and Bauder are associated with musical clubs and dramatics.

Buell, '22, Orange; Howard A. Cragin, '23, Leominster.

WISCONSIN—18

Many of the graduates returned for home-coming week, the significant feature being the initiation of several old Kappa Phi Gamma men into Zeta Deuteron and the laying of plans for a new house for the chapter in the not-too-distant future. The following were initiated: Robert Noble McKirnan, '13, Oak Park, Ill.; Leland Allison Wells, '14, Depere, Wis.; Thomas DeColon Tiftt, '14, Whiting, Ind.; Eugene C. Herthal, '15, Milwaukee; Robert Edwin Hardell, '21, Washington; Otto August Eggebrecht, '21, Wausau, Wis.

Frost, '23, McGill; George A. Gooding, '23, Reno; Marshall R. Gregory, '23, Reno; John H. Harrison, '23, Reno; Frank H. Hartung, '23, Reno; Vivian A. Ninnis, '23, Reno; Miles N. Pike, '23, Reno; Oliver W. Layman, '16, Reno; Theodore H. Fairchild, '23, Reno.

The social calendar includes, to date, a rushing party, banquet given by the freshmen to the older members, and a formal ball. The chapter house is one of the liveliest spots on the campus.

Zeta alumni in New York City and vicinity have formed an Alumni Association to keep up old associations and assist the active chapter in every way possible. T. C. Miller, Secretary, 2414 Creston Avenue, Bronx, New York City, will be glad to hear from any Zeta men who have been out of touch with the old crowd for the past few years.

FOREWORD

WILLIAM P. BROOKS, FOUNDER.

In a brief 'foreword' which it was my privilege to contribute to the fall number of the SIGNET for 1917, I said: "Democracy, the realization of human brotherhood in personal as well as in national and international relations, these are the objects for which we fight." Self-examination is a most wholesome discipline and a good teacher. In the enthusiasm begotten of the great struggle in which we were then engaged—a struggle in which I am proud to know Phi Sigma Kappa men played a worthy part and in which, may we ever remember, a relatively large number made the supreme 'sacrifice'—we all felt capable of sacrifice. Have we worthily striven towards the ideals then cherished? Are we still so striving? Are not many among our citizenry, yes in our fraternity, allowing the narrower and the more selfish motives to cloud the skies in which our ideals star-like shone forth? Do we in our determination to realize the ambitions of self-interest forget that "In the gain or loss of one race, all the rest have equal claim"? Let Phi Sigma Kappa men remember that while first must be the ideal, equal in importance and more difficult than catching the vision is persistent struggle to attain it; but that only so will our ideals help our fraternity and through it the wide world in which we live.

THE CHAPTER LIBRARY

WILLIAM J. HAMILTON, BA '10.

Said a stalwart sergeant as he returned a volume to the American Library Association man in charge of one of the camp libraries, "I certainly did enjoy that book, it's the first one I've read in four years." "Well," said the Librarian, scenting a story of adventure, "where have you been these four years?" "Oh, I was a student at —— College."

We laugh at the yarn, and yet is it particularly humorous that a man through four critically formative years should have been so wrapped up in his own experiences, lessons, fun and student activities, that he had no time to learn from the experience of others as expressed in books and that during these years dedicated to obtaining a final equipment for life's work, he could neglect the medium of all later improvement and cultural advance?

Some there are who will say that it matters not if books outside of lessons are neglected for a few years, that reading can be resumed when the time of lesser stress comes. This may be theoretically true but actually it is not so at all. The man who reads only the newspaper headlines while in college, is not going to find time for more later on, and the man who does not form the habit—or continue it—of reading books and magazines while amid college influences, will not take the trouble to acquire it when his days are filled and his energies are occupied with more strenuous problems than those college presented.

The college man with his greater opportunities owes to his community more than merely an ability to put a greater quantity of money into circulation than his non-college friend. He owes a contribution of personality, of vision, and of culture—culture, the resultant blend of experience and imagination, of education, refinement, and spiritual development. Reading, thought, and travel, all have a part in developing the personality we desire. The last may be denied, but the first two go together and cannot be neglected.

It is a long time since Gibbon said that every man had two educations, one gained from others and one gained by himself, yet it is still true, and the college man is sadly short-sighted who in the pursuit of a formal education neglects for four years that other education which will continue for all time to enrich his life.

What are our fraternities doing to make of college the place of inspiration it should be, not merely a conglomeration of schedules as English 8, Chemistry 3, Economics 4, Government 1, and Military Drill? I shiver as I think of the bitterness of spirit shown by a successful young newspaperman in New York in discussing his college and his fraternity. I am distressed for what I did not do and say in my own time as a senior to develop among the underclassmen a realization of what college might be and of what the fraternity might mean.

"Hamilton," said my friend, "I came down to Blankville in 1902 full of aspirations, not sentiment and dreams, mind you, perhaps boyish and immature, but worth developing. I expected that in college I would expand mentally and spiritually as I had not been able to before. I had had advantages before, a home where books and music and friends all played their part. Now with a hundred other youths of similar ambitions and a group of professors who were interested in our development, what four years of college might mean to me! Well, I had a year and a half and I got out in time to save some of the ideals I had brought with me. I never got into a professor's home. I joined a good fraternity, but I found that conversation never got beyond girls and football and interfraternity squabbles. The only books in the place were text books; when I tried to play the piano, nothing but ragtime was permitted from a Freshman. The whole cultural atmosphere of the campus, so far as I could feel it, was way below that of my small home town, so I got out and went into newspaper work where at least you are associated with men and women who think."

Of course I assured him that "Minnesota" was not like his college, and that my fraternity chapter was different, and it was, but I remembered several things that made me uncomfortable. I remember one Freshman who sneaked away one Saturday evening to hear Gadski and the Symphony Orchestra because he thought the other fellows would laugh at him if they knew where he was going. I remembered the Freshman who had looked forward to belonging to a literary society—he had been a high school debater—but an older fraternity mate discouraged this because the Lits were largely Barbs: hence since the Varsity debaters were recruited almost entirely from the literary societies where thinking and self-expression were encouraged even among Freshmen, the Varsity and the Chapter lost star debating material while the lad's loss cannot be measured. And I remembered the brother who went over to the college library every night to study because he could not study at "the house."

Which brings me to my subject already too long ignored. Some of the things I have written, however, are indirectly related to the topic and I trust that the Brother Editor will not blue pencil too ruthlessly. I have visited twelve of our chapter houses in the ten years since I left college and in only two of them did the room labeled "The Library," seem in any way conducive to studying, or even reading.

Sometimes no such room existed and strict penalties were inflicted on the hapless youth who left a magazine or book to clutter up the living room table. Usually there was a library, dedicated to stacks of Cosmopolitans and Saturday Evening Posts, with closed book cases containing shelves of text books inherited from previous college generations, old note books, outlines and ponies, dilapidated copies of "Three Weeks" and Boccaccio, but with nothing at all to encourage reading, or a knowledge of any topic beyond what the cultural pages of the S. E. P. might afford.

Yet I think with pleasure of the happy evening I once spent with the brothers of Chi at Williamstown and of their cozy and attractive library where half a dozen readable, good books lay on the table along with late numbers of magazines whose selection showed discriminating taste on the part of the house committee, and whose reading—and they were read—would encourage similar tastes in the lads who used the room. Big easy chairs were there and a few of us chatted quietly about the books without disturbing the fellows who wanted to read in the other parts of the room. All the chapter did not care for books, for out at the piano in the living room were a crowd singing lustily, while upstairs another group was carrying on an animated "athletics" discussion; but what struck me was that here was a place where reading was not scoffed at but encouraged, where the bookish lad and the student were provided for as were the musically inclined and the athlete. Each followed his natural bent, each bent was recognized as having its place in the college scheme and the result was as hearty, as interesting, and as intelligent a crowd of young fellows as I have ever encountered. How much of it was Williams—like the jolly custom of singing at meal time, or the Berkshire tramps—and how much was due to a discriminating brother in early Chi, I cannot say, but how I wish more of our chapters had such libraries and used them.

Our fraternity will not have the place it should have as part of an educational system until we can turn out all-around men, and all sorts of men,—men of mind as well as men of business ability, as well as athletes and social successes. It is the utmost folly to scoff at the intellectual and the cultural side of college life and then expect to be able to draw to ourselves youths from homes where culture and intelligence are esteemed. We have largely recruited our ranks from lads who have had advantages above the average, and correspondingly more should be expected of us. Personally, I have hopes that a Phi Sigma Kappa man will show for his four years with us a broader intellect, a truer culture, not merely more polish than his non-fraternity classmate. The fraternity spirit which makes possible the right sort of a chapter library or study, and the atmosphere which will develop in such a study will go a long way towards encouraging a desire for the best things in college.

My ideal chapter library would contain no text books. Shelves in a closet upstairs would do to hold these legacies from departed classes, where the occasional student might rummage at need. Downstairs it is a case of their room being preferable to their company, for a library should above all things be attractive, and what is more depressing than a row of old text books that no one ever touches!

Of reference works I should have six: Webster's New International Dictionary, a Rand-McNally Atlas, a good encyclopedia, the World Almanac, and Fernald's English Synonyms. I should not have a language dictionary as I think that translating and mathematical problems should be, like Mark Twain's oranges, consumed privately.

For magazines, I should suggest five weeklies: The Independent, Life, Literary Digest, New Republic, and Saturday Evening

Post; also five monthlies: the American Review of Reviews, Atlantic, Century, Scribners, and World's Work. By all means the Alumni paper of the college should be included, and the SIGNET should be carefully filed and bound each year. There should be a library freshman responsible for the care of the magazines, who would see that only one number of each remained on the table, filing the previous copies in pamphlet boxes for the sake of the room's appearance.

Many are the suggestions which that latter clause might call forth. Purchased shelving, not home made; no wide shelves with their tendency to buckle in the middle; no shelves more than eight inches deep, no closed cases. Easy chairs and solid table, shaded lights and enough of them. There are other points but I am anxious to get on to the book collection.

The prime requisite for inclusion should be readableness. Five foot shelves of Harvard Classics, complete sets of Thackeray in half leather, One Thousand and One Nights in white vellum would drive any youth out of the room. Not that I object to Thackeray, but good editions of "Henry Esmond," "The Virginians" and "Vanity Fair" will stand much better chance of being read if they do not stand in the middle of a gloomy set of which "The Yellow Plush Papers" invariably strikes your eye first. Christopher Morley's "Shandygaff" with its wealth of chuckles would be left on the table for a week or so while it was new and then —— it would not stay on the shelf. Cabell's "Rivet in Grandfather's Neck"—who could resist the title! Maxwell's "If I were twenty-one"; Riesenberg's "Under Sail,"—with its beautiful pictures; Zane Grey or better Stewart Edward White, but not Harold Bell Wright; Ravage's "American in the Making"; Robert Service and Irvin Cobb and Harry Franck; Booth Tarkington's "Ramsey Milholland"; Drinkwater's "Lincoln"; O'Brien's "Best Short Stories of 1918" (with his praise of our own Addison Lewis); his 1919 volume, Lord Dunsany; Leonard Merrick's "Conrad in Search of his Youth"; Joseph Conrad's "Arrow of Gold" and his "Chance"; Hugh Walpole's "Fortitude" and his "Secret City"; Van Dyke's "Fisherman's Luck"; McFee's "Casuals of the Sea"; Hudson's "Far away and long ago"; Hergesheimer's "Java Head" and his "Three Black Pennys"; Webster's "American Family" and Poole's "The Harbor"; O. Henry in any form; Masefield's "Reynard the Fox" and Noyes' "Tales of the Mermaid Tavern." I could go on indefinitely but a mere book list has little value. How to get the books together, that is the question.

When I was a senior we had a music committee whose business it was to know the new music and get it for the house. An assessment of ten cents a month was levied on each lad and the resulting two dollars kept us well supplied. Five times that amount, one hundred dollars a year, will be needed to keep up a library at all adequately, for the magazines alone will require a third of the sum.

This amount should be handled by a library committee of two or three, appointed because they are interested in the problem and want to serve the chapter in this way. They will receive suggestions galore, consider them, balance requests, and needs against cash available and then act. Theirs will be the responsibility for keeping in touch with the browsing corner of the college library, the new book shelves of the local public library, and the book review section of the magazines. They will find it jolly good fun too, and they will not find a college or public librarian who will not be glad to make a monthly list of suggestions, glad to check "The Booklist" with their problem and their purse in mind. The committee too must see that the study is used for reading and not as a debating forum or a card room, otherwise the readers will slip away and the books and magazines will be scattered from Dan to Beersheba.

Try this plan for a year, and it will bring results. I am confident that a new spirit of respect for the intellectual and spiritual phases of education will develop, and we shall have a finer, keener set of men, no less red-blooded but with clearer brains, deepened vision and truer culture.

PROGRESS IN FAVOR OF THE FRATERNITY

ARNOLD C. OTTO, A '11.

Progress means undergoing a change, which may come through a general change of conditions, or may be an integral part of society reforming itself, gathering new life and strength. Fraternities have been doing things a little differently from the way they used to be done. Within the memory of the more recent graduate some things have been accomplished in the college world for the good of the college that must be accredited to the part taken by the Greek letter societies. The fraternities themselves have made progress within themselves, in their favor, without force of law or regulation from trustees or faculties, that assures them of growth, healthy influences, usefulness and permanency for years to come.

College debating societies gave rise to Greek letter organizations. Debating is a time-honored university activity, now and then on the decline, yet enjoying a flourishing period in every school, but long since has lost its original identification with fraternities. That in itself is nothing against the fraternity nor against debating, nor does it necessarily mean that fraternity men no longer engage in debating; on the contrary they very frequently are the honor debaters of the school. However, schools, colleges, universities and general and higher education have had so much stimulus and have been extended with such leaps and bounds in the last generation that an accompanying remodeling of student life and organizations due to larger numbers was inevitable. As time went on gradual growth demanded changes in student activities on and around the campus and debating became centered in societies having a Greek word for a name while the demand and opportunity for closer school day friendships and student social life crystallized into clubs having a name composed of Greek letters.

Fraternities underwent a period when their spirit in moulding friendships and furthering social activities for generally the more well-to-do was found to be detrimental to learning and the young student in his desire for an education became distracted by overnumerous activities which ran contra to progress in the class room, with the result that fraternities acquired a reputation for having all the deficient students. Neglecting to use proper vision and largely through its own fault the fraternity became charged more or less truthfully that its membership was picked for reasons of social standing, wealth, prospects in athletics or popularity on the campus, and that it was the deathblow to democratic college life.

Nevertheless, in face of all the attacks and criticisms that have been made, as we look about college men busy in the world, we find that the schools count among their strongest alumni largely those who were fraternity men. None know better than the regents and faculties that fraternity men generally are the strongest source of support for the school for new students, endowment campaigns, being on hand for a championship contest, commencement time or home-coming day, and that with them true and enlivened college spirit never dies. Local chapters keep in touch with their alumni. Part of the heart of a member of a fraternity is in his chapter; he has contributed to that chapter, helped to build it up; it brings him back to the old school, keeps him in touch with his alma mater, gives him an open meeting place and a home when he comes back and on account of the dearness to him of the associations when he was a boy he has his sons follow in the same place when they reach their college careers, and he is willing to do something for that school. Next he has an interest in every other chapter of that fraternity. A home of his fraternity at whatever school, is always ready to welcome him, and provides a common meeting ground to extend his acquaintances among other schools, which arouses a touch of interest in every institution where the fraternity is located.

The old order of things of which fraternities were accused has disappeared. The change is frequently a matter of comment among the older alumni. It is not stating the case too strongly that fraternities as constituted to-day are the moving spirit in the higher educational institutions and are the storehouses of the greatest enthusiasm and form the backbone of the best life in the school. They have been converted into an organization of the best and highest type of the student body, stimulating incentives for superiority in all that can be gained from the halls of learning, and leading the way for genuine school spirit.

The Greek letter societies have become very well interjoined and their plan of organization to assist their schools can be little improved. Chapters assemble in national conventions and national officers are maintained. Representatives of all fraternities assemble annually to discuss matters of their welfare and that of the schools where they are located. This inter-association has aided to unite on matters of policy and common interest. There is a growing movement to maintain club houses in the larger cities as assemblages for college men from all over the country, where as in all chapter houses college spirit is ever kept alive. In the various schools inter-fraternity associations have been formed which wield a powerful influence in school affairs and are the nucleus of a valuable organization always available to be called upon to further the school's interest.

The inter-association of fraternities, in the schools and nationally, has among other things mapped out to a large degree standards for rushing, initiating and housing upperclassmen. The local Panhellenic boards have developed rivalry in all school activities, literary, athletic, scholastic and forensic, and have thereby afforded an opportunity during the entire school year for friendly competition and closer acquaintanceship in the student body at large.

Standards for membership in fraternities in the present day are on a higher plane. Likelihood of a candidate does not depend so much on his position out of school but rather on promissings shown in school. No stronger evidence of the fact that the best manhood of the universities is collected in fraternities and that they are sponsors of the highest ideals of respect, devotion, duty and loyalty, which after all are the best virtues to be gained from an education, can be found, than the enlistment and service records of their members in the late war.

When a matter arises concerning the school it is now also a matter of importance for fraternities. School affairs are brought up in the lodges, nearby or visiting alumni are consulted on the more important matters, and after receiving attention and discussion around the common table where the members meet with brotherly kindness without fear to freely express themselves, the force that moves from the fraternity comes informed, united and prepared to do. When a student mass meeting is called, or a drive is on to enforce a new rule, back a team to victory, or to 'put across' whatever it may be, fraternities have their men on hand in full numbers ready to co-operate to the fullest extent. Boards of self-government for the student body, now established in most schools, are strongly supported and upheld by the fraternity organizations. Faculty members know the manifold power and usefulness of the fraternity and that its work reaches every aspect of student life, and were they to decide whether the fraternity is 'to be or not to be' the vote would be uniformly favorable to a long and uninterrupted existence in its present form.

Fraternities have undertaken to deal with the vital problems of education. Scholastic ability has been made a first requisite for membership, and good standing in the chapter demands demonstrations in the classroom and examinations. Records are kept in the chapter of each member's progress in school work, high standings are encouraged by comparisons and the brother who leads the chapter is regarded the winner of a worthy attainment. The brother who has difficulty in keeping up in his work is given assistance. Many chapters offer a cup to the member doing the best year's work. Sometimes cups are given for mastery in a particular subject, and the local Panhellenic association adds its incentive by putting up a prize for the fraternity leading in the year's school work, or the national council may present a prize to the leader of scholastic honors in its chapter roll. Many and varied scholarships for students within and without the fraternity are maintained. Attention to studies has been a topic for discussion at chapter meetings, fraternity conventions and inter-fraternity conferences locally and nationally to such an extent, and so much encouragement has been given recently to attainments in scholarship, that the fraternity's aim for literary excellence, for which it was founded, has been revived and exceeds all achievements in the days when Greek letters stood for debating alone.

House rules are enforced helpful to regular study periods and social affairs are now arranged for only holiday and vacation time and on 'nights off' from school work. Boisterousness in the fraternity house has long been stopped by action from within. The chapter is maintained conducive to healthy habits and an active student life. Long before the advent of prohibition, fraternities through their own initiative did away with spirituous refreshments at smokers, banquets and other gatherings. The series of social events which have always had a prominent place in fraternities, have not only made it easier to form friendships but provide occasions for acquiring proper etiquette, which is never covered in a course of classroom study, yet experience after graduation many times proves is more essential to success in life than drills in scientific or mathematical formulae. Proper address, ease of conversation and ability to make and retain friendships are cultivated in fraternity membership and through friendly criticism and a free interchange of brotherly advice attention is given to corrections in habit, proper appearance and conduct, which are not to be overlooked in a complete education. Many a 'fresh man' has been taken into a fraternity and turned out a 'gentle man,' while the student living largely alone without guiding influences of close associates and their heart to heart chats many times loses in a college education the making of personality. The statement, "There is something good to be gotten out of a 'bunch' of fellows living in the 'fraternity house' that cannot be gotten any other way," made to me by a college classmate several years ago, has been remembered by me as expressing a lot of truth.

Fraternities are sometimes incorrectly known as secret societies and objection made to their secret work. The secret work is not injurious to a student. It takes on a very simple form having two objects, to add impressiveness to the initiation ceremony and to provide means of identification to the same order. Ordeals coupled with initiation involving risk have been voluntarily abandoned and candidates now are subjected to forms of treatment more to provide merriment and place them in ridiculous positions to test their disposition, but entirely harmless.

All fraternities have enjoyed tremendous growth in chapters and members. With the end of the war came an increased stimulus for college education and all schools have exceeded their prior enrollments, and there has been no lack of men from which to pick. The field for new fraternities or an extension of chapters has never been better. Recently national organizations have materially added to their chapter rolls, many locals having become nationals, so that few good locals remain. Realizing the greater benefits from association in a larger field, extension into the smaller colleges has been welcomed. An increase of fraternities should be promoted in colleges and universities wherever possible, but as far as high schools are concerned should be forbidden. The fraternity is the club of college days, it has its place like a business man's club, but has no place in intermediate schools.

The college fraternity has helped solve the housing problem, which from the influx of after war students has assumed considerable seriousness. This assistance to the university has never before been so well appreciated. During the war fraternity houses were turned over to the school and converted into training barracks or used for other students while the regular dormitories were given over to military work. The writer for several years has been inclined to start a movement to have fraternity houses classed under the law as tax exempt property along with other property used purely for educational purposes without pecuniary profit, and is contemplating the introduction of such legislation in his own state. Fraternities are part of the university, supplant its needs, are conducted without profit, nearly always indebted for their property and the item of taxes adds largely to the chapter's expenses, which cost does not enter into dormitories maintained by the school. Wherever there are dormitories they are usually inadequate to accommodate all students. The fraternity lodge stands in no different relation in this respect than does a private school, fraternal order, lodge, Chautauqua ground, Turner society or similar organization whose property is generally not subject to taxation. Fraternities have become a welcome addition to nearly all institutions of higher learning. Where students are all housed under the control of the school, they are many times permitted to exist in rooms set apart and furnished by the institution. While this is not regarded as the best condition under which a chapter can exist, it is done by the school to give a chance for forming closer ties of friendship under a common union which it is not possible to do in communion of large numbers.

Fraternities do not object to be under faculty regulations. The difficulty in the past has come from the form in which regulation was undertaken. When both parties have been awake to their common interest and necessity for co-operation in handling their mutual problems, there has been no friction, and the spirit on both sides has worked for greater good.

During the past few years there has been little manifestation in state legislatures for the abolition of the fraternity. A few states have put down the bars, but not states which are leaders in education and centers of large universities. Such movements have been on foot in several other states but usually have come from those who did not understand the fraternity and its position and relation to a higher school. After the agitators heard the reasons for the existence of fraternities and became better acquainted with fraternity life, the matter was abandoned and seldom has come up again in the same place. This anti-agitation has materially died down and in states where it was successful we can look for a reaction and a repeal of this legislation.

The fraternity must continue to have a full conception of and keep on with new adaptations for the large work it can accomplish, and be always ready and willing to do its share in holding up high ideals and maintaining proper surroundings and activities in the large part it can play in educational work. In that way it will perform its true mission, and having done its task well it need never fear its perpetuity.

YOUNGSTROM—ALL AMERICAN GUARD

WILLIAM A. CARTER, T

Adolph Frederic Youngstrom of Waltham, Massachusetts, never known as anything but "Swede" since he first climbed the hills of Hanover to enter Dartmouth, is a representative member of New England's star products of the 1919 football season. Swede may rightfully feel at home in the Hall of Fame for did not Walter Camp say that no man ever deserved All-American honors more than he!

Swede's football career has been a varied one. His dad was opposed to Adolph's playing while the latter was a kid in high school until his last year, then the Swede went to it in spite of parental objections and made good, incidentally proving to his father that he could well take care of himself on the gridiron. But when Swede went to Dartmouth he was out of luck his Freshman year due to ineligibility, and when his Sophomore year came around he found himself competing against "Fat" Spears. It wasn't until 1916 that Swede got his chance to show what he was made of. With Husky Merrell out for the season due to injuries, Coach "Cav" Cavanaugh sent Youngstrom into the Princeton game. Swede's playing in that memorable game can be summed up by this statement made in the Boston Herald, "That game made Youngstrom. Literally he was in on every play—on the bottom of every pile. With his left thumb badly dislocated and a badly smashed face he played the best game of any man in either line. His white head was bobbing out of every scrimmage. He played the rest of the year and very creditably, too."

The 1918 season found Swede playing for the Newport Naval Reserves in the backfield. He developed into a clever backfield man and an excellent punter. This backfield work helped him a lot this last fall for it made him speedier and taught him to side step. The ability to do this was responsible in a large measure for his frequent blocking of punts. Football statistics will show that Swede has set a record for blocking punts in one season. He started in the Cornell game in New York and blocked two kicks sent up by the speedy Shiverick of Cornell, then the Colgate game came and in the last few minutes of play the scrappy Swede broke loose again, blocked a kick, recovered it, and raced for a touchdown. Penn used her entire backfield on the defense to stop Adolph but he refused to be stopped and he blocked one of Bell's spirals.

Swede's football career ended at Dartmouth with the blowing of the final whistle in the Brown game. In that game he played with a badly wrenched knee frozen in ether and regardless of pain he went through the whole game fighting all the time. His desperate attempts to win that game with long forward passes—one of which, had the receiving Dartmouth end held on to it—would have won the game for the Big Green and would have strengthened their hold on the football championship,—will long be remembered.

Not only is Brother Youngstrom a football man but he is also a good track man and at the present time he is throwing the weights for Harry Hillman.

Swede is constantly working for Phi Sig in every possible way. He has been a big factor in rushing Freshmen not only through his football ability but also through his pleasing personality. Tau chapter is going to lose one of its biggest men this June when Swede gets his sheepskin from Dartmouth.

CORPORAL HURLBUTT'S RECORD.

John Browning Hurlbutt, T '20, has a stirring record of war service. He was overseas nearly two years, saw action at Champagne, Rheims, Aisne, Marne, Argonne, Ypres and in the army of occupation. He was cited in the orders of the 134th French Division by General Petit, in the orders of the 91st American Division by Major General Johnston, in the orders of the 26th French Division by General Mangin and awarded the Croix de Guerre with bronze star, in the orders of the 26th Division by General Petain and awarded the Croix de Guerre with silver star, was extended the diploma of felicitations from the French Ministry of War, and was awarded the American Field Service Medal.

COURTESY AND POLICY

DAN R. COLLINS, ΓΔ '17.

"I'm thoroughly disgusted with the bunch and I doubt if I ever recommend a man to them again," said an alumnus to me recently. "Ever since I left college," he continued, "I've been on the lookout for men who would be a credit to Phi Sigma Kappa and when I found such a man going to a school in which a chapter of the fraternity was located, I wrote the chapter about him. Mind you, I've not asked them to take him in. I've merely told the bunch about him and asked them to look him over. Now, I've been out of college for quite a number of years and I've recommended men to eight chapters that I can recall at the present moment—and yet I've never received a word of acknowledgment from any of them.

"If a man I've recommended is pledged I never hear of it unless he drops into the office and announces that he is now a brother and thanks me for my interest in his welfare.

"I think I'm cured now and in the future I propose to keep my recommendations to myself."

Since talking with this man I have had the opportunity of meeting Phi Sig alumni from several different chapters. To each I have put the question, "When you recommend a man to your chapter does the chapter ever acknowledge your recommendation?" And, sad as it may seem I have in every instance received the same answer. "Why, no, they don't. I think something should be done about it."

And there it always stands—"something should be done about it." That is usually as far as it goes. No one wishes to shoulder the responsibility of getting something done. It is not for the alumni to do this "something." It is the work of the individual chapters. Every chapter has a Rushing Committee, but how many of these committees have a man appointed to care for the correspondence connected with rushing?

Every spring a rushing campaign is laid out for the fall semester. Cards are sent out to alumni asking the names of men who are prospective timber for Phi Sigma Kappa. This is all well and good and is an excellent scheme and often results in obtaining many names which would otherwise not be available. The fault lies in the fact that these cards are not properly followed up.

An advertising campaign is never successfully carried to its culmination or results in everlasting benefit if run only until there is a demand for the commodity advertised. It is the continuation of the advertising that keeps orders coming in.

So with a rushing campaign. If an alumnus responds with the name of a prospect, write him immediately and thank him—and enclose cards so that he may give the names of more prospects. He will then realize that the chapter is alive and appreciative of his efforts and exert himself to do other favors.

But the correspondence should not be stopped at this point. The alumnus should be kept informed as to the progress in rushing the man he recommended. If he is extended an invitation to pledge and accepts, the alumni should be advised of the acceptance and it is suggested that he write and congratulate his "brother-to-be." Should the chapter decide it unwise to extend an invitation to a man recommended to it, the alumnus should be informed of the chapter's reasoning in the matter. Perhaps he may be able to clear up overhanging clouds of doubt that will result in the man's being taken in later. At any rate he will not feel offended, for he has not asked that the man be taken in, he has merely suggested him as a prospect. And he will feel a great deal better than if he hears nothing about the matter.

Often I have heard the wail from my own chapter that the alumni were not recommending promising men coming from their own towns, and that some other fraternity was "getting them." Sober reflection after a short time out of college leads me to realize that the men who were the chief mourners could blame only themselves for being able to mourn. They had grossly neglected keeping alumni who had recommended men to them informed of their decisions on these men. The alumni, noting that the chapter was not interested, lost interest themselves.

It is the duty of every alumnus of Phi Sigma Kappa to recommend to the active chapters men who they feel will build up the chapter strength. But, this will never be done unless the chapters themselves see that such recommendations are properly acknowledged and do their utmost to further the interest the alumni show in the welfare of the chapters.

S. O. S.

THE EDITOR.

The Council is soon to publish a history of Phi Sigma Kappa. A widespread and persistent demand is the cause. The approach of our fiftieth anniversary is the occasion. The Editor of the SIGNET has been delegated to put this book into shape for the printer. You have been delegated to make the necessary material available for him. He is planning to do as much of his job as is possible this coming summer. That means that you must do most of your job this spring. This editorial is simply a very frank discussion of the possibilities and needs of such a book, and its appeal for co-operation applies to every Phi Sigma Kappa man in the world.

Now we are all set. Let's go!

We want this history to be a real one, not a poor makeshift in an attempt at record, but a well-knit, virile, readable narrative of the spread of the spirit of this Fraternity from a little mean room at Massachusetts Aggie even to the farthest corners of the world. We had a letter from the Orient yesterday, asking about the possibilities of a Japan Club of Phi Sigma Kappa. Our history should be the glowing explanation of that letter. It should be the kind of book that every alumnus will read from cover to cover with genuine enjoyment, the kind of book that every novitiate will hereafter study as a text during the days of his pledge-ship, the kind of book the college libraries where we have chapters will be glad to own for reference, the kind of book that you would like to have lying on your library table. It need not be a large book, but it ought to be accurate and interesting.

Now let us consider some of the things which we want to have in it. In the first place there should be a detailed and vivid account of the founding and early life of the Fraternity. The calibre and idealism of our pioneers were truly magnificent, and the record of their achievement should be as complete as possible. Thanks to the conscientious work of Dr. John Ashburton Cutter, we now have in our files a report, written by some brother on the scene, for each of the first fifteen years of the life of what is now Alpha chapter with the exception of the years ending in 1874 and 1875. This is an excellent beginning, but we want more. For the most part this is the skeleton of those eventful years; we should like to restore also much of the living tissue. We should like to get hold of more of those little incidents which seemed to contemporaries too trivial for record, but which would tell to us so much of the real spirit and significance of those days. There must have been more yarns about the three T's, the relation between the new organization and faculty and college, the formal literary programs and informal disputes within the society, and the like, than have found their way into the readable and dignified reports in our files. And you will note that for two of the most interesting years of all, we have no record. Of course we have Dr. Brooks and Dr. Root for reference, and no doubt Dr. Cutter can furnish more material by way of reminiscence, but we want every Phi Sigma Kappa man who knows any little gist, to send it in at once.

Then there is the period of nationalization. We have very little information about that. If we are to produce a chapter dealing with that important period in our history, Alpha and Beta men must contribute generously. There must be a good many men throughout the country who recall the incidents connected with the union with Beta. Dr. Cutter cannot be expected to remember all of them. Concerning many of them he very likely never knew. What can you contribute?

There must be interesting data about the SIGNET back in the days prior to the New Series. Dr. Howe of Cleveland was the first editor. That period seems to be almost completely shrouded in mystery. Have you any of those old document SIGNETS packed away in your attic? If so, send them in. Did you ever contribute an article, or were you ever an editor of any kind? If so, tell us about it. What do you know about the old fraternity rings and other insignia? Jot down the odds and ends of such details that come to your mind and send them along. What are the facts that you remember from your study of the American Revolution? Dates of battles; sizes of armies; financial policies and expedients; sequence of events? Or "Don't fire until you see the whites of their eyes?" Molly Stark? The Hessians' Christmas dinner? Washington in prayer? We need the first type of information assuredly, but we also need the second; and it is the second which you people must supply.

Then there comes up the matter of the chapters. Obviously we do not want to devote a score of pages narrating the detailed history of each of our thirty-odd chapters. There would be too much repetition in that. What we do want is this: a very complete account of the epochal periods in the life of each chapter. Such periods would be those of pre-Phi Sigma Kappa career, admission to Phi Sigma Kappa, times of great stress and crisis, the purchase of a new home, the high-water mark delegation, and the like. Remember this. History demands the downs as well as the ups of a people. It is natural to suppress the facts of the downs and run riot with the facts of the ups. It would be a fatal blow at our history if the chapters, out of false pride, should hold back everything except the eulogy of the typical chapter letter to the SIGNET. There is not a chapter but that has had its downs such as they were, and everybody knows it. You will be no more than fair to yourselves as well as to the rest of us by giving to your Editor the whole story. You may depend upon him to handle all material with his utmost sympathy and tact. Now if this information from the chapters is to be forthcoming in accurate and interesting form, there must be appointed authorized chapter historians, very likely one for each period to be recorded. The Secretary of the chapter should review his minute-books from the beginning, consult with such alumni as are readily available, and then with the President of the chapter, make out a list of the events which seem to warrant inclusion, appoint as many historians as are necessary, notify them of their appointment, and send a copy of the list immediately to the Editor. Remember that your historians must be the kind of men who have the ability and patience to get the facts of the case onto paper, and if they are men with some authorial knack and creative power, so much the better. This is highly important and must be done at once. Chapter secretaries, attention.

Then there is the matter of national conventions. They have meant a great deal to us as a Fraternity and will be given considerable space. Of course we have the legislative records of them, and in two or three of the later ones, a complete stenographic report of what actually transpired on the floor of the assembly. But here again, we lack the undertow and the eddies which skirted the stream. Politics at convention have not always been wholly to our credit, but we may make record of some of them with impunity and they should make excellent reading. Stirring addresses, exchanges of wit, jokes of the lobby, personal impressions—all these things are invaluable. Every individual who has ever attended a convention has something which he ought to contribute.

Personalities! We intend to give such enduring expression as we may to the big men in our Fraternity. I do not mean by "big men" those who have achieved prominence in their professional life, although there would of course be some mention made of them; but rather the men who have given much of themselves to our Fraternity. You know the kind: Clay, Hague, Barrett, Root, Brooks, Cutter, McIntyre, Conley, Vogel, Howe, Lowe. These are some of them, but there are others too. What do you know about such men? What did any of them ever say that you have remembered? Have you any letters from any of them which reveal character? What has any one of them ever done for your chapter or for you, a little thing in itself perhaps, but fraternal in nature? We are absolutely dependent upon you people for such information. And by the way, it is wholly possible that you know of some man who in his quiet way has done a vast service for his chapter, but of whom we know nothing at all. It would be a calamity if such a man were overlooked in a history like this. If you know of such a man, write to us about him. Let us look him up together.

There will be illustrations of course. The pictures of such men as the above will appear, and pictures of chapter houses bought or built, and others. We have a few of the others on hand, but what can you contribute? It may be that you have a snapshot which would be of tremendous interest to posterity.

In some such way we shall bring the record up-to-date. And it has seemed to us fitting that this book should contain our military record in the Great War. This is a highly laborious attempt and the Editor will have to pass the buck to the chapters themselves. He does not feel that he can accept the responsibility for perfect accuracy in this detailed record. Nor does the Council feel like incurring the expense of correspondence with five thousand members, even were that method likely to produce reliable and complete information. The chapter president should appoint a committee of one to work over the records already in, verifying and completing, and reporting directly to the Editor. We want the following information about every man in the service: full name, class, unit and rank at time of discharge, awards of distinction. This is, of course, exceedingly important.

New ideas will doubtless come to us as the work progresses. Perhaps you can think of something which might be worth including. If so, send it in. We shall be grateful for all suggestions.

And now this final word. The Editor has two summers to prepare this material. It must be in the hands of the printers by June, 1922, if the book is to be available for the convention that winter, the nearest to March 15, 1923. One summer will certainly be needed to tie up loose ends and put the material into final form. Therefore the bulk of the actual writing, collating, planning, corresponding, interviewing must be done this year. Moreover it is desirable to pitch in and clean up as rapidly as possible. We are hoping for a genuine response from you this spring. Whether you be chapter officer, simply chapter member, or alumnus, there is something for you to do. We are counting upon you. Do not fail us.

THE COOTIES—AN APPRECIATION

WILLIAM T. CUDDY, HA '23.

Unlike many authors I never chose a subject to lay before the public that I am not well versed in. This is not a request for applause, far from it, it is merely the statement of a fact. During my years of travel in foreign lands I have made a special study of the "cootie," in fact I was seldom without one, and my manuscript is therefore much more valuable to science than the writings of many of my contemporaries who write on this topic merely from second hand observation and not from experience.

If you examine the definition of a "cootie" as given in the revised encyclopedias of the day, you will find that it is summarized as follows: "a pernicious insect, having eight double-jointed legs, a pair of antennae containing five segments each, maxillae with remarkable penetrating power and the metathorax and mesothorax joined in one shell or crust of great strength." If your thirst for scientific data is not slacked by the above definition, read further in any recognized "History of the Great War" and find that "this carnivorous animal was first noticed during the Cambrai campaign, by the Canadian troops engaged therein. Rumor has it that this pest was let loose by a noted German Kulturist in retaliation for the losses received by the Kaiser's men in the first battles of this sector. After the first invasion however the 'cooties' turned traitors, one and all, for none of them returned to their native lairs but, attaching themselves to the Allied Arms, remained with them for the duration of the War."

My first experience in a personal line with the little fellows was in the Argonne. It was my second night in the trenches that I discovered that I had company. I fear that I was not as hospitable as a host should be. I was inclined to turn my guests away but they, imbued with an obstinate disposition, refused to go. I was feeling rather depressed that evening, brooding over the way the Army had treated the Marines, and myself in particular; I had been in France for two months and was rated only a Sergeant although I must confess with all due modesty, that I had been recommended for a General—Court Martial. I removed my helmet and after a series of manipulations, that only a Jew who had lost his all could possibly imitate, had a few minutes rest. Soon the enemy was upon me again. I hurriedly removed my coat and—but to get back to my treatise.

Upon my departure from the Argonne I carried a few specimens with me. They did not require much attention and having been away from home before were not at all timid.

While at Bordeaux, France, I devoted much time each day to the study of this insect. I had to. I will now set down the results of my hours of study and research along this particular phase of insect life.

I found the cootie to be a domestic animal and that he thrives best in captivity. For so tiny an animal, he has a remarkable instinct. For instance, when I first began my study I could lay hands on a pair at will but as soon as they found that I was searching for them at regular intervals the cunning little things would run off and hide and I would be forced to use my glass to aid me in my search and capture. The female deposits from thirty to fifty eggs at a setting and if luck is with her, has a good-sized brood in from three to five days. The young are very well-behaved and although I have watched them carefully have never noticed them playing pranks on their elders as the young of more highly developed organisms are fond of doing. They are very docile and are easily lulled to sleep. It is a sight that moves one to tears to watch a mother cootie putting her numerous brood to bed. The cootie does not move straight ahead when in motion but like the hermit crab and other crustaceans travels at an oblique angle. It is indeed a pretty sight to watch a family "on the march," the homing instinct ever uppermost in their minds. The average life of a cootie is from three to four weeks but with proper nourishment and the right environment he will often survive for a period of two months. He is a past master in the art of camouflage. This is necessary for his very existence for the hand of all mankind is against him. He is a pariah on the face of the earth and must keep constantly on the alert to avoid capture and execution. He has been a great factor in this last war and has received "Honorable Mention" in the leading periodicals of the different nations engaged therein.

During the long nights of trench-life we invented a game wherein the cootie played a prominent part. A blank sheet of paper was obtained, two lines were drawn in the middle about an inch apart, the cootie was placed in the exact center and bets were placed as to which line he would cross first. A strange insect was always secured from another dug-out when the betting was high so that no partiality would be shown.

The cootie was both a detriment and an aid to civilization and there is much more to be written concerning this weird insect but my time is limited and whenever I write at length about this gentle companion of my past, my heart is filled with sorrow for "the Last of the Mohicans" that I left behind in the delousing plant at Brest, France.

MAJOR CALDWELL, MAYOR OF SEATTLE.

Brother Hugh M. Caldwell, A '03, was elected mayor of the city of Seattle on March 4 by a majority of 16,861 votes, the largest majority ever given to a candidate for mayor in that city. His opponent was James Duncan, secretary of the Seattle Central Labor Council, and a leader in a general strike a year ago. Brother Caldwell saw war service as a major in the United States Army.

The following editorial appeared in the New York Sun:

Seattle in Washington State, where a general strike was attempted last year, has elected Major Hugh M. Caldwell its Mayor. He will fill the office Ole Hanson made famous. He is a fit man to take up the work Hanson laid down. He is American to the backbone, and his backbone is not made of gelatine.

Against Major Caldwell ran the secretary of the Seattle Central Labor Council. His name is James Duncan. Duncan says he was not responsible for the general strike. Nevertheless, just as a 100 per cent. American smashed the general strike, so another 100 per cent. American has now smashed Duncan's political pretensions.

The fight in the Seattle election was in the open. Major Caldwell made his campaign on the issue of Americanism. Duncan opposed him. The electors of Seattle had a straight issue before them. They did not vote in the fog.

The people of Seattle recognized the importance of the decision they had to make. They went to the polls in unprecedented numbers. There were 84,899 votes cast—cast in a city that for years has been a field of intensive anarchist propaganda, a hotbed of skilfully promoted disorder, a rallying place for the venturesome, the discontented, the daring, the restless and the near criminals and criminals who follow in their train. And with all these conditions in his favor, with all these elements to support him, Duncan, secretary of the city's Central Labor Council, could poll only 34,059 votes, while Caldwell, militant opponent of every wild belief and theory from Bolshevik anarchy to Wilson internationalism which has been fed to the population of Seattle, polled 50,840 votes.

Thus, on the Pacific coast, in a town circumstances had apparently made most sympathetic to their cause, a town perhaps more sympathetic to it than any other town in the country, the issue of Americanism was carried to the ballot box and its foes were beaten; beaten worse than anybody had any right to believe they could be beaten; beaten by an electorate they had found unusual opportunity to debauch and deceive; beaten as they were beaten on the Atlantic coast when Massachusetts voted in November for law and order and against a union ridden police; beaten as they will always be beaten when honest Americanism gets the chance to meet the issue of revolution, of syndicalism, of class rule, of labor union despotism, and to register its decision for free institutions and free men.

BETWEEN OURSELVES

WE think that we have been moderately modest regarding the SIGNET, but it seems only fair to our readers and particularly to our contributors, to print the following compliment which appeared in a recent Tomahawk of Alpha Sigma Phi. Mr. Musgrave, above whose initials the excerpt appeared, is an eminent and dignified editor of long standing, and his praise is a reason for genuine gratification.

"The SIGNET of Phi Sigma Kappa is the best and finest specimen of a fraternity magazine that comes to our desk. Brief, juicy, sparkling, and yet satisfying. It is the epitome of what reaches its editors and great care and judgment are exercised in its production. Not a chapter letter, and yet we believe it furnishes its members with all that they want to know. We believe it represents the highest form of fraternity spirit that issues from the printing press to-day. The rest of us fear we cannot spend enough money and make sufficient showing to justify our existence, and so we hold on to basic forms to such an extent that the covers of many of our fraternity magazines might be exchanged without even our own fraternity being the wiser. The SIGNET has solved the problem of furnishing its readers something to read that is worth their while. The rest of us furnish plenty of printer's ink but the dross outweighs the gold."

WELCOME to Epsilon Echoes, a very attractive little chapter publication emanating from Sachem Hall. Every chapter should publish at least one such paper a year for the benefit of its alumni and the other chapters. The details of the chapter's life are of little interest to the great majority of Phi Sigs, and the SIGNET cannot adequately handle them anyway. There is a real place for the chapter magazine.

BY the way, did you ever notice how the undergraduate correspondent always refers to the lad just out as having "accepted" such and such a position? It is a sweet dear old delusion, but most of us are glad to beg for almost anything we can get.

WANTED: new officers in some of the chapters! Some of the present incumbents are not on the job. We do not want to go into details in this public way, but the evidence is all to be found in connection with SIGNET letters, chapter quarterly reports, certificate receipts. There seems to have been adequate excuse for delinquencies in the matter of presidents' and treasurers' reports to the Council, concerning which you will hear from the Grand Secretary in due season, but all other irregularities are unpardonable and not to be tolerated. If the officers of your particular chapter are not responsible, elect some who are.

Incidentally it might be well to call to the attention of those concerned that no man is officially a member of this Fraternity and subject to the amenities of such membership until his tax is paid in to the Grand Treasurer and his name added to the official roll. Furthermore no chapter whose accounts with the Grand Chapter are delinquent is subject to representation in the biennial convention. The Grand Secretary will be glad to help any chapter check up its accounts with the Grand Chapter at any time. But no chapter can afford to play fast and loose with this fundamental obligation.

And just one thing more. The reports of election of officers must be on the blanks provided for purposes of filing.

THE Editor attempted to publish a symposium of the chapter practices in connection with social intercourse between fraternities and faculty, but in view of the fact that only ten chapter secretaries paid any attention to our request for information, and only four of them had anything definite to say, the plan has fallen through. Several of the secretaries wrote that the men do meet the faculty at teas, dances and smokers on the campus, but these are not fraternity affairs. Two chapters invite faculty members to the house for Sunday dinner, and two invite them in to take part in fraternity seminar. The following excerpt from the Tau letter is really to the point:

"Nearly every Sunday evening of the second semester, some one of the faculty is invited to the house to speak upon any topic he desires and to meet the fellows in a social way. Refreshments are served and everything possible is done to get the faculty guest acquainted with all the men of the chapter."

IN the death of Brother Samuel C. Thompson, Alpha '72, and member of the Supreme Court for many years, the Fraternity loses a brother of high integrity, gentle personality and perfect loyalty. His eulogy may well be left to those who knew him best, but on behalf of the SIGNER we wish to register this added word of appreciation. He was a true man, and brother.

THE CHAPTER INVISIBLE

SAMUEL C. THOMPSON, A 72, Court

The death of Brother Samuel Clarence Thompson, Alpha '72, on Sunday, February 29, at his home in New York City, takes from us one of our most loyal brothers. The news of his death came as a sudden shock to his friends in the Fraternity. The funeral was held at the Holy Rood Church, and Phi Sigma Kappa was represented by Brothers Conley and Lowe.

Brother Thompson was born in Roxbury, Mass., April 4, 1851, and after his graduation from the Massachusetts Agricultural College in 1872, became a civil engineer, holding among other responsible positions that of engineer of highways, Borough of the Bronx, New York City. He was a capable man, highly respected in his profession.

Although not a founder of Phi Sigma Kappa, nor in fact an undergraduate member of the old Pi chapter, he affiliated as a graduate member early in the life of the Fraternity, and ever since has been in the real sense of the word an "active" member. His attendance at functions and conventions has been regular and enthusiastic, and after serving on the Council as vice-president, he became a member of the Court, and continued to be one up to the time of his death. On the Court he served both as recorder and chancellor, and his judgment was much relied on by his associates.

In commenting on the fifteenth convention of the Fraternity Brother Thompson wrote:

"The writer was more than ever convinced that it is a safe proposition to trust to fair-minded, unprejudiced conclusions of the younger men where the best interests of the Fraternity are concerned."

And this sentence gives a real cue to his character. For he was always interested in the younger men, as his very activity as alumnus testifies, and he always had faith in them, as those of us who have been so long in touch with him well know. The death of his son, Lewis C. Thompson, Zeta '00, only a year or so ago, was a blow from which he had never recovered.

We have lost a worthy man from a worthy college. He was graduated in the pioneer class which had left college the year before my entrance, so that I never knew him personally as a student; but I heard a great deal of him through college traditions and met him shortly after I was graduated. I knew him more intimately afterward, as he became interested in the work of the chapter and was very early one of the national officers. He was one of the quiet, sterling, robust characters whom we all like to meet, and when we had parted, I always felt that I had met a Man. He was quite firm in his convictions, but always arrived at them after careful thought. No snap judgment for him! He had a most kindly, lovable nature and was a man who improved with acquaintance.

He was indeed a valuable member of the Supreme Court, whose meetings he always attended, and with the exception of the late Brother Barrett probably had a longer service in that body than any one else. He had imbibed the real spirit of the college and of the fraternity of which it is a part. We shall miss his able counsel and his true instinct for brotherhood.

J. E. R., A '76.

DR. FREDERIC ALLEN WILLIAMS, B '91.

Dr. Frederic A. Williams, medical adviser of the New York State Industrial Commission, was fatally injured in an automobile accident at Atlantic City, April 26, and died in the city hospital on May 1. He was born in 1870 in Greenfield, N. Y., completed his course at the Albany Medical College before he was twenty-one years old, practiced medicine in Florida, Poughkeepsie (member of the H. R. S. H.) and Boston, attended Boston University from which he received the degrees of A.B. and LL.B., became a member of the Massachusetts bar, and finally upon civil service examination became the medical adviser of the state insurance fund of the New York State Industrial Commission. He is survived by a widow and two children. The following is from an appreciation by the commission of which he was a member:

"During the period of his service with the State Industrial Commission, Dr. Williams won for himself in an unusual degree the respect and affection of his associates. His sterling qualities of character and personality, his high ideals of professional service, his faithful discharge of the exacting duties of his position, his kindly and unselfish nature, his unfailing courtesy and chivalry, and his genuine nobility of heart endeared him to all who had the privilege to know him. The recollection of his unflagging devotion to his work and his constant helpfulness to others will remain an enduring memory."

DR. A. C. BAXTER, B '96.

Dr. Baxter died in the Oswego Hospital on November 30, following an operation for gall stones. He was born in Parish, N. Y. and received his medical training at the Albany College. For several years he practiced medicine at Scriba Corners, N. Y., but recently he married Miss Frances R. Young and removed to Oswego. He had been associated with various organizations and bore a very good reputation both as a physician and as a citizen.

DR. NATHANIEL GILDERSLEEVE, M '00.

Dr. Gildersleeve is reported as having died in November, but further details have not come in.

ROBERT JOHNSON, Ξ '15.

Brother Johnson died at his home in Gouverneur, New York on August 3, 1919. The Xi Breeze speaks of him as a loyal brother "against whom it would be hard to find an instance of failure to carry on the Phi Sigma Kappa standard high and undefiled."

GEORGE H. RICHARDS, A '21.

Brother Richards died in Springfield on January 13 from septic poisoning. His college course had been interrupted by the war, during which he was in the balloon service. He had returned to Massachusetts Aggie to complete his college work. There he was interested in campus activities and treasurer of his chapter. The college weekly wrote of him, editorially:

"The loss of so splendid a character is keenly felt by the entire student body. He had a winning personality, and his ready wit and ever present humor made him a delightful companion. The earnestness with which he attacked every problem, his good judgment, his warm heart won him the respect and confidence of all with whom he came in contact. He was a valuable man both to the college and to the class. Words cannot adequately express our sorrow."

LIEUT. CUSHING WITH TODD AT EQUATOR.

Lieut. W. H. Cushing, M '20, the first man to be graduated from the famous du Pont Aviation School, has recently returned from what proved to be an exciting expedition with Prof. David Todd of Amherst College to the Equator. The purpose of the expedition was to observe the sun's eclipse from a hydroairplane. Hard luck dogged the party from the start, the sailors attributing it all to some coincident 13's in connection with the voyage. Engine trouble prevented the ship's reaching the objective in time for the eclipse, a tremendous storm demolished the hydro-airplane when a flight was finally attempted, the crew all but mutinied, actually throwing food supplies overboard to coerce the captain back to land. The Boston Herald of November 24 contained a picture of Lieut. Cushing and a very interesting account of the expedition.

COLUMBIA'S LETTER FIRST AT THE TAPE BUT NEVADA'S ONLY FOURTH

While California's letter was racing across the country to place fifteenth in our quarterly handicap race, and Nevada's and Illinois' settling most creditably into fourth and fifth places, Massachusetts Aggies', starting only one mile from the finish, in spite of two written and three oral communications, appeared too late for inclusion. Other delinquent chapters are Swarthmore, Penn State, Minnesota and Michigan. Interesting gists follow.

MASSACHUSETTS AGGIE—24

Too late for inclusion.

UNION—19

When college opened in September Beta was homeless, almost penniless, a sad victim of the world war. Now she has a home, the furnishing of which will be completed in the near future, thanks to a financial drive conducted among the alumni by an alumni committee and to benefit smokers and dances held by the chapter. We have thirty-eight active members, including the presidents of the senior class in both medical college and law school and the high scholarship man in the latter.

CORNELL—21

Gamma has taken in fifteen freshmen. Brother T. F. O'Neill, affiliated from Beta, has lost no time in jumping into the front rank on the hill. He has been elected to the Savage and Musical Clubs, orchestra, and Masque, as violin soloist for all. It goes without saying that he is the best violinist on the hill. Brother Knight will stroke the crew this year for the last time.

WEST VIRGINIA—10

Nothing of interest for this department.

YALE—Epsilon Echoes

Our active chapter numbers thirty-nine men, of whom twenty-eight are living at the house. The chapter held a dance and an informal tea dance in connection with the Princeton game, with an attendance of fifty couples, two hundred guests, and fifty graduates. Watch for Soderston and Mehaffey in the boat races this spring.

COLLEGE OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK—14

Zeta reports that every man in the chapter is going out for spring football, and that nine social functions have been definitely scheduled for the rest of the year. Fritz Carruth is leader of the glee club and MacBryan "has wings on Kreisler when it comes to the violin."

MARYLAND—20

Gilbert Morgan writes that Eta has been slow in getting back to a pre-war basis, due largely to the fact that it has been unable to secure a house or even an apartment for headquarters. However the men have been meeting with him occasionally, some new men are being pledged, and conditions will doubtless be much better by the end of the year.

COLUMBIA—I

The members of Theta have been busy soliciting contributions for their house fund that they may buy back the lease of the present tenant and occupy their old house again next fall. The half-way mark has been nearly reached, and with forthcoming contributions success is imminent. The Chapter gave a dance in the Plaza Hotel, December 16.

STEVENS—13

Iota has twenty-six actives and two pledges. Nicoll is out for track again and will bear watching. Contant is president of the dramatic club. Hart is business manager of the weekly paper. Ellis is the basketball star of the past season.

PENN STATE—23

GEORGE WASHINGTON—22

Lambda has thirty-three actives and seven goats. Ballinger, Whyte, Nagle, and Birch are all on the editorial staff of The Cherry Tree, the university annual, and the first of these is editor-in-chief. The chapter has appointed a committee of alumni and actives to investigate the matter of a new chapter house, something larger and farther downtown than the present one. In a recent pageant given by the Navy League, Nagle, Peterson, Wheeler and Whyte were General Washington's color guard, and report that the Continental uniform is hardly a good business suit for soldiers on campaign. The annual New Year's at home brought approximately four hundred guests to the house.

PENNSYLVANIA—18

Just at present Mu is in the midst of a very active rushing season, Feb. 9 until Mar. 7. Marshall is on the Mask and Wig, and Miner is associate editor of the Pennsylvanian.

LEHIGH—3

This is a memorable year for Nu in that all of the brothers were able to stay in college. The chapter holds six of a possible fifteen places in the varsity show: Redline, Lazarus, Dimming, Settle, Maddox, and Day.

ST. LAWRENCE—Xi Breeze

At present there is much interest in the new house project. The House Building Committee is handling the whole affair and bonds have been sold among the members to within a few thousand dollars of the necessary amount to warrant breaking ground. The site is surrounded on three sides by college property, and the proposed building will provide for dining hall as well as dormitory.

BOSTON TECH.—16

Omicron has thirty-one men in the chapter, six being affiliates from as many other chapters. We have adopted the policy of sending delegates to the New England initiation banquets and hope in this way to broaden the chapter's interests.

FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL—6

Pi's bowling team is now leading in the inter-fraternity league. We are securing memorial tablets to be erected in honor of brothers Zeelers and Sykes, both of whom were killed in action, and are planning an unveiling ceremony to be attended by many alumni.

ST. JOHN'S—11

The chapter house has been changed to 21 Maryland Avenue, and nine brothers are living therein. Sigma has sixteen actives and seven pledges.

DARTMOUTH—8

Brother Schulting has been regular guard on the basketball team, serving for a while as acting captain. Irv Hutchins is business manager of The Dartmouth and Frank Hutchins is editor of The Green Book.

UPSILON—9

This past semester we have had the appearance perhaps of a bunch of grinds. But we who have been away for a year or more feel that since we are primarily here to get an education, that is the thing we should strive for most. We have been handicapped by absence from studies so long, that now we are back we have to give most of our time to them. But our Freshmen are getting into things. They are starting on an equal footing with all their classmates and are making good. From this time on Phi Sigma Kappa is growing at Brown.

SWARTHMORE—no letter

WILLIAMS—7

Nothing of interest for this department.

CALIFORNIA—15

Omega expects to excel in track this spring, with Mohn and Goerlitz throwing the discus, Frellson the hammer, and Skaale in the pole vault. Dobbins and Otterson are editors of The Californian and Wakefield of The Blue and Gold, the annual.

ILLINOIS—5

Nothing of interest for this department.

IOWA STATE—17

Nothing of interest for this department.

WORCESTER TECH.—2

Sholz is leading man in the Tech. show, Officer 666. Others connected with the presentment of the play are DeVoe, Burleigh, Stevenson, Montague and Perry.

WISCONSIN—12

Smith is on the varsity track team and Dohr is a mainstay on the hockey seven. We are out to win the interfraternity baseball championship.

NEVADA—4

We were unfortunate this last semester in being unable to secure a satisfactory chapter house and have consequently been hampered in our social life. The most important university offices held by members are Carlson's presidency of the American Association of Engineers and Harrison's presidency of his class.

ATTENTION FANS!

The baseball season is almost under way. The crack of the bat is again heard in the land. The paths of glory lead toward first base. Umpires are again taking out their summer life insurance at special rates. The Boston Post will presently announce a marked increase in sales. Let the Senate talk. Who cares? The world has something to live for once again.

In order that you may follow the nines of our Phi Sig colleges with more intelligence and interest, we are publishing the names of those brothers who are expected to appear this spring. Pin the list up on the wall beside your sister's Christmas calendar, and send in your selection for our All-Phi Sig aggregation on June 1st.

The New York Times of March 1 contained a long story by Charles H. Grasty, explaining the attitude of Daniel Willard, president of the B. & O. Railroad, toward the impending railroad bill. The following excerpt will be of general interest:

At all times throughout the contest two railroad Presidents, both from Baltimore, worked for the bill. Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore and Ohio, and S. Davies Warfield, President of the Seaboard Air Line, have been in the thick of the fight at Washington, and their efforts have been concentrated upon the very provision which many of their associates in railroad management matters most strongly opposed, the provision fixing a standard of earnings and the surrender of one-half of the excess over six per cent.

Mr. Willard has been an earnest student of the railroad problem, and his views concerning railroad regulations and labor problems have been recognized as liberal and progressive, and no one can speak with a fuller understanding of the new policy embodied in the recent legislation than he.

FOREWORD.

HUDSON MCKEE, A '23

I am Phi Sigma Kappa.

My personnel may change with the passing years, but my aims and purposes remain unchanged.

I am for men, red-blooded manly men: men who can see God in the crashing breaker or in the delicate petals of the fairest flower, men whose eyes flash with enthusiasm, and men who are as true as steel.

It matters not what life-work may claim my men. Some may fathom the depths of science and strive to unfold its mysteries. Some may be builders who fashion structures of wood, steel or stone. Some may be community leaders, whose kindly deeds will remain a monument long after they have passed into Eternity. Some may play a part in the daily routine of office, or shop, or field. It matters not with whom they rub shoulders in the day's work, if only through their fellows they catch the vision of a nobler life.

I am Phi Sigma Kappa.

My aims are as lofty as the mountain peaks, and my ideals as pure as the snow that covers their summits.

My field of activity knows no bounds nor limits. My period of service is not marked on the dial of time. My opportunities are legion. On the street, in the fraternity or home, at office or shop or store, I find my sphere.

Time with its ceaseless swing will bring changes, and the faces I know to-day in the full flower of their youth will all too soon become stern, careworn and old.

On life's far-flung battle lines my men are taking their places. Those battle lines may stretch to foreign shores, and on the fields of the Orient some may fill their ranks.

The battles will not all be easily won; in the heat of the struggle there may be no friendly face. Shadows may fall where once the sunlight played. I only hope that when the days grow dark and hope seems gone, the memory of me may stir the hearts of my men and turn the battle-tide.

For I am Phi Sigma Kappa.

In the movement for a better manhood I play my part, and strive to play it well.

God grant that every day my men will play life's game hard and play it fair, and that in the stress and strain they will keep the faith!

To walk in the way of Honor; to exalt the fundamental virtues of the race; and, prizing every noble impulse, to realize so deeply the baseness of deceit, that no obligation will be more binding than our plighted word. To be steadfast in the performance of every trust, and, spurning the gaudy gifts of greed and power, to be content to live by our knightly vow that our honor is dearer to us than our lives; and so to esteem the man's character first, his culture second, his pedigree not at all, unless he be worthy of it. Emulating the chivalrous deeds of courtesy, and sealing not our hearts against the touch of tenderness, to win the love and care of some incorruptible woman. And so to be loyal to the Knighthood of Honor.

FINANCIAL DELINQUENTS IN THE CHAPTER.

LEWIS R. FERGUSON, M '05

A few financial delinquents in a chapter are likely to form a sore spot which will fester and affect the entire body. A chapter's financial condition is usually a good measure of its health. A chapter whose members are promptly meeting their financial obligations is apt to be healthy and vigorous. Where the members are lax in their payments to the chapter it is a pretty sure sign of general backsliding.

Naturally our Council is intensely interested in the financial standing of the individual members for they know how indicative this is of the general condition of the chapter. Very properly should the Council watch with the greatest care the details of the chapter finances. It is well that the approval of the Council has to be secured before any unusual financial obligation is undertaken by a chapter such as the building or purchase of a house. The mature judgment of the Council members is most valuable in analyzing schemes for financing these undertakings and through their ripe experience pitfalls which cause trouble and failure may be avoided. Just as a fine flourishing chapter, owning its own house, adds prestige to our Fraternity, so one which either can not or will not pay its debts casts a reflection on our order.

The advantage of the training a man gets while in a college fraternity has often been referred to and cannot be over-emphasized. One of the most valuable sides of this training is that of running the business of the chapter. In the business world financial obligations must be met promptly if a man is to succeed. He must exercise judgment in assuming these obligations and he is measured by the correctness of this judgment. This is the basis of his credit, one of the most valuable assets a business man has and one he is very jealous of. So, too, should the fraternity man while in college learn to value his financial standing, learn to meet his obligations promptly and learn to assume no obligation he cannot meet when due. Such a training is invaluable.

So far, however, we have been enlarging upon the beauties of a financially sound chapter but we haven't said much about how to prevent delinquents.

The one best way to prevent Financial Delinquents in the Chapter is not to have any delinquents. That sounds like a rather ridiculous statement, but it is exactly what we mean and it isn't ridiculous either.

It is difficult to collect back debts to the chapter from members after they have left college. It exerts a bad influence on the active members to hear their treasurer read in his report at each meeting among the "accounts receivable" a list of old members who left without squaring their accounts. Such accounts should be closed on the active chapter books and turned over to the graduate organization of the chapter to handle as it deems best.

Chapter members of a fraternity who become delinquent may be generally divided into two classes—first, those who have sufficient money and do not pay, and second, those who have very limited funds and are unable to meet their financial obligations. The first class is much larger than the second. The man with limited funds usually counts carefully the costs before he undertakes anything and when he feels he can afford to spend the money he apportions his resources accordingly.

When the "Rushing Season" is on there is frequently strenuous competition to pledge new men and usually the freshmen who attract most attention and are most sought after are those who have a pleasing appearance and immediately force themselves to the front. Too often the more retiring man is overlooked and good fraternity prospects are passed by. The excellent members of our chapters who have come in from the upper classes are evidence of this. In selecting new members the chapter should look below the surface, and judgment should be based on the lasting qualities of the man under consideration. Before any man is pledged he should understand thoroughly exactly what the financial obligations are that he will assume if he becomes a member of the chapter and the idea should be impressed upon him that he will be expected to meet these obligations fully and promptly. It is far better to lose a man, even though he is a "mighty good fellow," than to have both him and the chapter discover too late that neither fully understood all the conditions that existed. Fairness to the prospective members and fairness to the chapter demand that each enter their new relationship knowing all the conditions this relationship entails. Have the prospective member understand that all those in the chapter pay their dues promptly and they expect this practice to continue.

The treasurer of the chapter exerts a great influence either for good or evil on the members. He is largely responsible for the chapter's financial condition and he can be most instrumental in preventing delinquents. If the fellows have confidence in him and they know he is constantly exercising a careful supervision over the money entrusted to his care, they will be apt to back him up strongly by meeting their individual obligations promptly. The treasurer must see to it that no member is allowed to become a financial delinquent. He must be firm, tactful and persistent. He must make the erring brother see that he isn't doing the square thing to allow the rest of the members to carry the part of the burden he should bear in addition to their own share.

The trouble with financial delinquents in the chapter usually begins by slight lapses. A member is pressed for money about the time his fraternity dues should be paid and he lets them slide for awhile, fully intending to square up this little matter soon. If he hasn't caught up by the time the next payment to the chapter is due he goes a little further in debt and before he realizes it he is unable to catch up.

Such a man is showing a weakness that may mean his undoing. When a fraternity member exhibits a weakness it is the duty of his brothers to point it out to him and help him overcome it. Where a brother falls back in his studies the upperclassmen go over the situation with him and then help him in mastering the subjects that are causing trouble. They do not give his recitations for him but they help him prepare his work so he will be strong enough to carry his own burden. Just so with a brother showing a financial weakness. The mistake he is making should be pointed out to him as soon as it is discovered and plans should be made to overcome the trouble, not by other fellows advancing money to pay his debts, but by planning his expenditures and seeing that he follows the scheme devised. Such a situation must be handled with care and without causing embarrassment, but the chances are the weak brother will feel immensely relieved to talk over the situation with those of whose sympathy he is sure, and when finally the burden is removed he will feel a deep sense of gratitude to his fraternity for helping him overcome a weakness that would lead to his undoing.

The best way to handle delinquents is not to have any.

DIAGNOSIS AND PRESCRIPTION

THE EDITOR

The conferences of the New England chapters, looking toward a better convention in November and thus toward a stronger fraternity, have raised questions which, although perhaps not so new as some of the undergraduates imagine, still should receive the sympathetic and thoughtful consideration of every Phi Sigma Kappa man.

We start, naturally, with the defects, manifold and evident, of our fraternity as now constituted. No one is satisfied with it. No one can escape the realization that it is failing in many ways to meet our ideal for it. And there is no need of enumerating the weaknesses which we deplore. Still there is no occasion for gloom. It is necessary only to compare Phi Sigma Kappa as we know it with Phi Sigma Kappa as our elder brothers knew it, to realize the progress it has been making. In practice, policies, organization, yes even in purposes, our fraternity has enjoyed a strikingly gratifying development during the past two decades. Thus the only comparison which we have any right to make ought certainly to bring confidence rather than distrust. The comparisons, on the other hand, which some of our men have been making with other fraternities are highly superficial, based upon inevitable ignorance, always of the other fraternity and sometimes of our own. The more one knows of an institution, the more he will find to criticise. It is the opinion of the writer that in the essential things Phi Sigma Kappa will compare favorably with any of the other fraternities, having about the same virtues and about the same defects as they and in about the same proportion. And with this in mind, let us return to the suggestions arising from the New England conferences.

There seems to be a sentiment among some groups of brothers that we should adopt a much more aggressive expansion policy. That may be true, but let us not deceive ourselves. A larger chapter roll is no insurance against evils. It may remove some of the existing ones perhaps, but it will also introduce others hitherto unknown. The large university is no more free from administrative distress than the small college. It is quite possible that you may prefer a large fraternity to a smaller one, just as you may prefer a large university to a small college, but each has its own defects and many of them, if not all, are the same. Aggressive expansion may be desirable, is in fact being recommended as a defense against unfriendly legislation, but it offers no panacea for the ills which we would remove.

The next suggestion is the one of traveling secretary, a man who shall devote full time to the affairs of the fraternity. This involves the question of money, and all that its advocates need to do is to demonstrate to our treasurer that the funds can be raised. The trouble is that the necessary funds are so large. A mediocre man on this job would be worse than none, and a good man, one combining administrative efficiency with qualities of inspiration, is not available for any length of time for any third-rate salary. We should all like to have a traveling secretary, but we should hate to have one who had to devote half of his working year to raising the money for his own expenses and remuneration.

The third proposal of change in policy is that of more adequate organization, more specifically, the creation of districts and the appointment of district deputies with local duties of visitation and report. This proposal is not nearly so radical as the other two and might without serious difficulty be put into effect. Moreover eventually a growing fraternity must come to some such division as this. And if eventually, why not now? The plan has the support of some of the older leaders of the fraternity, and possibly should be adopted. Certainly a closer association among the chapters of a locality should be encouraged, and perhaps recognized districting is the best method of effecting it. Anyway this is something wholly within our reach, and whatever we may gain, there is little to lose.

The writer wishes, however, to throw in one word of warning. Our day and generation have lost their heads over organization. There seems to be a universal notion that organization is a substitute for work. This, of course, is not true. Where the prevailing forces are many and complicated, organization simplifies the processes and reduces work. But where the prevailing forces are comparatively few and simple, organization frequently complicates the processes and actually increases work. You do not require a drive committee to collect the Sunday school pennies or a two-chamber Congress to conduct the legislative functions of a country town. Organization in itself creates work, sometimes a great deal, and unless it saves more than it creates in getting the something done, it is not justified. We are almost reaching a state of mind in which a man, if he wishes to go fishing, must first call together his neighbors, draw up a constitution, agree upon a uniform garment, appoint a sub-committee to report on the laws, and finally appropriate money for a banquet at the end of the season. Organization is very much worth while,—but not always.

The application is of course patent. Our fraternity organization has grown with the enrollment. In some respects it is now adequate. In some respects it calls for immediate development. The relevant query is this: Have we reached a point where we ought to expand our organization to the extent of creating new executive offices? Will the resultant benefits outweigh the synchronous labor of securing suitable men, relating them to our existing machinery of administration and providing for their faithful performance of duty? Are we ready to take this step?

At the Albany convention we provided for what we called "alumni advisers." Every chapter was to appoint a resident, or available, alumnus, subject to the approval of the Council, who should have a supervisory oversight of that chapter. Now this was a good plan. Whether it was to prove practicable or not we do not know. It has yet to be tried, that is by the Fraternity as a whole, by the chapters which need it most. Apparently only sixteen chapters have ever appointed an adviser. Two or three declare that they have never heard of such an office. There seems to be little coördination between the advisers appointed and the Council. Now whose fault this is probably no one knows. There is enough to go around anyway. But the point is this: if we have found the task of putting this innovation into effect so onerous, are we ready to legislate another innovation of the same type? And until we have actually given this plan a fair trial, have we any business to assume still other administrative burdens?

It is the belief of the writer that we have sufficient machinery already. Our state and national governments have always found it easier to enact new laws than to enforce those already enacted. Until we have more nearly realized the possibilities of our present machinery, we should not undertake even more. It is certainly not too much to expect of our Council and Court that they should provide, either directly or vicariously, sufficient visitation of the chapters. It means only from three to five chapters for each officer. Probably this visitation needs to be systematized a little, but that is exceedingly simple. I am sure that the most self-satisfied member of the present Council and Court would not assert that as a body we have done as much as we could or should. After all it is largely a matter of personnel. If all of us were as faithful as two or three have been, there could be no feeling of omission on the part of any chapter. It is simply a matter of filling our Court and Council offices with men of sufficient enthusiasm, ability and convenience. Let us be perfectly frank about this matter. Some of our officers have realized after election that they simply cannot devote the necessary time to fraternity affairs. One of our present Council has even resigned his position for that very reason. It is one of the practical difficulties in the situation.

Now it is true that men combining enthusiasm, ability and convenience for this work are hard to find. The kind of alumni who possess the first two requisites are just the kind who lack the third, and if the third is a prime essential, the other two are as well. Phi Sigma Kappa has from the start been peculiarly fortunate in the devotion of a few leaders, but these are almost without exception from the ranks of the older men. It is our problem to supplement this little group from our younger alumni, theoretically from our alumni advisers. Now if it is hard to impress such men for our Council, how can we hope to find them for district deputies?

The New England chapters cannot be too highly commended for raising these questions of policy and personnel at an early date and in an open forum. There have always been a few delegates who seem to have been unable to resist that alluring game—politics. They have nothing personal at stake. They are not profoundly concerned in the election. But for them the greatest fun in the whole convention lies in organizing slates and opposition and deals. They enter this exciting sport with the same zest that college undergraduates enter a moot convention, with all the same deadly pertinacity of will. They play upon sectional jealousies. They pledge delegates to all kinds of fanciful compromises. They take particular joy in upsetting the existing régime. And it sometimes happens that they replace a good officer with a poor one for reasons of supposed political expediency.

Now these men have no sinister designs. They are not even actuated by ill will. They are simply carried away by an unfortunate infatuation. They do not necessarily control the convention. But they have in some instances introduced an element into the convention which has sickened the more high-minded delegates and which has deterred them from attending later as alumni. The time has passed when petty politics will be tolerated in our conventions. The chapters hereafter will select delegates who know before they start what men the chapter considers best fitted for the various offices and who will not be drawn into any political deals. The fun must be sacrificed for the sake of the welfare of the fraternity. The convention is serious business. Our best is none too good; it must prevail.

The writer does not wish to be stamped as a smug conservative. There are times when he feels almost recklessly radical. He is certain that he has been often criticized for undue idealism. He is burdened with some very drastic proposals, probably too drastic even for submission to the convention. But he feels very confidently that our machinery of administration is adequate for our present needs, that our immediate problem is not legislative but executive. We must not go after false gods.

Mu graduates meet for luncheon at the University Club in Philadelphia on the first Wednesday of each month at one o'clock, and urge members of the other chapters to do likewise.

OMEGA BUYS

DON E. MOHN, Ω '21

During the past eleven years Omega has passed through many stages of development at California. She has always realized what she owed to Phi Sigma Kappa, and has ever been striving to make herself a chapter of importance and one of which the sister chapters might well be proud.

For a time after the chapter was founded the men went into the various fields of campus activities and great success in most of them was achieved. At one time this chapter had seven big "C" men in the house. In politics she has produced men for the best jobs on the campus.

But Omega has had her dark days and periods of non-achievement—there were times when clouds were thick and there was no sign of sunshine ahead—chaos reigned during the period of the great war. We suffered as all fraternities did, and though many chapters went out of existence, the doors of Omega were never closed. Though the house was nothing more than a few rented rooms, they served as a meeting place for the few men left, who were to be the nucleus for a chapter which is now the strongest we have ever had.

When the clouds broke and bright days came again, the brothers returned, more men were taken in, and the fall of nineteen hundred and nineteen found us with a strong chapter of forty-six men and a small house. What was to be done? It was very evident that steps had to be taken to obtain better and larger quarters.

For years we had considered buying a house or building one. Some steps had been taken to establish a building fund, but up to the period of the war the sum had not increased enough to turn any deal without much more capital, which the brothers could not raise with their fast decreasing numbers. Consequently the deal fell through with the approach of war, and while the war continued the building of a house was not even thought of, our only efforts being towards keeping the chapter alive.

In nineteen hundred and nineteen a house committee was appointed to search for a suitable house to rent, or one which we might buy. It might be well to add that our financial standing was better than at any time during our history, due to the application of sound business methods to our house managing. After endless searching our house committee came across our present residence. It was far superior in every way to any place they had looked at, and was regarded at first as beyond our means. However as a last resort the committee made investigation and learned that the owner of the place was a mining man, who was at that particular time hard pressed for capital. He offered to sell the place for $27,500, but wanted cash for it. We were discouraged of course, for it was impossible for us to raise the amount. About this time, however, an angel in the form of Brother Donogh's mother came to us and offered her assistance.

Mrs. Donogh, to whom we owe everything, made the business transaction for us and furnished the necessary capital. She bargained with the owner and finally purchased the place for $22,250. The bank offered to carry a mortgage for $15,000, which left only $7,250 for us to raise.

Under our present basis of house managing we were able to make enough to pay interest, taxes, and insurance, and to strike off $100 a month on the principal. This was made possible by having a chapter of forty-five men, about thirty-five of whom lived in the house.

We have used several methods in raising money for the first payments on the house. Finding that we could get the place on such easy terms we assessed every member of the house twenty-five dollars, which gave us $1,750 as a start. We then brought this amount up to $2,900 by individual loans of active members who were willing to let their money without interest. We also sent out circular letters to our alumni, and by means of these raised $900 by contributions. Not having enough to make the remainder of the $7,250, we sent out more letters. We had some response in small contributions, and one of our most active alumni managed to get us $2,000 without interest.

Now that we have wiped away the $7,250 note, our financial worries are about over. The rest is merely paying rent. And we have a large fine house with the most beautiful grounds of any fraternity in Berkeley.

Truly the golden era has begun for Omega. Material success has been attained, and at the same time there has been no lack of discretion in choosing members. We have a large chapter of congenial men. Great strides in scholarship have been made. This chapter is proud of her achievements and glad that she is no longer a backward chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa. What we have at present we may well expect to continue to possess in the future, and all look forward to a bright and prosperous existence.

WALTER D. POWELL, Zeta Deuteron '14

(From a Bozeman, Montana, paper)

"Coach Walter D. Powell has resigned his position as director of athletics for M.S.C. to accept a position at Leland Stanford University as head coach of football and basketball and director of intercollegiate athletics.

This year has been a most successful one in athletics under the direction of Powell. In football he has whipped new men into shape, and their present knowledge of the game should turn out a winning team next fall. The basketball team won the championship of the northwest and played the entire season without a defeat.

Mr. Powell goes to Leland Stanford with the personal recommendation of Walter Camp, the biggest authority on football in the United States. He was morale officer in the navy at Charleston, S. C., for eighteen months and directed athletics under Mr. Camp. Leland Stanford requested Mr. Powell's services after Mr. Camp had recommended him 'as the best available football coach in America.'

At Wisconsin in 1912 he played on the football team that won the conference championship. Later he went to the Western Reserve University at Cleveland, Ohio, as director of athletics and turned out a football team that won the championship of Ohio."

FRANCIS DEVER—BETA DEUTERON

Francis Dever graduated from the Duluth Central High School in June, 1913. Not only was he very active during his four years of prep-school, but his name appeared on the roll of honor-graduates. Thus did he come prepared to meet his four years at Minnesota.

Brother Dever entered the College of Engineering as a Freshman in the Fall of 1916. After matriculation he immediately began working for Professor Meyer and assisted in compiling data for "Meyer's Treatise on Hydrology." Along with this outside work and a full Freshman schedule, Brother Dever managed to carry two Sophomore subjects. At the end of his Sophomore year he was high man of his class, and completed four Junior subjects, and he was known by every student and faculty member of the College. He had also completed his "Frosh" term in Beta Deuteron.

At the beginning of his Junior year he was elected as high Junior into Tau Beta Pi, the honorary engineering Fraternity. He was immediately elected president of that organization and held that office for one year, declining the office at the following election. He was an officer and inter-society representative of the Civil Engineers' Society. He assisted Professor Meyer in research work in hydrology, contracted in map-making and tutored in mathematics and physics.

Brother Dever became a member of the Engineering faculty at the beginning of his Senior year. He is now an instructor in Freshman mathematics. Aside from teaching, carrying the Senior schedule in Civil Engineering, tutoring in calculus and mechanics, Brother Dever has been super-active in all affairs pertaining to his class. He founded the Association of Engineering Students and the Students Co-operative Book Store. He declined the position of president of the former society, but acted as adviser to the Board. He was unanimously elected as Senior representative to the convention in Iowa of the "Guard of St. Patrick," a nation-wide Engineering Society. He has a rôle in the Senior Class play. Not only has Brother Dever participated in all of the before-mentioned societies but he has the honor of being the best student that ever entered the College of Engineering at the University of Minnesota. And he has earned his way through school.

Brother Dever has also been very active in chapter affairs. He was treasurer for twenty-one months, from April, 1918, to December, 1919. In this capacity he has been Beta Deuteron's greatest asset. He has been our president for two terms, and every member of Beta Deuteron regrets the fact that he leaves us in June. However, we know that he will never forget Phi Sigma Kappa, and that we can always count on Brother Dever for future support and advice.

We members of Beta Deuteron congratulate Brother Dever on his remarkable work, both in College and in the chapter. Our only regret is that every Phi Sig does not know him as "Danny."

EPSILON DEUTERON IN BASKETBALL

The Worcester Tech basketball team came through the season 1919-1920 without a single defeat at the hands of any New England team. In this record, Epsilon Deuteron takes pardonable pride, for throughout every game played, four Phi Sigs were on the floor. Of the ten men on the squad, seven were Epsilon Deuteron men: Captain Stoughton, Manager Bauder, Cy Campbell, Fred Pickwick, Tom Berry, Howard Trombley, and Everett Clark.

Brother Stoughton, Captain, was certainly qualified for the position of leader. His steady, consistent hard work was the foundation of the splendid team-work which brought the team through to success. Stought was declared ineligible almost at the start of the season. In the month that followed, his light was often the last one out in the early morning, but at the end of the month, Captain Stoughton was again to be seen in the forward position.

Cy Campbell played beside Stoughton. His sure eye and lightning speed made him high scorer for the team. Whenever Cy and the ball got together, the almost inevitable result followed, while the crowd cheered, and W. P. I.'s score went up two points. He was a game fighter. In more than one game, he finished in shape that would have put many a man out of the running, while awed wonder came from the fair sex in the gallery above.

Brother Tom Berry held the pivot position, and was the sensation of the season. When once he got hold of the ball, the man that could get it away was not to be found. He was the life of the team from start to finish. In a close game, when no one seemed able to score, the ball would rise from somewhere near the center of the floor, and a gentle swish of the net let us know that Tom had got loose for another basket. From several sources, his name has been suggested as the best college center in New England. He is only a Freshman this year, so greater things are looked for.

Brother Fred Pickwick played an exceptionally strong and fast guard game. Freddy isn't very tall, but woe to the big fellows who try to pick on him; for as he says, "The bigger they are, the harder they fall." While Captain Stoughton was ineligible, "Pick" took his place in the front line, and pulled the team out of what might have been a bad hole. He has been elected captain of basketball for next year, when he will be a Junior.

Brothers Trombley and Clark were substitutes at guard and forward respectively, and in another year should make an even stronger bid for Varsity than this year.

One name only remains unsung, that of Brother Fritz Bauder, Manager. He arranged an excellent schedule, and did a great deal for the team. Fritz, famous as the founder and organizer of Epsilon Deuteron's Original Jazz Band, also entertained at the piano between the halves of home games, opening each time by divesting the long-suffering instrument of all removable parts.

All of the brothers save Manager Bauder will be at school again next year, so the outlook for Epsilon Deuteron's basketball future is indeed bright.

ETA DINES

Eta Chapter held its annual banquet at the Hotel Caswell, April 15, 1920, the largest crowd that ever has been present at one of our banquets, sixty men being present. We welcomed with pleasure the presence of Brother Conley, who gave us a fine address on the condition of the fraternity. Brother Edward A. Strauff was toastmaster and did the job up well. Short talks were made by Lieut. Col. Enoch Barton Garey, Prof. Arthur M. Shipley, Dr. Thomas Fell, president of St. John's College, and Walter C. Brandes of George Washington University.

The alumni have guaranteed to back the active chapter in the purchasing of a house and we expect to announce the purchase of one soon.

THE FRATERNITY'S SCHOLARSHIP

President Conley, upon his election to leadership in Albany six years ago, made his first formal appeal to the brothers—one for better scholarship in all the chapters. He has since returned many times to this vital question. As the year draws to a close it must surely be of interest to know what the chapters think of their scholarship at present. The reader will doubtless draw his own conclusions, charitable or otherwise, regarding some of the more indefinite reports.

The relative arrival of the chapter letter is indicated in the usual way. The editor regrets the omissions; a second request was sent to tardy chapters.

For the sake of any who pride themselves upon drawing just inferences and adequate conclusions from fragmentary evidence, we are publishing these reports on scholarship exactly as the chapters have turned them in, with neither proof-reading nor revision. It would be interesting to know what impression the thoughtful reader will get of the various chapters from this record.

ILLINOIS—1

"House averaged three or grade of 'C'
We ranked about two-thirds down the list of national fraternities."

MINNESOTA—15

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

MOST all of us know that this year on Nov. 11th, 12th and 13th, the Convention will be held in Chicago.

And every man of us who can attend should consider it his duty to do so. But the local organizations back of this convention are going to make it "your pleasure" to attend this convention.

Whether you are able to arrange your vacation during convention week, at least, save three days of it for the greatest get-together meeting of old  $\Phi \Sigma \kappa$ .

Eastern brothers need the Convention as much as the Convention needs them. (We are not worrying about the Western brothers.)

Any Eastern man who has been West knows what it means for our future development.

Come to the Convention—join around the festive board with your old fraternity brothers and meet the coming generation.

Chicago is preëminently a convention city and glad and able to take care of its visitors.

The Congress Hotel (on the lake front) has assured us of ample accommodations.

The attractions of the Central metropolis are second to none in many respects.

An opportunity is presented to visit local chapters near Chicago and on the way.

By all means bring the ladies. They will be entertained we hope as never before.

BETWEEN OURSELVES

THE Council and Supreme Court have voted to recommend to the Convention the granting of charters to two of the applicants for admission into Phi Sigma Kappa. Formal notification of this action will be before the chapters when they convene in the fall, and the customary petitions from the applicants will appear at the same time. In view of the possibility of unfavorable action the fraternities seldom publish the details of proposed legislation of this sort, but alumni who plan to attend the convention and who are out of touch with any active chapter are urged to write directly to the secretary for information about the applicants. It might be opportune to say that one of them is in the Pennsylvania College of Gettysburg and the other in Oregon Aggie.

WORD has come of agitation in Wisconsin looking toward legislative action unfavorable to fraternity life in the state university. Apparently this agitation has its origin in the university itself, which would lend force to the appeal of western fraternity men for more organizations everywhere. Wherever there is a large barbarian group there is certain to be a disgruntled element. We trust that the reactionaries are not in the saddle in Wisconsin.

OUR readers will notice that the Supreme Court has chosen John Adams Lowe to complete the term as a member of that body. The precedent adopted in the case of Brother Barrett (of allowing the deceased member nominally to complete his term honoris causa) could not be followed if the Court was to be sure of its judicial quorum.

“WE are going to try to keep all the future Signets and Star and Crescents bound in volumes, as we think they would be interesting for the alumni when visiting the chapter.” This excerpt from a letter from Epsilon Deuteron is subject to general commendation. It is practically impossible to get hold of some of the old numbers of the SIGNET now, but the current numbers will be old and rare before long. When a new book by such men as Kipling and Conrad appears, the dealers in antiques and rare editions buy a large number of copies to store until they shall have acquired rarity values. There is no one doing this with SIGNETS and chapter bulletins. If you want them, save them; if you want to be sure you are saving them, have them bound.

THE CHAPTER AUTHORIAL

The Reflections of a Retired Airman and The Thrills of Flying, by Paul J. Haaren, A '17, in Scribner's for October.

The Mystery at the Blue Villa, collection of short stories by Melville Davison Post, Δ '91, Appleton & Co. Of this book the New York Times has written as follows:

Mr. Post has a keen feeling for color and contrast and drama, a marked sense of irony, and an ability to depict character. His tales are out of the ordinary in themselves, in their setting, and in the way they are told. Within the necessarily limited space of a review it is unfortunately not possible to comment upon them all. They are not, of course, of uniform excellence but even the poorest among them are worth reading, while the best are very good, indeed.

Prof. Henry Seidel Canby, E '99, has been appointed literary editor of the New York Evening Post, and in outlining his criterion of the book review before the American Booksellers Association in Philadelphia, he said:

Such a review must be dignified; must be competent; must become authoritative. Its writing must have enough distinction to be worthy of the books it chooses for extensive reviews. It should be varied; and by keeping due proportion in its space allotments, may be comprehensive. It should be as informative as the editors can make it; occasionally witty and frequently amusing. We should praise often, damn occasionally and neither puff nor sneer.

The Black Disc, a tale of the Canadian woods, by Addison Lewis, BA '12, Current Opinion, June 1919.

Little Spanish Count, by Addison Lewis, Bellman, Feb. 1919.

Rural Library Building, by John Adams Lowe, X '06, Architectural Record, Nov. 1919.

Small Town Library Building, by John Adams Lowe, The House Beautiful, January 1920.

Flowing Artesian Well at Winslow, by Homer P. Little, X '06, Maine Science, June 1919.

Literature in a Democracy, Our Erratic Idealism, Radical America, and Educating by Tradition, by Henry Seidel Canby, Century, Jan. 1920, Dec., Sept., and Aug., 1919, respectively.

Back to the Bee, by Henry Seidel Canby, Independent Aug. 1919.

Floating Citadels, by Fitzhugh Green, Δ '13, St. Nicholas, July 1919.

ALPHA BATTERY

BASEBALL

Contrary to the glowing prophecies of some of the chapter correspondents, Phi Sigma Kappa does not seem to have distinguished itself on the diamond as it did last fall on the gridiron. At that time with three men of All-American calibre in the judgment of dependable critics, we had a large field from which to select our All-Phi Sigma Kappa team, and varsity captains found themselves waiting for hypothetical injuries to call them from the bench. Now there seems to be little choice. We must take what we can get, confident that what we lack in quantity we make up in quality. However there can be no need of justifying our placements, and perhaps that is fortunate, for the chapter letters have told us little about the personnel of our team, and the professional teams have all but crowded college baseball out of the public press.

It is of interest to note that in one college we have a Phi Sigma Kappa battery,—Kroeck and Newell of Massachusetts Aggie. It has seemed particularly appropriate to call our readers' attention to this, because neither of the men is a senior, and the combination invites watching another season. To those who saw Aggie beat Amherst 2—1 at commencement time, this battery was the most significant feature of the game. Not an Amherst runner succeeded in stealing second, and up to the seventh inning it looked as though Kroeck was going to pitch a no-hit game. At that point, however, subsequent to an invasion of the diamond by the Amherst alumni and a persistent demonstration of cheering, explosions and general uproar, he allowed a couple of scratch hits, which followed by an error, resulted in a run. But Amherst did not hit again. Newell and Kroeck are an unusually formidable battery.

The following line-up is suggested:

catcher	Newell, Massachusetts Aggie
first base	Vanderloo, Iowa
second base	Sullivan, St. Lawrence
shortstop	Farrington, Wisconsin
third base	Stoughton, Worcester
center field	Campbell, Worcester
right field	Morse, Worcester

COL. WILLIAM N. BISPHAM, H. '97

The following excerpt from the Baltimore Sun will be of interest to all Phi Sigs. There are few alumni who have kept their interest in our fraternity as much alive as has Colonel Bispham. We can readily believe that the soldiers love him.

If his valet is the hero's harshest critic it is equally true that a soldier is the most exacting judge of his officers. Yet the wounded Yanks still under treatment at Fort Sheridan, Illinois, have put their stamp of approval on the Baltimore physician who commands them, Col. William N. Bispham, Medical Corps, U. S. A., without reservations. Most of these veterans have had many commanders before and since they were wounded in France, and Colonel Bispham had command of 35,000 medical men during the war, more than are numbered in a war strength division, so this approval is worth something.

At this biggest army hospital in the United States Colonel Bispham had waived, for the most part, the usual strict observance of saluting and standing at attention, arguing that any unnecessary restraint would not further the recovery of these broken youngsters. Besides, few of them would be able to continue in the service, because of their wounds. So a bandage or a crutch was ample excuse for a soldier or junior officer to pass a superior without making a salute.

Recently, however, one of the periodical inspectors arrived and immediately was wrought up at the noticeable "lack of discipline." He recommended prompt measures be made to correct the "deplorable state of affairs." Instead of at once issuing orders with accompanying penalties Colonel Bispham did a most unmilitary thing. He called a massmeeting and explained the situation to the men themselves. Of their own accord they resumed their old habits of smartness, which had earned for the American Expeditionary Forces the title of the most disciplined body of troops in France.

About a score of years ago "Willy" Bispham of Culpepper, Va., was one of the crowd of riotous medical students in the University of Maryland. Soon after his graduation he entered the Fifth Regiment, Maryland National Guard, to fight the Don and free Cuba. In his subsequent army service he has advanced rapidly and has held many positions of trust and responsibility that called for the highest ability.

He first saw regular army service with the Eighth Infantry, in the army of occupation of Cuba, 1899. There he was assistant to the officer in charge of Cuban relief, and later in charge of yellow fever preventive work in Havana. In January, 1900, he was detailed to assist the chief sanitary officer of that city. After his return to the States in 1902 he took a special course of post-graduae work under Dr. Charles E. Simon.

In 1907 he went to the Philippine Islands and on his return was detailed as surgeon of the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. He succeeded Col. E. L. Munson in 1912 as director of the field service school for medical officers at Leavenworth. His biggest job, prior to his present one, was commanding the medical training and mobilization camps at Fort Riley, Kan., and later at Camp Greenleaf, Ga., during the war. Here he directed the making of army surgeons and medical assistants of the thousands of civilian doctors and men who followed the fighting lines. The last of the many classes enrolled at Camp Greenleaf numbered more than 35,000, of whom 3,500 were officers.

His present task is by far the greatest—that of managing America's largest army hospital, of supervising the medical restoration of the real war victims, or regulating and directing the curative and vocational work, of providing enough recreation of the right kind, and of guaranteeing a square deal for soldier and Government. He knows every one of the patients from daily visits to the wards, though the continually changing personnel has reached the number of 4,500 at times. He even peeps into the garbage cans to protect the army mess from undue waste.

But what reaches the hearts of the soldiers is the fact that he is passionately interested in them, and they know it. He had nothing to say about himself, but once started on the subject of the patients, he talked.

"Nearly 100 per cent. of those men are personally worth all you can do for them," he stated, as his creed. "I believe in men, anyway, and especially in soldiers. When any of them has a complaint to make or a suggestion, he comes to me with it. I have tried to get the idea abroad that I wish them to. I am here to give them justice and have promised them that I would do so."

Colonel Bispham will celebrate his forty-fifth birthday on May 20, but his appearance will not back up the number of candles on the birthday cake, for his hair is not yet gray and his figure does not fit the forties at all.

This Baltimore medical student has gone far in 20 years, and he has 20 more ahead of him before he reaches the retiring age of 63. He is a member of the American Surgeon's Association and of the University Club of Baltimore.

COLLEGE FRATERNITIES ACTIVE IN FIGHT AGAINST VENEREAL DISEASES

College men, largely fraternity men, have given invaluable aid to the United States Government in its comprehensive health campaign to eradicate venereal diseases. In response to a request from Surgeon General Rupert Blue of the U. S. Public Health Service, 215 fraternity chapters offered coöperation in varying degrees.

This coöperation includes efforts to give rational sex instruction to freshman initiates and to disseminate a knowledge of the dangers and consequences of venereal diseases. It also includes joining in community endeavors to eliminate or minimize prostitution in college communities. Furthermore, a score or more of fraternity publications devoted space to the campaign, publishing either formal articles or editorial encouragement of the movement. Fraternity members, both in college and those who have been graduated into business and professional life, have aided. In many instances lectures have been given by graduate fraternity members to the younger men in the active chapters.

The Surgeon General feels that the assistance thus far given is a fine augury of what is to be expected during the next year from fraternity members. It is recognized that the campaign against venereal diseases is in accordance with the tenets of Greek letter fraternizing, and the "decent living" keynote of the educational work finds a ready response from all fraternities.

The old canard that "wild oats" had a place in the life of the college man has been proved a pernicious fallacy. Extensive investigation by the Public Health Service has shown that prostitution is the foremost spreader of gonorrhœa, syphilis, and chancroid. Actual surveys show that 75% to 95% of all the prostitutes, both public and clandestine, are infected with one or more of the venereal diseases, that as a class they are poisoned with gonorrhœa and syphilis. Consequently the request that communities repress prostitution is as urgent in the fight against venereal diseases as would be a call to rid a community of mosquito-breeding swamps if a malaria epidemic were to break out.

From the standpoint of public health venereal diseases may be said to be epidemic. They are sapping the vigor and stamina of the nation, weakening the American people as a race, and causing a heavy financial drain and untold misery. They contribute heavily to the blind and insane asylums and are causing thousands of children to be born physically defective. This situation exists largely because of the ignorance on the part of the public as to the dangers and consequences of venereal infection and the necessity of proper medical treatment. The belief has been prevalent that gonorrhoea was of slight importance and easily cured by a quack doctor, with the result that men have not been cured and have transmitted their infection to innocent wives and children. Syphilis has erroneously been considered incurable and consequently neglected and spread to others. Serious as they are, both diseases are curable if proper treatment is begun early and continued long enough.

The war made it possible for the Government to undertake this definite and broad-gauged campaign to combat venereal diseases. Under the operation of the Selective Service Act a cross-section of the young manhood of the country was available for study. The examinations showed that 5% of the second million men called under the draft were infected with venereal diseases. This 5% did not include any cases where there was not ready evidence of infection, which excluded many cases of latent or passive syphilis or of chronic gonorrhoea.

The majority of the men in the Army were woefully ignorant of the consequences of venereal diseases, and many believed promiscuous sex relations necessary to health, a belief which the majority of intelligent physicians and laymen now know to be a damaging fallacy. Consequently, rational sex instruction, including accurate information on venereal diseases, was given all army men.

The national program for the control of venereal diseases in civilian communities formally began in July, 1918, and was coördinated closely with the work of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps. If it was necessary to make men fit to fight, it was necessary to make them fit to live. Consequently, a law was enacted by Congress creating a Division of Venereal Diseases in the Public Health Service, and funds were appropriated to be allotted to the State Boards of Health. To secure Federal funds each state had to adopt regulations requiring that venereal diseases be made reportable, that patients be given free treatment, and that efforts be made to repress prostitution and to educate the public in the problems of sex and venereal disease.

At the close of the first year's work, 46 states had adopted the required regulations, secured Federal funds, and had organized bureaus in the state departments of health for venereal disease control. Most of these states have made appropriations from state funds for carrying on the work, and are therefore entitled to receive the Federal allotment for the year 1919-20.

The work of venereal disease control is classified under medical, educational, and law-enforcement measures.

As a part of the medical work of the first year, nearly 250,000 cases of gonorrhoea, syphilis, and chancroid were reported to the State Departments of Health by physicians, health officers, and clinics. Over 60,000 physicians promised to report their cases and cooperate with the Government in its program. On January 12, 1920, there were 499 free clinics in operation.

As part of the educational activities, pamphlets were distributed, lectures given, exhibits and motion pictures shown. Intensive work was done through the big industrial establishments of the nation. Employers were asked to secure educational material for their employees, with the result that more than 2,000 firms paid for millions of pieces of educational material. Many of them have made arrangements to have the plant physician or some local doctor give free medical advice and treatment to employees needing it. The importance of handling the problem as an economic one is realized by both industrial and commercial organizations.

The legislative program has resulted in the passage of state laws for the suppression of prostitution and the control of venereal diseases by providing methods of reporting them and facilities for treatment and quarantine. The rehabilitation of prostitutes so that they may take their place in the legitimate life of the community is an important part of this work. Practically every state now has the laws necessary to carry out the program effectively. Many cities have passed ordinances which meet their special needs.

The prevalence of gonorrhoea and syphilis is partly due to a false standard of modesty which has made a frank and intelligent discussion of the problems of social hygiene slow and difficult. An enlightened public opinion which will demand the enforcement of the laws and which will be able to act intelligently upon sex problems is essential to their eradication.

For this reason the active assistance of the college fraternity men is desired. Education is necessary if the causes of venereal disease are to be removed and the diseases themselves eradicated. College men did magnificent work as officers of the American Army. This war against venereal diseases also requires their fighting spirit, their courage, their idealism, and their everlasting persistence.

THE CHAPTER INVISIBLE

LOUIS NOTT LANEHART, BETA '83

Dr. Louis N. Lanehart, a practicing physician of Hempstead, Long Island, New York, one of the organizers of and surgeon to the Nassau Hospital, surgeon also to the Babylon, Mercy, and Eastern Long Island hospitals, and consulting surgeon to the Williamsburg Hospital, and health officer of Hempstead township, died on April 25 from heart failure following an operation upon his throat.

STANLIE JOHN MOISANT, OMEGA '18

Word, without details, has been received from San Salvador of the death of Lieut. Stanlie Moisant. Brother Moisant was a prominent member of a family well known in aviation circles. His father was the late John M. Moisant, inventor of the Moisant monoplane, founder of the Moisant aviation school on Long Island, and the first aviator to circle the Statue of Liberty and to carry a passenger across the English Channel. His aunt, Miss Mathilde Moisant, holds the world's record for learning to operate an airplane and flying in thirty-two minutes, and until recently held the world's record for altitude (women). Lieut. Moisant was himself a skilful aviator, having been an instructor of the late Mayor John P. Mitchel of New York and having prophesied his failure as a flyer. At the time of his death he was in San Salvador in the interests of his extensive lands in that place. His remains are being brought to Los Angeles for burial.

NATHANIEL GILDERSLEEVE, MU '00

Further details have come in concerning the death of Dr. Gildersleeve, which was mentioned in the March SIGNET. He died on November 11, 1919, at the University Hospital, Philadelphia, from rectal carcinoma. He is survived by his widow, Elizabeth Stewart Gildersleeve, and by four children.

SAMUEL CLARENCE THOMPSON

Dr. Cutter has written to the Editor something of the late Brother Thompson, and the following excerpt will be of general interest at this time.

"Born on a farm, working his way through college, graduating as valedictorian, the essence of the man's life was loyalty. If he had gone into construction work as a contractor, he would have amassed a fortune and made a name of international repute. As it was, the American Society of Civil Engineers, when the late John Purroy Mitchel (then commissioner of accounts) was endeavoring to indict Thompson for bookkeeping methods in his departmental work in the Bronx, made our late brother a member of its board of directors,—a singularly high honor thus paid a man under fire. He was the first president of the Municipal Society of Engineers in New York City; he won prizes for essays; many organizations made him their treasurer; the Grand Concourse and many other engineering matters in the Bronx are his work.

"There are plenty of men in our order doing wholesome things. But this man meant so much to us he was so fine in his feelings, so utterly sincere in his loyalties, and withal carried through life an industry and a splendid fund of common sense, that I am constrained to lay this tribute—my friend of thirty-four years has passed on—and the missing of him will not diminish as the years fall away. God rest his soul."

RESOLUTIONS

The Grand Council and the Supreme Court of Phi Sigma Kappa, deeply conscious of their irremediable loss in the death of Brother Samuel Clarence Thompson, hereby put upon record this feeble tribute to his memory.

He was a brother of dependable judgment. Like the immortal Barrett, he was endowed with that rarest of powers—a kindly common sense. The longer one knew him the more completely he came to trust to his opinions.

He was a brother of fraternal affection. To know him intimately was to love him much. Both formally as officer and informally as comrade he was wont to see the strength of a young man's character and thereby help him to realize it in the crises of daily living.

He was a brother of perfect loyalty. His pledge to Phi Sigma Kappa was perhaps his creed; certainly it was an expression of his life in our Fraternity. His devotion to our idealistic body, as to all those individuals, within and without, to whom he gave allegiance was something very fine and holy.

It is a nobler Phi Sigma Kappa because of him.

FOREWORD.

SENATOR WARREN G. HARDING

I beg to thank you for extending to me the privilege of greeting through your magazine the members of the Phi Sigma Kappa.

I should like to say one word to the college men within your organization, and that is this: in this country a college education implies a public obligation. Our universities have been founded or maintained largely through public or private endowments which have brought their opportunities within the reach of every aspiring youth. It is the duty of the beneficiaries of these institutions to help to maintain this as a land of freedom and liberty and opportunity, and preserve the institutions, which are their expression and facility, for the use of those who come.

I have found in a great many college men a disposition, which, while happily not general, is too frequently manifested, to take a hypercritical, rather cocksure attitude toward public questions, and to regard patriotism and religion to be the evidences of non-progressive minds. These are of the type which furnishes recruits to the ranks of the parlor Bolshevists and subscribers to a class of publications which are more of the "smart Aleck" than of the truly radical kind, but which encourage the would-be destroyers of our government and the civilization upon which it is founded.

MY GREAT DESIRE FOR THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

By JOHN ADAMS LOWE, COURT

Earnest and intelligent discussion of problems vital to Phi Sigma Kappa, inspiration in the ideals and traditions of the fraternity, the making of nation-wide friendships and an abundance of good-fellowship, constitute my ideal for the Chicago convention.

Good times are assured. The hospitality of Chicago  $\Phi \Sigma K$  meets every man on his own ground and makes him at home at once. Enthusiasm is sure to return to each chapter with every delegate if his own activity at Chicago has gathered the best of instruction and tradition. An exemplification of the ritual and a tribute to those who made the supreme sacrifice for Humanity may not be out of order.

The settlement of problems is a more difficult thing to determine. Several former conventions have devoted too much time in the meetings to examining credentials and reading of reports from chapters. With delegates certified before their arrival in Chicago and the reports made to the Council beforehand, much valuable time could be saved. Frequently requests have been made from the chapters that information regarding matters to be discussed at the convention be available before the delegates leave home. Chapters should have all information regarding prospective petitions for charters as early as possible.

At Chicago let us aim to get away from the politics of elections, and in place of former time- and attention-absorbing election contests, let us subordinate individual chapter matters which can be determined by the Council and Court, and let us give our attention to the big and fundamental problems confronting fraternities in general and  $\Phi \Sigma K$  in particular. Outline some policies and elect men to carry them out. The government failed to recognize the value of fraternities when it considered the S. A. T. C. What is  $\Phi \Sigma K$  doing to make such a judgment of fraternities impossible in the future? Is  $\Phi \Sigma K$  planning for and making itself a vital part of the fraternity and college world? What definite plan has  $\Phi \Sigma \kappa$  for expansion? Is it to be along a well-defined constructive policy or shall it be a hit-or-miss, haphazard, come-what-may plan? What about the organization of the fraternity? Has the time arrived when it would be feasible to divide the country into districts, each with a Board of Directors, responsible to the Council, in which annual meetings should be held? Can plans be perfected for establishing a specialist to devote his entire time as an organizing secretary? What about a uniform system of chapter accounting? These are some of the many propositions which need consideration. Speakers of national reputation among the fraternities can be found in Chicago to present some of them from the general fraternity standpoint if specialists sufficient are not available in our own ranks.

What sort of highbrow gathering is this, that's suggested? Well, nothing that any  $\Phi \Sigma \kappa$  need avoid. The rather, we hope that Chicago will register the largest convention in history, with enthusiasm enough for everyone from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Go as an American to Chicago, and come back to your college or university with a more profound sense of your opportunity and a deeper determination to meet your responsibility to your fraternity, your alma mater and your country.

By GEORGE J. VOGEL, COURT

My greatest desire for the Chicago convention is that every man present will be an example of the working out of the standards and ideals of the fraternity as presented in the constitution and rituals.

My second desire is that you will re-read the article on Diagnosis and Prescription in the June SIGNET. That has more convention horse sense than I can put in a short article.

By GEORGE M. CAMPBELL, A '20
President, Association of New England Chapters

The November convention will find Phi Sigma Kappa gathered as a unit for the first time in four years. A kaleidoscopic jumble of exciting events has, indeed, taken place during the interim. The war brought changes, shifts and entirely new conditions that were unexpected yet stimulating. Prominent forward positions held by fraternities to-day in collegiate circles gained through notoriety during the war puts them before many critical eyes. Phi Sigma Kappa in line with other upstanding fraternities should be alive to the issues of the day, ready and capable to meet the new situations, and to take advantage of opportunities with broad-minded vision.

The Chicago convention should find a wealth of constructive material collected during the past trying period that will serve for the benefit of upbuilding of our organization.

One factor of our weakness has been the lack of regular visitation of our chapters. Each chapter should be visited at least once a year by a member of the Council or a Grand Chapter member appointed by the Council. Reports of these inspections should be made to the Council and to the individual chapters concerned. The value of a paid traveling secretary for this work is not underestimated. Investigation, however, of our condition finds this impracticable, and an alternative found effective in other fraternities is to divide the organization geographically and appoint an inspector for each division.

The chapters feel to-day insufficient contact with the national organization. The minutes of the Council meetings sent to each chapter seems a necessary link that is desired and should be expected.

With the rapid growth of colleges and universities it seems backward not to adopt a progressively conservative attitude of expansion rather than a receptive one. The danger of rapid growth is recognized. There are, however, fertile fields of growth particularly in the West and Middle West that would be excellent for establishing strong chapters. These, if left to themselves, might never turn to Phi Sigma Kappa for recognition.

Uniform accounting for the chapters upon forms either sold by the treasurer or approved by him is, indeed, desirable. This brings out another vital financial problem; that of a system by which the national organization could assist the active chapters in acquiring houses.

Two elements in our constitution could well bear amendment:—the first relative to residence of a certain number of officers in New York. With our expansion throughout the breadth of the country, this seems not only out of date but discriminating against the chapters outside of New England. The second suggestive change is in our voting system. But one vote for every ten active members is allowed, yet on the other hand each Grand Chapter member has one vote. Power lies in the hands of the graduates rather than in those most vitally interested—the active members. This also means that Grand Chapter brothers living in the vicinity of the convention can assume power of undue influence; distance preventing outlying chapters from securing their Alumni support.

Brothers may find matters for thought in these outlined considerations. November 11, 12, and 13 will undoubtedly bring them out for discussion. Decided opinions can at least be formed by that time.

By WILLIAM F. WOOD,  $\Xi$  '13

To have forcibly brought to the attention of our fraternity the present opportunity for healthy expansion offered by the great state universities in the West is my greatest desire at our Chicago convention.

These universities are large and well established, and are only in their infancy. They are backed by almost unparalleled resources of revenue such as from public school lands, increasing number and size of private endowments, favorable state legislation, rapid westward moving population and development of natural resources. Our fraternity must be brought to realize the golden opportunities that are here in these strong, healthy, growing institutions. We should endeavor to carefully investigate each of these institutions immediately with a view to expansion where suitable and favorable conditions exist. It is imperative that we act and act now if Phi Sigma Kappa is to be a leader and play an important part in the fraternity life of our great western universities.

By ARNOLD C. OTTO, A '11

It will be by far Phi Sigma Kappa's most important convention and will require the best thought, leadership and action of a large number of us, both student and alumni members, to choose wise policies in regard to many matters which have come up in the four years since the last regular business session. Come, so you will do your part. It will be the first large meeting of Phi Sigma Kappa men in the West. We want the East to come West with a strong representation full of the life, traditions, and all there is in the fraternity and make old-fashioned, true Phi Sigma Kappa spirit run high. East, West, each and all of us boost for Phi Sigma Kappa. Chicago is the place to do it.

A LOOK BACKWARD

It may be of interest to revert approximately twenty-five years and take a glimpse at the Phi Sigma Kappa convention held in New Haven in 1894.

At that time we had five chapters, the one at Yale being the youngest. There were twelve brothers at the convention. The total membership of the fraternity at that time was 305. Dr. John Ashburton Cutter, Grand Secretary, was in the chair. Reports were presented by the various officers and from the chapters. The inductor reported activity in the following institutions: Wesleyan, Stevens, Harvard, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Iowa, Northwestern, Chicago, Western Reserve, Denver and Colorado. The treasurer reported cash on hand $1.52.

Very important legislation took place. Dr. Brooks, Founder, submitted a report upon the constitution, which being accepted by the convention, closed a long period of work upon that document and gave us a constitution which, with the exception of a provision for the Supreme Court, is practically the one we have to-day. The Beta ritual, which had also been going through a period of evolution, was also accepted, and is the one we still use for initiations. Samuel C. Armstrong, A '72, was elected president.

OUR COLLEGE MEN

(As seen by a Phi Sigma Kappa man, prominent in a field of practical affairs, who prefers to have his name withheld.)

Many a big job to-day is going begging for the right man. Unquestionably, our greatest need is for leaders,—men who can point the way in government, in industry, in agriculture, and in civic and community life. This need has always been foremost, it always will be. What of the men we are turning out of our colleges? Are they measuring up? The world's answer is "Yes." College-trained men have "made good" in the past, are "making good" now. They are in demand. Except in rare instances they have the call over other men. Such is the general verdict. Consider, however, the man of affairs, the employer of college men, the man who rubs elbows with them every day, in the office, on the street, at the club, at the community meeting,—what does he think? Probably he is a college man himself. He is comparing the present-day product with the graduate of "his day." He is judging the college man, not by a few shining examples here and there, but by "college men as a whole." Wherein are they strong? Wherein are they weak? As to the latter, whose fault is it? What are the remedies?

In venturing answers to such questions, numberless virtues come to mind; likewise a few faults. Obviously, however, in estimating the general type only those qualities found in the majority of college men may be taken into consideration. What are some of these?

Ambition to get ahead in the world is perhaps the strongest characteristic of the college man. While other men may be satisfied with good wages, favorable working conditions, a comfortable home and family, healthful recreation and a nest egg set aside for a rainy day, the college graduate pictures himself in a rut unless he is continually progressing. He is constantly on the lookout for wider opportunities. He rebels at working "by the clock." He is not only willing but anxious to spend long hours in order that he may get ahead faster.

Hand in hand with ambition is a liberal sprinkling of self-reliance and optimism. Big things are easily faced by the college man with all his youthful enthusiasm. First disappointments come hard, but they foster determination rather than discouragement.

A very definite amount of idealism is evident throughout. Many a man, stepping out from college, deliberately turns his back upon financial opportunity. He does not measure success from the standpoint of dollars and cents alone. His teachers have taught him this lesson in their own devotion to their profession. He recognizes service as a truer test than money. Says the applicant to the employer, "I don't care so much about the salary, it's the job that interests me."

The college graduate of to-day is thoroughly democratic. Although he may wear creased trousers and his hair parted in the middle, he isn't afraid to roll up his sleeves, and dirty his hands. In fact, most men take pride in saying, "I worked my way through." Furthermore, there is a distinctly generous attitude toward the other fellow, the man without educational advantages. The term "parlor socialist" has been applied to many a college-trained man. It is a good sign of the times. The world has had enough of "blood and iron" doctrine. There is need for better understanding between the so-called "classes" of society. College courses in sociology and economics are fundamental. They should be required of every student, regardless of his ultimate vocation.

Last, but perhaps most important of all, is the personality of the college man. His face radiates confidence, good nature and intelligence. His associations with other men have made him a good "mixer." He is neatly dressed, he holds himself erect, and he looks a man in the eye. His handshake is firm, his voice pleasing. All these points combine to make his appearance above the "ordinary."

Compared with his virtues, the college-trained man has few serious weaknesses. Ambition was the first strong point mentioned. This very desirable quality has its other side in one rather commendable fault, but fault nevertheless. Our college man dislikes to begin at the bottom. He oftentimes fails to realize that the ground covered in college, along the trail of books and lectures, must be retraced later in actual practice. The medical student does not make this mistake. To be a successful surgeon he knows he must first serve an apprenticeship as an intern. But the student of journalism who has been editor of his college paper and who glories in his individual style dislikes to start as a cub reporter at $15 a week. And so it is with other men in other lines. Frequently, this anxiety for position leads a man to take up something which pays a good salary at the start but really leads up a blind alley. Some men renounce their special training, even the calling for which they are best fitted. Fortunately, however, they are soon undeceived. And when they once see the point, it takes a great deal to steer them from their course.

Like most other people, the college graduate must plead guilty to the charge of not doing enough thinking for himself. Perhaps he is too busy in his work. Nevertheless, he is very apt to take opinions ready made. He holds as particularly sacred those truths and theories which he learned in college. He is content to agree with men to whom he looks up.

As a final indictment, it must be admitted that not a large enough proportion of college men become leaders in community life. Look over the list of chamber of commerce directors, church deacons, Y. M. C. A. officers, city or town officials, trustees of charitable organizations, and the like. Consider how difficult it is to find the right people to keep such activities going. Then look over the long list of college trained men who are content to sit back and "let George do it." Successful men? O, yes; in their own way. But what are they giving back to the community in exchange for the education they have had given them? It is true that a man just out of college must apply himself diligently for some years before he can feel he has made a start. He may have debts to pay, a home to make, and certainly he feels he must make up for time spent in getting his education. Can this be the cause of our college men getting into such a personal, more-or-less selfish rut? At least it is no excuse for staying there permanently.

It requires no argument to place due credit with our colleges for the high quality type of graduate now being turned out. Teachers make up the college. Without them there would be no classes, no students. The profession is one of the oldest and most venerable. Is it any wonder that young men have a feeling bordering on reverence for those under whom they study? It is a feeling that grows stronger with the years, and many times it happens that the man most disliked in undergraduate days is the one most appreciated later.

The teacher can hardly be blamed for a man's impatience about beginning at the bottom. Perhaps the professor himself does not realize all the requirements of the so-called "practical" side. He is enthusiastic about the thing he is teaching. He paints it in glowing terms. Said a young college man last June, "It's not difficult to land a five-figure salary these days." He was talking in terms of dollars, not cents. Where did he get the idea? He is due for a bump, has probably felt it already. His teacher should have warned him.

How can the college teach men to think for themselves? Surely, not by making every subject seem like an exact science to the student. Neither can this be done by leading a man to think that every printed word in a voluminous text book is gospel truth because a man with a doctor's degree wrote it. Nor is it possible when a teacher has such strong opinions himself that his students are made to swallow them whole in order to "get by" the course. The efficient teacher leads his men in their thinking, always bringing them to a conclusion, but never dictating what that conclusion shall be. The college product depends on the workmen who mold the material. Highest possible teaching standards must be maintained. This means that better salaries must be provided at once or good men will not be attracted and those who are now struggling with old H. C. L. will be forced to enter a commercial field to earn their bread and butter.

Where can the blame be placed for lack of leadership incentive in "college men as a whole?" Present systems of athletics and student activities have much to do with it. Shouting hoarsely at eleven football heroes or a few star athletes while wearing out the seat of one's trousers on the bleachers may develop leadership in the few but not in the many. Still there is nothing like sports and student activities for training leaders, especially when there are many groups competing. Students should be required to participate in them and each man given an opportunity to land a position which will give him direction over other men.

TOMMY

When Tommy came up to college,
He looked carefully all about him,
And observed
That the preëminently popular persons
Were the athletes,
And the sports,
And the paradoxically designated Society-Men.
And Tommy was no fool.
So he straightway devoted himself most ardently
To a wholly monotonous and barren stretch of territory
Called a cinder track.
And he ran doggedly around this stretch of territory,
Girded, as far as the naked eye could see,
In his B-V-D's,
Every day.
And the colder the weather, the faster he ran.
Until at last he was able To run around that flat, unprofitable stretch of territory
Thirty-two times
In less minutes
And seconds
Than anyone else in the whole college.
And he observed with gladness
That he was indeed becoming preëminently popular.
And Tommy also became a sport
So far as he dared
Without devitalizing his magnificent legs.
He learned to play cards
For two-penny stakes,
And to smoke,
And to drink,
And to swear,—
Not vulgarly like the proletariat,
But with a certain dash
And bravado;
And he also learned to pose
In virile attitudes

And varsity dress.
And he knew from the way that the freshmen observed him
That he was indeed becoming preëminently popular.
And Tommy further and lastly aspired to be
One of the paradoxically designated Society-Men.
And he found that it was very simple to be one
So long as he had the "kale";
For the girls didn't seem to care how much he knew
Or what he talked about
Or what he proposed to accomplish in the world,
So long as he could fox-trot,
And was good-looking enough to pass in a crowd,
And paid for the taxis and flowers.
And Tommy had besides
A perfectly irresistible way
Of saying
"Blue-eyes, lie down."
So he found that he was becoming ultra-preëminently popular Indeed.
And he didn't bother very much about the professors,
Though of course they were all
Dear, simple old souls,
And meant well enough
In their way.
And he did not become in the tiniest degree familiar
With anything which was characterized as work.
And after he had learned the expression "high-brow,"
He carefully avoided the dominions of culture.
But he was finally granted a degree
And had been preëminently popular all the time.
And then he applied for a job,
Almost any old job at that.
But he found that the men who had all the jobs in their charge,
Cared nothing to speak of,
For his speedy and symmetrical legs,
Or his varsity sportiness,
Or "Blue-eyes, lie down."
And he wanted a job.
But at last he got one
In a school
As instructor in Greek,

Of which he knew nothing at all,
 And in running,
 Of which he knew more;
 And thus in preparing
 The sons of wealthy men
 To enter college,
 And become athletes,
 And sports,
 And the paradoxically designated Society-Men,
 And so the preëminently popular persons in the college.

And now, Gentle Reader,
 If you are thinking these lines are not poetry,
 You are possibly right;
 But they are rather unpleasantly true.

CHI AND ETA DEUTERON EXCEL IN SCHOLARSHIP

During commencement week, June, 1920, it was announced at Williams College that the Interfraternity Scholarship Cup for the year just closed had been won by the local chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa.

The following report from the secretary of Eta Deuteron at the University of Nevada is equally gratifying: "We had no failures and stood first, with a good margin, over all the other fraternities, locals included."

MY MOST PLEASANT RECOLLECTION IN PHI SIGMA KAPPA

By LELAND F. CASS, B '21

My most pleasant recollection in connection with Phi Sigma Kappa is one—not of some good time I have had with the boys at a banquet or other fraternal affair where great goodfellowship has prevailed—but rather it is a thought in admiration for the spirit of each and every man in Beta Chapter.

One year ago we were without a house. We had but little money on hand with which to get one. And, moreover, we were most strongly advised not to proceed with a campaign to raise money for a house. But we went ahead seeing only success. Every man sacrificed some of his time, gave something of his energy, contributed financially and, in short, did his share freely and gladly. All things were possible with our men. To-day we have a four-story house on one of the finest streets in Albany, we maintain a table, and we have this house completely furnished from top to bottom. Everything within it belongs to Beta Chapter, and her men earned it all.

It is this spirit of fraternal love, of self-sacrificing effort, emblematic of high personal character, so much to be desired in real brotherhood, that gives me my best recollection of Phi Sigma Kappa.

By REV. CHARLES A. ANDERSON, X '12

The general impression of retrospect is a happy fellowship strengthened by mutual responsibilities in the chapter. Perhaps the pleasantest recollection lingers about the farewell banquet senior year coming as the consummation of a genial comradeship at least with the members of one's own delegation. The cleverly satirical introduction in verse by the toastmaster, whose editorial ability now finds scope in the SIGNET, produced the setting for the serio-comic speeches by the seniors who gave voice to a conglomerate philosophy of college life, distilled out of four years of wisdom and designed for underclass consumption, combined with grateful testimony to the worth of the fraternity; all of which was punctuated by canned humor pried from a file of magazines graciously proffered by our beloved Founder in the sanctum of the college library. The atmosphere was electric with personal feeling which welded our fraternal bonds together for aye.

By NORMAN G. SHIDLE,  $\Phi$  '17

Phi Sigma Kappa is continually building more and more pleasant recollections for me. But post-college recollections differ from those of undergraduate days. They are perhaps of a deeper and more significant kind, but they cannot compare in vigor and intensity with the memories of the years spent in the active chapter. To these latter memories I must go to seek the most pleasant recollection.

The return to college for the beginning of my senior year holds for me the most pleasant recollection of Phi Sigma Kappa. In three years I had learned to the fullest the meaning of Phi Chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa as defined in the ritual; and I had found that definition true in its deepest sense. I had experienced that greatest of human joys, close friendships; friendships cemented and mellowed by constant association, by long talks through the "wee small hours," by a sharing of the fascinating hopes and fears of college life, and by the fighting together of more than one of life's real battles—battles that must be fought by every young chap while he is still young.

With these memories behind me, then, I returned for those last nine months. We gathered a few days early. There were about twenty-two of us—old chums. We planned the rushing campaign, we proposed achievements for the chapter and its members during the coming college year, and we began that last series of midnight vigils in which true friendships are bred and nourished and in which a man's soul is bared. With enthusiasm and eagerness we met that fall—my last in college—and I seemed to feel a peculiar pressure in the grip and a peculiar joy in the meeting.

And we did plan; we did succeed. And everlasting friendships were made certain. That time is my most pleasant recollection of Phi Sigma Kappa. We were graduated under the lash of the War God's whip, and scattered under the curse of his tongue. There was no time for sentimental partings. Two of those classmate brothers, who helped make that last fall so dear to me, have gone "far on that distant shore"; one in an airplane accident during the war, the other as a result of a weakened constitution after three years on the firing line. I constantly wonder where they have gone—and why. But even the sense of loss which their going has engendered cannot take away the wonderfully sweet memory of that fall when we gathered for the last campaign.

By "ALPHA '13"

It was the latter part of 1914; Pancho Villa, then at the crest of success, held Mexico City and the country to the north. His men combed every train that left the border, on the watch for Carranzista agents, demanding from every traveler a glimpse of the Villa government "safe-conduct." The colonel, who had worked slowly through the train as we rolled southward, ignored my American passport, and as I had failed to provide myself with the little rag of official document for which he was looking, he blandly suggested that I leave the train at Ahumada, take the next train north and arm myself with the proper credentials before heading south again. Arguments were useless. So the departing south-bound left me sixty miles from El Paso in that highly unimproved sand-lot, the state of Chihuahua. Two adobe huts quivering in the sun composed the town; a freight car served as station; along the tracks as far as one could see lay fire-twisted rails, reminders of a previous revolution. Some ten miles away was Carribal, where, eighteen months later a few troopers from Pershing's column would be ambushed by hopeless odds. All about stretched the dusty-green desolation of sagebrush and cactus. The next passenger train north was not due for twelve hours; the following day was Sunday—the government offices closed, of course; it would be impossible to get under way for the south again until Tuesday, for the Monday train left at daylight. There are occasions when even a bilingual vocabulary is inadequate.

"When's the next car for Amherst?" a deep "gringo" voice called out. I turned, puzzled for a moment to recall the voice and the half-remembered face. The familiar pearl-studded pin flashed beneath his coat: Brother Bill X! Four years had passed since we shook good-bye in the group before the old Art Museum in Boston. Have you ever had emotion surge up from your feet to the crown of your hat, and fairly lift you from the ground? The glory of your initiation banquet is vivid long after the toasts are done and the snake-dance ended; ten years cannot dim the recollections of the Phi Sig conventions you were lucky enough to attend. But for the gorgeous rainbow thrill, the sunburst of satisfaction, I commend to you the fraternal hand-shake in the desert, when a moment before your nearest friend was a thousand miles away. For it you would pass unheeding the Kohinoor sparkling in its blue clay. As a fraternity experience it is supreme.

How the talk poured out, and reminiscence wagged, the heat, dust and discomfort forgotten. Our southern destinations, some three days ahead, were identical; each had found an unexpected comrade; we thanked our Villista colonel who had arranged this pleasant circumstance.

Ahumada offers nothing in the way of sights and local lions; from the center of the town you can flick a match-stick into the suburbs. Noon baked down upon the few dusty pepper trees, as we rested our case on an under-done, over-aged game-cock, and paid off the venerable woman who had slain and prepared it for us. A bench in the shade was inviting; a sleeping dog stirred enough to lift his head curiously as we sat down, then dropped it again with a sigh; a lean pig loafed by, stolid but friendly, regarding us hopefully with a moist eye. Another hour passed with smoke and congenial talk.

Far down the track appeared a puff of steam, and the sound of the whistle lazed down the still air; presently a north-bound freight pulled in. An interview with the conductor, with unspoken asides in silver, smoothed all irregularities away, and we climbed into the conning-tower of the caboose with the comfortable knowledge that we would reach Juarez in time to get our passports that night and start southward again the next morning. So that unofficial convention closed, and the delegates trundled north reflecting that while lotus-eating will never flourish there, Ahumada is not the worst place on earth for a reunion; its superb natural disadvantages do provide a contrasting background for good luck.

By WALTER W. BURNS,  $\Lambda$  '11

My most impressive recollection in connection with Phi Sigma Kappa was on September 26, 1918. I had been on duty about all night as adjutant and operations officer of 1st Battalion, 57th Artillery, C. A. C., at Montzeville, north of Verdun. About seven-thirty A. M. our battalion commander told me to go out and get the air. The prisoners and wounded were coming in. As I stood on the roadside watching the trucks of wounded come past, a truck-load of "walking" cases approached, and from the load of muddy faces and tin hats I suddenly heard someone yell, "Burns, Burns." He was waving one arm frantically; the other hung limp at his side. I hopped on the truck and rode about one hundred yards, far enough to learn that it was Lieut. Brother Ira N. Hellberg of the 79th Division, wounded near the shoulder. He had been one of my enlisted men in the George Washington University Company and was very close to me.

By ROBERT M. ZACHARIAS, II and  $\Lambda$  '13

Pain, like pleasure, can be exquisite, and often leaves upon the memory a much more lasting impression. While there are many incidents, in connection with the fraternity, which were full to the brim with unalloyed pleasure, it is difficult to call them back with the vividness with which the banquet at the Baltimore convention recurs to my mind. We had developed an orator in the person of Brother Clarence B. Des Jardins, and I had taken upon myself the task of grooming him for the response for Lambda Chapter. He felt, and I agreed, though with misgivings, that a few trips downstairs might put a little added punch behind his remarks. Possibly some fast worker was assisting me unawares, or possibly it was because, in my anxiety, I failed to keep pace with him, but certainly he was overtrained, and gave to the assembled brothers that reiterated advice that "We thought there would be a good time here, so we came. Now we're here. We're only forty miles away."

Having erred, I erred again. We had engaged a room together, and instead of getting in condition to compete with him, or finding other quarters, I retired, thinking the "punch" would be disseminated by the time he appeared. I was finally aroused and was sent for him, and found that the "punch" had accumulated. He surely can, under such conditions, do the same thing over and over consistently and without variations, and when we had both gotten to bed, and he started to snore in the manner only too well known to me, I knew I was in for it. I had slept in the same room with him in the Lambda Chapter House, and secretly believe he had been unable to persuade anyone else to share a room with him at the convention because he sleeps with so much effort, but I had always been able to "turn him off" by throwing tennis balls at him, or using other little expedients which cannot be mentioned here.

When he got under way, he developed a repertoire of assorted noises, surpassing a barnyard, zoo, and free-for-all fight combined, with delicate little imitations of one strangling. To any of the individual sounds I was more or less accustomed, but the combination overpowered me, and when I recognized a definite sequence in them, a kind of cycle, I was desperate, knowing that the repetition, like the dropping of water on a stone, would relentlessly wear me out. I lighted the room, and began a systematic effort to stop him, using all the cunning of years of experience, and all my strength. The noise continued, and I could not even waken him, though I tried kicking, dragging him about the room, smothering, strangling, and the water cure. After a time, I recovered from my disgust and anger, giving up all idea of sleep, and took a rather scientific interest in my work. I found that by choking him when the strangling noise was due, I could prevent it, and if his face became blue, the sobbing noise which usually followed it was almost suppressed. The water, however, had a crescendo effect, and his position no effect whatever. Having exhausted the possibilities of scientific study, I read till daylight, while Des repeated with a majesty suggestive of the solar system. For several days I avoided him and am now willing to forgive, though I cannot forget; but I can never forgive myself for not following my "hunch" to put him in the tub, turn on the water, and see if he would gurgle.

By LIEUT.-COL. THOMAS DUNCAN, M '05

Of all my recollections I think the most pleasant is of the night of my initiation. I do not believe that the boys take as much time for initiations now as they did back in 1903. For several hours three of us were put through all sorts of hazing, not knowing what we might next expect, and then came the ceremony of the initiation, which I have always considered very beautiful and impressive. I was in a state of bewilderment, and did not know whether it would be concluded that night or whether there would be some other ceremony at a later date, and I shall never forget the feeling of relief and delight with which I realized that I was all through when the crowd began congratulating me and giving me the grip.

By GEORGE K. SHIELDS, Z '13

Among a host of recollections of Zeta, perhaps the most pleasant is one of the most recent. The first meeting of Zeta Chapter after the armistice will always stay with me as the best illustration I've known of the saying "A man may be down but he's never out."

Zeta is proud to say that the war left her at the lowest ebb her fortunes had ever experienced. With a chapter roll of sixteen, fifteen men had been accepted for service. Yet hardly was the ink dry on the parchment that marked the end of the war than a group of "Old Reliables" gathered together to discuss ways and means for removing the blight that the war had inflicted on the chapter. A telephone call here, a personal appeal there and they came, many still in uniform. A hasty, last-minute message brought Dr. Conley. Not a perfunctory call this, but an early arrival and a late stay, and bringing with him a fine enthusiasm for the work of the fraternity in the war and a contagious optimism concerning our future prosperity.

Time and space permitting, I should be glad to tell of the details of the meeting, of the generous and self-sacrificing offers of help. But suffice it to say that when the group broke up, plans were already under way to build a stronger, and if that were possible, a better Zeta to stand as a memorial to those of her sons who so well vindicated the ideals of their fraternity and chapter. How well they worked we of Zeta know. To-day Zeta Chapter is experiencing her greater prosperity and a substantial fund has been raised to realize the dream of all Zeta men—a home for Zeta Chapter.

My most pleasant recollection in connection with Phi Sigma Kappa is a very recent one. It was my great pleasure last June, after having been out of college for five years, to return for commencement and the first reunion of my class. Of course, I went to the fraternity house soon after reaching town, to see the fellows and to find out how things were going with the chapter. As I had expected, I found a splendid bunch of fellows and soon learned that the chapter was in splendid condition.

That night all the local members and many old grads gathered for an old-fashioned talk fest and a good smoke fest. Everyone was enthusiastic about the work and welfare of the chapter. We soon learned that the site for the new house had been purchased and we immediately began making plans and pledges for the new house. It was good to hear of the progress which the chapter had made since I left college and of the fine outlook for the future.

The next evening came the house party such as only Phi Sigma Kappa men can put on. The old house was transformed by the beautiful decorations, and merriment reigned supreme until the wee small hours of the morning.

I continued to revel in Phi Sigma Kappa spirit and fellowship for several more days and was indeed sorry when the call of work brought me back to the humdrum of every-day life.

Ah friend, it cannot be!
You may be very sage, yet—all the world
Having to fail, or your sagacity,
You do not wish to find yourself alone!
What would the world be worth? Whose love be sure?

THE ALUMNI CLUBS

What about the alumni clubs, anyway?

We have reached a point where we publicly admit two dead, or at least comatose, chapters. Altogether it is a fortunate admission of an unfortunate fact. We feel better now that we have said it. There is some wholesome advocacy of chloroform for any other chapters which may become too feeble to take delight in the functions of living. After all death is not the worst thing which may come to a chapter. It is the purpose of this sketch to hold an inquest upon some of the alumni clubs.

It is well to bear in mind that the Founders of our national order intended great things of the alumni clubs, and that the New York Club dates back very nearly to the establishment of Beta Chapter in Albany. In those early days it met at regular intervals and provided something in the way of literary entertainment for its members. It seems to have been the plan that it should function quite as actively as the undergraduate chapters themselves, and indeed in much the same way.

We must not forget that at this time it was the intention of the leaders in the fraternity that the direction of the affairs of the organization should be largely in the hands of the alumni. The first draft of the national constitution presented to a convention for acceptance allowed the chapters two votes apiece in such assemblies, alumni and chapter presidents one, and the alumni clubs four. But we have gotten a long distance away from that now. It is a rare convention in which the undergraduates could not swamp the alumni if they so desired. And this lends some significance to the comparatively recent assumption of the authority of granting new charters on the part of the convention.

There is no reason for dodging the fact that the fraternity to-day is largely of the undergraduates, by the undergraduates and for the undergraduates. As alumni we are fraternity men in the same sense that we are college men, reminiscently and upon occasion. We are loyal and interested, good for a banquet every year or two, willing to contribute a little money, some of us, but not inclined to make the institution a part of our daily lives. If we have a liking for fraternalism, we go into the Masons, and the new interest largely absorbs the old. This is not an indictment; it is simply lesson A in elementary psychology.

Now if these things are as stated, we should expect the alumni clubs to have become rather perfunctory affairs. And indeed they seem to have become so. When the present editor took over the SIGNET, he attempted for two or three years to canvas them for news. Of the secretaries of the twelve clubs at that time, only one answered his letter, and he reported "not much active work." Later the editor succeeded in getting word from four of the clubs, and later still from five others. In most instances the secretary reported an annual dinner; in one instance he reported that the club was no longer in existence. At the Worcester convention only six out of fourteen clubs made any report at all. The constitution reads: "This Club shall file with the secretary of the Council annually on the first day of June, a report of the work done and the condition of the Club." Not one of the fourteen clubs has so reported this year.

Now this does not mean that all of the clubs are dead. It is fair to suppose that some of them may be revived sufficiently to send in some report for the Chicago convention. It is quite possible that the war, which has borne the blame for so many of our troubles, may be legitimately expected to bear it for one more. It is wholly probable that the clubs may be as active in 1921 as they were five years ago, but they are not likely to be much more so, and they were not very active then. It would seem that the Chicago convention might well consider the whole question of clubs; it is possible that wisdom assembled may shed a saving light.

The SIGNET has no recommendations to make at this time. It is simply incurring a rather discreditable publicity in the hope that salutary reactions may follow. It hopes that the fraternity may look at the situation squarely and take up some constructive policy.

It almost goes without saying that no alumni club is going to be very active without headquarters. If the New York fellows could swing a down-town clubhouse with social and hotel accommodations, the club would be active enough and there would be many out-of-town men who would be glad to pay a non-residence fee. But the expense of such a project in New York or any of the other cities is almost prohibitive. There are so many other things which the brothers need and desire more than they do a clubhouse. Still fraternity alumni do value such things, and some of the fraternities have brought them to pass. The house would create the interest; the interest would create the house. It is the old woman's ancient dream: "If I had some ham, I'd had some ham and eggs, if I had some eggs."

It has been our custom to attempt to provide headquarters for the alumni club, wherever possible, in the local chapter house. It cannot be said that this plan has been particularly successful. Even if the alumni were inclined to make a rendezvous of the boys' campus home, which they never are, it would be a doubtful blessing for the boys. There are too many distractions on the campus already; it is altogether fortunate that little inducement for the local alumni is to be found in the chapter houses. Thus headquarters of this character are largely nominal and cannot stimulate very much interest.

As a matter of fact the existence of a chapter in a community ought to obviate the need of a local alumni organization. It would seem the most natural thing in the world for the boys to hold three or four social functions during the year and round up the local alumni for the occasion. It would be wholly natural, too, for them to hold little informal discussions every other Sunday night, inviting two or three alumni to come in to present the subject, and supplying all the local alumni with a program for the season and a standing invitation to drop in as convenient. It is for the best interests of the chapter to tie up with the alumni within reach.

The real function of the alumni clubs seems, in the final analysis, to be practically that of the local alumni clubs of the colleges—to provide just enough organization to keep up some intelligent interest in the college. In that connection it is suggested that Phi Sigma Kappa hold an annual world founders' day banquet. On the fifteenth of March, or possibly the nearest Saturday to it, let every chapter hold its annual banquet, and in every community where there is no chapter, let the brothers also gather for banquet, in one of their homes or at a hotel as their numbers make appropriate. Let this supplant any similar occasions now in vogue, and make it as universal as possible.

If the alumni clubs are to perform a function such as has been outlined, it is obvious that they ought to be as numerous as possible and comparatively free from formal obligations of all kinds. There would seem to be no need of charter or charter fee or periodic reports to the Council. And of course they would hardly expect to vote upon amendments to the constitution and changes of the place of convention. In fact it is questionable whether they would require any constitutional provision at all.

It is doubtful if the convention will see its way sufficiently clearly to take any very decisive action. It should, however, stir up the matter a little, and perhaps pass one or two practical suggestions in the nature of experiment. Possibly it might be well for the Council to refuse to grant any more club charters for the present; there is no reason why we should not have both chartered and unchartered clubs for a while. Certainly if a club dies, we ought to view the remains, call in the charter and erase its name from our roll. And the living clubs ought to be expected to give sufficient evidence of life so that they may be distinguished from the dead ones. Perhaps, indeed, it is a matter for the Council rather than the convention.

The editor has tried almost painfully to avoid being arbitrary in presenting the facts of the case. He has never belonged to a club and is conscious of his ignorance. He imagines that some of his readers who know, or think, themselves to be club officers will be writing him letters soon. He hopes that they will.

Work!
Thank God for the might of it,
The ardor, the urge, the delight of it—
Work that springs from the heart's desire,
Setting the brain and the soul on fire—
Oh, what is so good as the heat of it,
And what is so good as the beat of it,
And what is so kind as the stern command,
Challenging brain, and heart, and hand?

T N E AND OTHERS

The following resolutions have been adopted by the Executive Committee of the Inter-Fraternity Conference as expressing their attitude in a vital matter :

WHEREAS, there exist in various colleges and universities certain irresponsible organizations, under various names, that are antagonistic to academic and fraternity ideals, among them T. N. E., which has been repeatedly condemned in fraternity conventions throughout the country and in this conference; and

WHEREAS, it appears that hazing is practiced by certain of these organizations, and also persists in some fraternities or chapters thereof, contrary to the better traditions and more modern customs in fraternity life; be it

Resolved, that it is the sense of this Executive Committee of the Inter-Fraternity Conference that such organizations and such practices should be condemned by all loyal fraternity men; that every member of this Conference should place itself on record as unalterably opposed to such organizations, and should furthermore take steps to rid itself of members who continue to belong to T. N. E. or any similar organization; that the fraternities in this Conference should also condemn hazing by any student organization at any time in any form as dangerous and silly, as opposed to the dignity and ideals of college fraternities, and as injurious to their good name, and that they should take steps to eliminate any such practice from their own organizations if the same be indulged in; and further

Resolved, that a copy of this action be sent to each fraternity in the conference prior to the opening of the coming college year, for publication in its magazine, and to Banta's Greek Exchange.

Respectfully yours,

JAMES DUANE LIVINGSTON

FALL RUSHING

In this issue of the Watchword we are publishing a recommendation blank. You will find it on the last page and it can easily be detached without injury to the paper. We are asking that Alumni members devote even more than usual attention to this matter, for more than ever do we want the good men that you may know. Requirements for pledging are going to be unusually severe this year. Scholarship and financial ability will be paramount factors. The university is each year becoming more exacting in its scholastic demands and we cannot take men who are not capable of meeting the new standards. Prices are higher than ever before and a man who is financially unable to join does a great injustice to himself and the organization when he takes such a burden on his shoulders. This does not mean that we want a bunch of thick-spectacled aristocrats, but that a man must be a student and financially able before we can consider his other qualifications. We ask that you devote special effort this Fall to this duty to your Fraternity.—Watchword of Alpha Deuteron.

BETWEEN OURSELVES

RELATIVE to the matter of chapter delinquents an Alpha alumnus talked with the editor recently, something like this: "We never had very much trouble with chapter delinquents in my day. In two or three instances when a brother didn't seem to want to pay his bill, four or five of us would pay it for him and give him his receipted statement. That would always shame him so completely that he would promptly reimburse us and would never subject himself to a similar humiliation again."

THE idea of a fraternity examination such as appears in this issue of the SIGNET is not a new idea. It is, however, a very good one. As far as we know, the plan has been more elaborately tested by Delta Upsilon than by any other fraternity. This spring five hundred and sixty of their new members wrote the paper, and their names and grades appear in the June quarterly. It is a matter of casual interest that the highest average was obtained by the chapter at Brown.

AT least four other national fraternities—Sigma Chi, Theta Chi, Kappa Sigma, and Delta Sigma Phi—are now engaged in the publication of a fraternity history.

IT seems to us fitting that some record be published for the benefit of the alumni, relative to the faithfulness of the chapters in sending to the Grand Secretary the quarterly reports. In general the record is creditable. The following chapters, which may be constituted our Roll of Honor, have sent in every one of the last six reports, covering the three quarters of the college year 1919-1920:

Stevens
Minnesota
Iowa
Michigan
Worcester.

The following failed in only one instance and should receive, perhaps, an honorable mention:

Pennsylvania State
Lehigh
Nevada.

No chapter failed to send in any report at all, with the exception of Maryland, which was in the hands of its alumni pending reconstruction and reported upon by them. The following chapters, however, sent in only one report out of six and most nearly qualify for a Roll of Dishonor if there were one:

Union

Yale

Massachusetts Institute of Technology

St. John's.

THE fact that the changes in the SIGNET mailing list during the spring quarter ran up to $85.00 on the printer's bill is a reminder that the day will surely come when further provision must be made for the support of the fraternity magazine. Our present practice, by which the SIGNET goes to every alumnus whose address is known to the Council, is so nearly ideal that its abandonment would be looked upon with dismay by most of the leaders in the Brotherhood. At present the magazine is running partly on its reserve fund, and if the cost of printing lets up a little, it may be able to continue for a while longer on its present engine. But the time will soon come when it must have either a larger horse-power or a lighter load. The former means a heavier Grand Chapter tax; the latter a subscription list and a manager's office to keep it alive. If any of our Wall Street wizards have other suggestions to make, we trust that they will make them soon, while there is still time. Any designs upon the editor's humble honorarium will be discarded upon sight.

FOUR different brothers sent in to the editor newspaper reports of the passing of Dr. W. W. Scofield, Beta '86. In itself this is a commentary upon the man. Its significance is deepened by the fact that Dr. Scofield was initiated into Phi Sigma Kappa only a few years ago and as a graduate member. His son and other Dalton boys were members of Chi Chapter, and his interest followed theirs into the fraternity so wholeheartedly that he later helped the chapter substantially upon the occasion of its purchasing a house. It was largely to meet the desires of the Williams men that the chapter at Albany made him a graduate member of the fraternity. It is of interest to note in connection with this man, so genuine and catholic in his affections, that he was intolerant not only of the use of liquor but also of tobacco.

THE Council has received reassuring statements of reliable nature concerning the anti-fraternity agitation in the university and state of Wisconsin. That such agitation developed during the spring is not denied, but it seems to have been of rather a sporadic character and not particularly dangerous. The fraternities, however, have been taking every caution and have done considerable personal work among the assemblymen in the way of educating them to the real character of the fraternities at the university. The faculty is sympathetic toward the fraternities. The legislature does not convene until January, a fact disadvantageous to antagonistic forces. Phi Sigma Kappa is represented in that body by Arnold C. Otto, who has the welfare of the Greeks very much at heart. All in all the reports are favorable to our cause.

IN this connection it is of interest to note that Nebraska Wesleyan has lifted the ban upon fraternities and the faculty of the Michigan Agricultural College has recently made a similar recommendation to the state board of agriculture.

DURING the past two years the Council has been in correspondence regarding possible charter grants in the following institutions: Purdue, Clarkson, Kansas, Connecticut Aggie, Chicago, Nebraska Wesleyan, Armour, and Ohio State. In some instances it didn't get very far, but the slant is unmistakably westward.

MR. HARDING'S foreword is an American and not a partisan utterance, and no Phi Sigma Kappa Democrat is worthy of Mr. Cox unless he can read it sympathetically, even in a presidential year. Both parties can stand a further infusion of both "patriotism and religion" without harm.

IT may be of interest to some that the editorial "Our Kind" which appeared in last December's SIGNET has been reprinted in full in at least two other fraternity journals.

DURING the war, as an emergency measure, Delta Upsilon established alumni boards of three for each chapter, appointed from the local alumni in each instance. These boards proved so highly efficacious that they are to be continued as a part of the permanent organization of the fraternity. Some of the chapters in Phi Sigma Kappa are finding rich possibilities in our own alumni advisers; others have been slow in giving the scheme a trial. We are firmly convinced that the alumni adviser will eventually become absolutely indispensable, and that a board of one is preferable to a board of three.

THE poet's allusion to the autumn as "the melancholy days" is pure balderdash to people connected with our colleges. With them October marks the beginning of new things, the opening of new opportunities. And so to every chapter in Phi Sigma Kappa the SIGNET herewith extends its seasonal wish—a happy new year and a good one.

THE CHAPTER INVISIBLE

RICHARD D. BROOKE, PHI '17

Dick Brooke died on February 3, 1920. He had been ill with inflammatory rheumatism, probably as a result of exposure during the war, and was convalescing, when pneumonia hit him. Dick wore the Croix de Guerre for exceptional bravery in action. He served with the Ambulance Corps, was actually on the firing line for over two years, and took part in every major engagement in which the United States participated. He was one of the most promising men Phi ever had. His unusual ability as a writer is indicated by the fact that the New Republic published an article by him during his junior year in college. His exceptional tenor voice won him both prizes and gifts in France and Belgium. He was a man who is greatly missed.

A. HANSELL OLD, MU '08

The following statement is from H. Norman Old: "I regret to inform you that my brother died on February 22 last, of pneumonia, at St. John, N. B., after an attack of influenza, aggravated, no doubt, by lowered resistance incidental to injuries received while on active duty with the Third Tunneling Company, Canadian Engineers, in France and Germany, at which time he was badly gassed and shell-shocked. On February 16, while down here near the Gulf, I received a wire from a government hospital in Canada that Hanse was seriously ill, and after a four-day trip, succeeded in reaching him twenty-four hours before he passed away."

DR. WALTER W. SCOFIELD, BETA '86

The following obituary of Brother Scofield appeared in the Springfield Republican of July 7 under Dalton (Mass.) news and with a picture:

Dr. Walter W. Scofield, sixty-six, a practicing physician here for the past thirty-six years, died at 12.30 this afternoon after an illness of fifteen months at his Main Street home. His death was due to a general breaking down after years of strenuous work in a wide territory in the Berkshire Hills. No matter when Dr. Scofield was called he was ever ready and willing to respond.

He was born in Westerlo, Albany County, N. Y., May 16, 1854. He attended Rensselaer Academy, a preparatory school there, and later the Albany Normal School. He was graduated at the Albany Medical College in 1882 and after serving in the Albany Hospital for eighteen months came to Dalton in the fall of 1883, where he had since followed his profession with splendid success.

On January 29, 1884, he married Miss Charlotte A. Wands of New Scotland, N. Y. He was a cherished member of Dalton Methodist Church, held membership in Unity Lodge of Masons, the American Medical Association and Berkshire Medical Society and was an honorary member of the Phi Sigma Kappa.

Dr. Scofield was especially interested in Dalton and was public-spirited, generous and hospitable. He also manifested intense interest in the Methodist church.

The Berkshire County Eagle commented editorially upon his death as follows:

Dr. Scofield, who died at his home in Dalton yesterday, was a fine type of the good old-fashioned country doctor. He was the family doctor, friend and often councilor. Not many doctors of this kind remain and the few left are slowly passing away. This is the day of the specialist and a family of any account has at least half a dozen of these on its list. Personally Dr. Scofield was a fine type of man whether acting professionally or as a neighbor and citizen. He was trusted and respected by everybody who knew him and all these will regret his passing.

PETITIONERS

The Council and Court have voted to recommend to the convention the granting of charters to two petitioning clubs. Without giving definite names it might be well to publish a few facts concerning them.

The first is located at the Oregon Agricultural College, an institution about fifty years old, excellently equipped, and having a faculty of over one hundred and fifty and a student body of over three thousand. The authorities are sympathetic towards fraternity life and inclined to do everything proper to promote it. Among the national fraternities established there are: A T O, S A E, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Chi, Theta Chi, Sigma Nu, Lambda Chi Alpha, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Phi Delta Theta, and others. There are several locals. The petitioning club, although still young, is well established, is renting a pleasant house and has over a thousand dollars in its sinking fund. Its men are active in campus affairs and during the last term of which we have record, the third term of last year, led all the other fraternities on the campus in scholarship. The officers of the college speak very highly of it. Among its honorary members is the governor of the state. Delegates for the Council have visited the society and recommend it without reserve. The San Francisco Club and Omega Chapter also urge granting the charter. The recommendations from disinterested parties in Corvallis are uniformly favorable.

The second petitioning club is in Pennsylvania College of Gettysburg, founded in 1832 within sight of the famous battlefield. It gives the degrees of bachelor of arts and of science. There are four hundred and fifty students enrolled, of which forty are women. Many of its graduates take up advanced courses at the University of Pennsylvania. The national fraternities located there are: A T O, Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Kappa Psi, S A E, and Sigma Chi. The petitioning club has been visited by a member of the Court and seems to be an unusually strong one. In fact it has been established for twenty-three years and has a total membership of about one hundred and fifty. There were twenty-eight actives this year. They own property valued at $4,000, lightly mortgaged. In every respect it is a substantial organization, humanly speaking a permanent one. It has been reported to the Council that Mu is particularly desirous that this charter be granted for reasons of affiliation. The club is highly recommended by both Phi Sigma Kappa men and Gettysburg officials. It publishes a semi-annual magazine of thirty pages.

NU MAN MADE PRESIDENT OF AMERICAN CYANAMID COMPANY

Nu Chapter takes great pleasure in announcing to the Fraternity at large the elevation of one of her charter members, "Doc" Landis, Lehigh '02, to the presidency of the American Cyanamid Company, 511 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Walter Savage Landis hails from Pottstown, Pa., being born in the early eighties. He was educated in the public schools at Pottstown, and at Orlando, Fla., and after taking a preparatory course in the Bethlehem Preparatory School, entered Lehigh University and graduated with honors with the Class of 1902 as a metallurgical engineer, later in 1906 taking the degree of Master of Science.

For some years after graduating from college he remained with the teaching force and in a short while reached the position of Associate Professor of the University in the Departments of Mineralogy, Metallurgy and Electro-metallurgy. In 1912 he was appointed Chief Technologist of the American Cyanamid Company and has just lately been elected President of that same company. "Doc" is one of Lehigh's best-known chemists and is considered an authority in the United States on the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen. He is a member of American Electrochemical Society, American Chemical Society, American Institute of Chemical Engineers, American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, Chemists Club, and has written numerous technical papers on electrochemical subjects, published in Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, Metallurgical and Chemical Engineers, Journal of American Chemical Society, Transactions American Electrochemical Society and Transactions American Society of Chemical Engineers.

A former roommate of his while in college gives the following more personal touch to his achievements:

"'Doc,' while undoubtedly the brightest man in his class, was never stigmatized as a 'fiend.' He was a natural genius, since I remember very well that he coached some of the more backward members of his class in calculus while he was taking the subject for the first time himself. He probably did less actual work while in college than any other man in his class, being always ready to participate in any of the usual class and college activities, and, while he did not shine as an 'L' man, he took considerably more time for recreation of various kinds than most men, due undoubtedly to his wonderful power of concentration."

As stated above, he was a charter member of Nu Chapter and one of its strongest supporters during the trials and tribulations of its early chapter life and it is through this medium that the chapter desires to publicly congratulate "Doc" on his recent appointment and wish him and the American Cyanamid Company the very best that we can offer for his future success.

H. R. W., N '03

TWO GRADUATE MEMBERS

The Council and Court have authorized the initiation of two classmates of our Founders, by Alpha Chapter. They are John A. Barri and George M. Niles.

Mr. Barri while in college was popular and athletic. He stroked on the the crew, played baseball and won honors in the military. Since graduation he has been engaged in business, being for many years head of a large fertilizer company with headquarters in Bridgeport and still holding an interest in a coal and grain business in that city.

Mr. Miles after graduation went to Miles City, Montana. There he became interested in farming and real estate, and eventually had a large part in the establishment of a large general store and also of a bank. He is now president of the First National Bank of Miles City.

SAFETY FIRST

Phi Sigma Kappa men will be interested in this experiment being tried by Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

At the National Convention in Buffalo, in June, 1919, it was voted that all chapters in the National Fraternity be divided into four possible groups as per scholastic attainments.

Group I comprises all chapters maintaining an excellent standard of scholarship, that is, one in which there is not more than four percentage of failures per semester, or term.

Group II comprises all chapters maintaining a good standard of scholarship, that is, one in which there is not more than ten percentage of failures per semester, or term.

Group III comprises all chapters maintaining an average standard of scholarship, that is, one in which there is not more than fifteen percentage of failures per semester, or term.

Group IV comprises all chapters maintaining a low standard of scholarship, unworthy of fraternity, that is, one in which there is more than fifteen percentage of failures.

These groups will be tabulated and shown in the subsequent reports of the Standing Committee on Scholarship at the National Conventions. All chapters having no failures recorded against them, but only conditions, the conditions will not be construed as failures until thoroughly investigated by the committee. We believe that the publication of the scholastic rating of all chapters will stimulate such chapters as unfortunately fall into the fourth group and that in a few years time this group will be eliminated. If this can be accomplished, then fraternities will be above criticism in their scholastic attainments.

You will be interested to know that Sigma Alpha Epsilon has twenty-seven chapters that passed through the academic year of 1917-1918 without having more than two failures, three of them without failures or conditions whatsoever, and therefore these three became medal winners. Some chapters had failures in one semester only, others only a single condition in one semester, while another chapter with over forty men put 345 hours in a single semester on the books of the Registrar with an average of 84.6 percent.

The three chapters that were medal winners for the academic year of 1917-1918 were awarded our bronze medal not because of high scholarship, but safe scholarship, that is, each chapter passed through the academic year without having a single failure or condition placed on the books of the Registrar. There were several medal winners for the academic year of 1918-1919, and these successful chapters will receive their medals at the next National Convention, together with those chapters that complete the present academic year without any failures or conditions.

It is obvious that this peculiar and unique award is actually won by the poorest student in the chapter, for the lowest man must pass every subject in which he is registered before his chapter can be a medal winner.

ALUMNI NOTES

The brothers are urged to send in personals about themselves and other alumni, writing all names clearly, and in the case of clippings giving the name and date of the paper concerned.

Walter Brandes, E '16, A '20, received his master of arts degree from George Washington University, May 31, 1920.

Albert L. Clothier, A '09, formerly of the Wood, Clothier & Heberle firm, announces that he has established offices at 111 Broadway, New York City, and is prepared to act in an advisory capacity in tax problems and to represent clients before the proper governmental authorities.

The following clipping from the St. Louis Times of August 10 will be of interest particularly to Lambda men. Barrett was a member of the class of '05.

That Jesse W. Barrett of St. Louis, Republican nominee for Attorney General, may lead the ticket when the complete returns are known, was indicated to-day by the tabulation of votes from twenty-five counties and several cities which were received at Barrett's headquarters in the Third National Bank Building.

Previous to the primary campaign, veteran politicians had predicted that Samuel O'Fallon of Oregon, also a candidate for Attorney General, would poll his largest vote in the rural districts and that in order to defeat him, Barrett would be compelled to make a strong showing in the cities.

Returns from twenty-five counties, however, show that Barrett carried sixteen, ran second in eight and third in only one. Moreover, in these counties Barrett had a plurality of 3,304 over his nearest opponent. This lead, if maintained, will bring Barrett's total plurality to about 50,000 when the final returns are made known.

Joseph D. Porter, X '14, has been transferred from the Cleveland sales office of the Aluminum Company of America to the office of the sales research engineer at Pittsburgh.

G. Terry Curtis, X '14, is in the Toronto office of the Northern Aluminum Company.

John D. Stevens, X '14, is in the general sales office of the Aluminum Company of Pittsburgh.

Col. R. L. Streeter, K '03, is connected with the engineering department of the company referred to above.

E. J. Bunting, Y '08, is en route to South America on the S. S. Vestris. He was recently made advertising manager of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company for Chile, Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay. His new address is Tucuman 773, Buenos Ayres, Argentina.

William A. Shoudy, I '99, has been devoting his summer to an enforced vacation due to an intestinal infection and general breakdown. A letter from Maplewood dated August 16 reports convalescence.

William F. Wood,  $\Xi$  '10, is East this summer primarily as the San Francisco delegate to the Supreme Convention of the Fraternal Order of Orioles at Lynn, Mass., and incidentally to be on hand for the Chicago conclave of Phi Sigma Kappa in November.

Earle H. Thomas,  $\text{EA}$  '13, has been appointed assistant superintendent of the Geo. W. Prentiss Company of Holyoke, Mass.

E. J. Peterson,  $\text{A}$ , secretary to Brother and Congressman C. F. Curry, Jr., has recently written in telling something of their summer activities. Both have been in the Far West, where Brother Curry, who is secretary to the Committee on Territories, has been giving much attention to problems obtaining thereto and incidentally looking over his political fences to insure what his secretary predicts as "the largest majority of any member of Congress" for next November.

Swede Youngstrom,  $\text{Tau}$ 's All-American guard, has been engaged to coach the Amherst football team this fall. John Lentz,  $\text{II}$ , is an advisory member of the coaching staff at Massachusetts Aggie.

Both the president and secretary of the Massachusetts Federation of Farm Bureaus are Alpha men: the former being Mr. Evan F. Richardson and the latter Mr. Fred D. Griggs.

Two of the graduating delegation of Alpha have been retained by the college as members of the staff: George Campbell is the office man for the Alumni Association and field agent for the college, and Bob Hawley is supervisor of exhibits in the extension service.

William A. McIntyre,  $\text{M}$  '04, has been made division sales manager Eastern of the Atlas Portland Cement Company, and has his headquarters in Philadelphia.

Defeat may serve as well as victory
To shake the soul and let the glory out.

MOST all of us know that this year on Nov. 11th, 12th and 13th, the Convention will be held in Chicago.

And every man of us who can attend should consider it his duty to do so. But the local organizations back of this convention are going to make it "your pleasure" to attend this convention.

Whether you are able to arrange your vacation during convention week, at least, save three days of it for the greatest get-together meeting of old  $\Phi \Sigma \kappa$ .

Eastern brothers need the Convention as much as the Convention needs them. (We are not worrying about the Western brothers.)

Any Eastern man who has been West knows what it means of our future development.

Come to the Convention—join around the festive board with your old fraternity brothers and meet the coming generation.

Chicago is preëminently a convention city and glad and able to take care of its visitors.

The Congress Hotel (on the lake front) has assured us of ample accommodations.

The attractions of the Central metropolis are second to none in many respects.

An opportunity is presented to visit local chapters near Chicago and on the way.

By all means bring the ladies. They will be entertained we hope as never before.

BLINDNESS A PRIVILEGE

Frank Schoble, Jr., Mu 1910, Lieutenant in the National Army and permanently blinded in the Argonne, is giving expression in his words and in his life to the finest trait in human character—self-forgetfulness in the interest of others. The following news item, which appeared in the Philadelphia Public Ledger of September 23, demands more than a casual reading; it demands meditation, and reference, and re-consecration. Without intention, it is a challenge.

That it is a glorious privilege to be a blinded soldier—provided that the sacrifice will bring to the realization of the American people the needs of the 75,000 blinded adults in America—was the gist of the message given to the Rotary Club yesterday at their luncheon at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel by Lieutenant Frank Schoble, Jr., who lost his sight permanently as the result of a shrapnel wound suffered in the Argonne Forest in the great war.

Lieutenant Schoble is a son of Frank Schoble, a Rotarian, and was asked to speak to the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon through the agency of Henry W. Buse, special railroad representative of the Underwood Typewriter Co., who acted as chairman at the meeting. The lieutenant passed eighteen months in a hospital, where a vain attempt was made to save one of his eyes. That found to be a failure, he entered General Hospital No. 7, at Gilford, Baltimore, an institution which has since passed into the hands of the Red Cross and is now known as "Red Cross School for the Blind." His message was this.

"Blindness is an attitude—not a condition. The public, until the war, thought of blind persons in the terms of the licensed mendicants who seek charity at the hands of the passers-by. Nothing is ever said about the thousands of successful blind persons, lawyers, doctors, business men, housewives and professional persons of every description.

"One day I was a man amply able to take care of myself. If I could not have done so I was not fit to be a soldier. The next morning I was a piece of baggage, something to be taken care of. Thanks to army surgery and the work of the individuals who represented the various welfare organizations, I was imbued with a spirit and belief in my future and that of other blinded adults that will last me throughout my life. I learned to read, I learned to write, and more than anything else I learned to appreciate what a hand on the shoulder and a cheering word meant. Everything that a grateful government and self-sacrificing individual welfare workers could think of to make me a self-supporting citizen was placed at my disposal. I saw that the most cheerful men in all the hospitals were those who had been permanently blinded.

"But the question that was raised in my mind is whether or not the soldier is the only blinded person who shall benefit by this new system of training. The blind soldier represents the blind of America because he knows what this government can do, and he cannot fall down on the job. Blind persons have been poorly advertised. The people of the whole country benefit by the education of the blind and they should be made to understand that the same treatment that has been accorded the 157 men blinded in the war should be extended to the 75,000 blind adults in America to-day. If the blinding of that 157 has attracted the attention of the American people to the needs of the 75,000 others—if the treatment accorded us means the dawn of a new era for the others—I can say from my heart that it is a privilege to be one of that number."

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

The nineteenth general convention of Phi Sigma Kappa convened in the Congress Hotel, Chicago, at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of November 11. Only four chapters—Eta, Theta, Omega and Eta Deuteron—were not represented by delegates. Alpha Deuteron had thirty-three representatives on the voting list, Beta Deuteron eleven, Gamma ten. The president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the Council were present, and all but one member of the Supreme Court. Brother R. C. Fletcher, charter member of Gamma, attended every session of the conference.

The committee, H. L. Flodin, chairman, of the Chicago Club and middle Western chapters had things well in hand, and the convention ran off smoothly and pleasantly throughout. The theatre party and football game materialized according to advertisement, and were most enjoyable. We were disappointed in Dean Shepardson's (University of Chicago) inability to be present for the banquet, but nothing was lacking in the way of post-prandial eloquence. The Balfour and Chicago Club favors were unusually attractive.

The key-note of the convention was a deep seriousness of purpose. Many of the delegates came pledged to work for definite constructive legislation. There was, however, perfect harmony in the various assemblies, and much good work was accomplished in a surprisingly short time. This was due largely to pre-convention discussion and to the effective preparation by convention committees.

Eighteen specific legislative actions were taken, the more important of which may be generally summarized as follows:

a that a charter in Phi Sigma Kappa be granted to the Zeta Epsilon society of Oregon Agricultural College.

b that the charter fee be increased $75.00.

c that the grand chapter tax be increased fifty per cent to cover increasing expenses of publication (SIGNET, history and song-book).

d that provisions be made for a division of the Fraternity into districts and their proper organization.

e that the prerogative of voting formerly vested in the chartered clubs be withdrawn.

f that a song-book be published not later than October 1921.

g that the Council provide a formal survey of American colleges and universities as an aid to intelligent expansion.

h that the honorarium of the secretary and that of the editor of the SIGNET be respectively increased one hundred percent.

i that the next convention be held in Washington, D. C.

Some of the actions thus briefly summarized require further legislation on the part of the chapters or the Council, but the unanimity with which most of them were taken indicates their ultimate consummation. Resolutions were also passed reaffirming our disapproval of Theta Nu Epsilon and similar organizations. There were other resolutions of like nature.

There was a lively interest in the election of a new Council, there being contests for nearly all of the places. The final results were as indicated elsewhere in this number, two new names being added to the personnel: as auditor Walter C. Brandes, Lambda '20; as inductor Arnold C. Otto, Lambda '11. The nomination committee's slate for the Court was unanimously accepted, the only new name in this instance being that of Frederic C. Farquhar, Mu '00.

Too much cannot be said of the excellent spirit that prevailed throughout the conference. Whether at work or play, it was a Phi Sigma Kappa convention in the best and finest sense of the word.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS TO THE CONVENTION

DR. WALTER H. CONLEY

It is four years since we met in Convention. During this time many momentous events have occurred. I refer particularly to the part the United States played in the World War, the manner in which students in our colleges and universities answered the call, and especially members of the fraternities. Alumni and active members of our fraternity—almost two thousand—were in some kind of war work; whole chapters left college at one time to assume their duty to their country; in other chapters, all the older men entered the service of our government, and left only the underclass men, to be organized into the S. A. T. C. Upon the organization of this corps an order was issued that all fraternity organizations should cease. This immediately disrupted all of our chapters, and threw upon the alumni the burden of carrying on the fraternity; this was done with such good success that all of our chapters have recovered from their temporary embarrassment.

It has been stated on good authority that members of fraternities made better army and navy officers, due to their knowledge of organization, and to their being more amenable to discipline. This proves that fraternities are an essential part of student life in colleges and universities, and that discipline and organization taught in the chapters are of real service to the country.

Men selected for initiation into the chapters are the pick of the student body—this is without question; the home life in the chapter houses, where proper associations are made, is a moulder of character, and makes for better college spirit; chapter members are looked upon as leading men in college, due to their standing in scholarship, and the number of their members who are leaders in all student activities.

This standing must be maintained. Never before was there greater necessity for fraternities to be on their best behavior, and to act with wisdom and discretion. Prohibition, fortunately, removes the danger of liquor in chapter houses; gambling must never be allowed.

Unceasing efforts must be made to improve the scholarship of members; upperclassmen should be individually assigned to encourage and aid underclassmen in their studies. On account of this opportunity to help each other, there is no reason why members of fraternities should not stand higher in scholarship than those not belonging to fraternities.

Chapters should cultivate economy. This is best obtained by installing a budget system, and living within the budget; also by electing strong men as treasurers who will be able to carry out the system.

Foolish performances outside chapter houses, preceding or during initiations, bring fraternities into public contempt, and such practices should be discontinued.

Faculties should be made to feel that fraternities desire to coöperate with them in every way, and we must convince the faculties that fraternities, speaking as individual members, chapters, alumni and national organizations, earnestly desire to do everything possible for the improvement in scholarship of students, for safeguarding their morals, and for the enforcement of rules necessary in the proper discipline of the student body.

Active chapters have never needed the support of the alumni more than to-day. Chapter organizations were more or less disrupted during the war, and they need the counsel and advice of the alumni to bring them back to their former condition, and it is hoped that the alumni will renew their interest and get back to close relationship with the chapters. So let the alumni and undergraduates act together, pull together and work together. That means the greater glory for Phi Sigma Kappa.

THE BANQUET

The Brothers of Phi Sigma Kappa, assembled at the 19th Biennial Convention on November 13th, 1920, attended a banquet in the ball room of the Blackstone Hotel. The banquet hall was very artistically decorated with banners and flowers. Across one side of the hall sat the officers of the Fraternity and on the floor of the hall the Brothers grouped themselves around the tables in Chapter order.

During the several courses of the banquet an orchestra, soloist, and a quartet entertained. The soloist played a violin as she sang and moved about on the floor, singing her love song to various of the Brethren. However, she showed partiality to bald heads and concentrated her efforts on Brothers Fletcher, Root and Vogel.

After the entertainment and before the speeches, the various Chapters sang their local University songs and made quite a hit.

At the close of the banquet the Lady Members of Phi Sigma Kappa came in and graced the balcony.

During the banquet Phi Sigma Kappa watch charms were distributed to the Brethren with the compliments of the Chicago Club of Phi Sigma Kappa. Too much can not be said of the success of the banquet and the courtesy extended by the Chicago Club.

There were several speakers, and excerpts from some of the addresses follow:

'THE BIG CHIEF'S MESSAGE

GEORGE J. VOGEL, Court

The message that I want to give you is one that was given to us by the Big Chief some years ago. It came, I think, at a time when there was a good deal of competition for officers in the Fraternity, and it is our experience that we have not been always able to pick out the best men for the various offices, and sometimes made mistakes, because it is a peculiar institution in that it sometimes takes a peculiar individual to look after the details in the work of supervision of the men's work. The Big Chief brought out this fact, and held out on it in his inimitable way. He was a man, one of the few men, who had a wonderful command of the English language. They are scarce men. He said: "The whole standard of the life work of this Fraternity should be that of service to the Fraternity; only in so far as you render a service to the Fraternity does the Fraternity grow and expand." That is, you men make the Fraternity. Not always does the Fraternity make you. I will acknowledge that the Fraternity had a big share in making me, for which I am grateful. But generally, I think it is the service which you render, not in dollars and cents or any other appreciation—even sitting at the head table. It is the service you can do in being a loyal and a faithful exponent of the ideas of the Fraternity. And that is the message which I am trying to tell you. It is what I am trying to hand down to you from the Big Chief.

THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH

EDGAR M. ALLEN, BA '11

I want to say that in the last three or four days I have discovered the fountain of youth. I thought I was getting old. However this suit of clothes is one of the indications, for when I tried to get into it I found that I was more portly than I was a few years ago. College generations are beginning to mount up between the year that I left Minnesota and the present time. Also another thing that has made me think I was getting old was a potential Phi Sig at home. He is for that matter about 15 years or so. 'Now, son,' I will say to him, 'you can do as you like about fraternities, but, unless you go Phi Sig there will be trouble in this household.' Well, as I say, I was getting to feel rather ancient until I took a few days off to consume as much of this Convention as I could, and I found the fountain of youth as I say. The years, they aren't so very many, but the years dropped away, and now I can understand why the older Brothers, the ones that we love and admire so much, really never grow old. It is because they get around to every one of these Conventions, and at every one peel off the years. I think this is good for all of us; these Conventions are really the fountain of youth.

ANOTHER FIELD OF EXPANSION

ALVIN T. BURROWS, Council

There is another field of expansion of which we haven't started to sound the depths or reach the outer shores:—that is the field of making men. That, after all, Brothers, is what this Fraternity is for,—the making of men, and I mean by the making of men, surrounding our young fellows as they grow up with such influences and examples that they will by reason of those things resolve in their hearts that come what will, they will make the best out of what God gave them,—that when a war comes they will be at the front. Now we are doing those things to some extent. The War Department will tell you that when it came to soldiers all Americans were brave and ready. There can be no fault to find about their bravery, from the farm or city, educated or uneducated. But the university man was a more valuable soldier than one without the university education, and the Fraternity man was the most valuable of them all. So that the Greek letter Fraternities have really contributed something without price to this country. Now, that is what I mean by the kind of expansion that is still ahead of us. The Interfraternity Conference is taking up matters which are of vital concern: the matter of health, the matter of venereal disease, and things of that kind. Time was when we paid little attention to them. We thought a Fraternity was a matter of good fellowship, and so it was, and so it is. But that isn't all; we have got to expand away from that idea. Hold fast to what is good, but go after those other things that make for manhood and make life worth living.

SERVICE

ROBERT C. FLETCHER, F '92

This Convention has indeed been an inspiring event in my life. I little dreamed so many years ago that Phi Sigma Kappa would come to be this glorious body of real men that I see that it has become. Phi Sigma Kappa has high ideals, the highest ideal I think being that of the building of true manhood. I believe that it has been accomplished by the proper living of the young men in their Chapters. Various duties come to you. If they are performed in a conscientious way and to the best of your ability, you, rather than your Brother, will reap the benefit, although you serve him. The greatest thing to my mind in this world is service. The mention of this word "service" reminds me very forcibly of another organization of national prominence to which I belong whose motto is: "He Profits Most Who Serves Best." I feel that I have profited very, very little from association with Phi Sigma Kappa, due to the force of circumstances. Early in my life I came to the far West, speaking from an Eastern man's standpoint, and so was completely out of contact with Phi Sigma Kappa life and affairs. Our beloved Czar stayed in the East and he is a living example of the profit a man gains from service to others. I feel from what I have seen in this Convention that he is beloved of all and my earnest hope is that he may live long as czar. I feel that the most constructive service I ever performed for Phi Sigma Kappa was inducing George Vogel to come with us.

WESTERNISM

HENRY BAXTER, M '21

For a serious word, Brothers, I would like to say that Phi Sigma Kappa has meant one of the greatest things that has ever happened to me and has been the greatest thing in my life. I feel very strongly upon this subject. I have taken the Fraternity very much to heart. Out in Montana we have perhaps 25 or 30 Phi Sigma Kappa men. We don't know the exact number, but we at Pennsylvania have managed to get the start on the Montana men and we have our choice back there when those men come back. We feel that we have done a great thing for our University in persuading men from Montana to come to the University of Pennsylvania. When I go back home in the summer time I have a different feeling. I realize that in a great many of our larger towns out there that I have something real and something personal to look forward to if I should go to that town. I know that I have a brother there, a man who has a real interest in me and I a real interest in him. This has been a big thing to me out there, that we have been able to get these men, because my home is not within a thousand miles of any chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa.

The fraternity of Phi Sigma Kappa was unknown to me when I went back to the University of Pennsylvania, but when I got back there it happened that there were a great many Western men in that Fraternity. The day that I stepped into that Fraternity it seemed to me that I had stepped into my home in the West. There was an atmosphere of hospitality and geniality which I had not experienced since I left the West. That is peculiar to every Chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa; that is what I call the true Fraternal spirit.

JOINTS

DR. JOSEPH E. ROOT, Court

I have been reminded here to-night of some remarks I made way back in Philadelphia. As you all know, I am an orthopedic man. I am a bone man—a bone and joint man as they were known particularly in those days. I am reminded here that in Philadelphia I was asked to speak on joints, and as the members hadn't introduced me to many joints in the city of Philadelphia, of course, I wasn't able to speak by the book. And the same is true here, although any man traveling the streets of Chicago must have made some observations if he was not blind. But I was also reminded by the gentleman who spoke to me about the Philadelphia speech of some things that I was led to say from perhaps a professional standpoint, and he suggested that I repeat some of that, and I actually had to ask him what it was, and he said that his own experience in life had led him very recently to think of it seriously. I remembered the point I made then and which I don't mind making now: that we must profit not only by our own experiences, but profit by the experiences and observations of others. And I want to speak just about two minutes from a physician's standpoint, because I think it is a point worth knowing.

Our Fraternity is good and fine according as we make proper use of it; according to its management; according to the preservation of its health; its body; and its traditions. The same is absolutely true of the human body and human mind and soul, and so it happens that in the practical part of life that it seems to be impossible for us to profit by the experience and observations of others. We do profit by our own misfortunes. It happens to come that those of us who have been unfortunate enough to have a serious bump in life physically, the man who has been brought low, we will say, by some physical or other misfortunate turn between 20 or 30, that man takes heed to himself. He knows that he can't overrule and override the laws of nature, the laws of God, without securing from it misfortunes, physical, mental, or otherwise, and the result of it is that he takes care of himself, and he goes on and accomplishes in his lifetime what he otherwise wouldn't. Mark that man who has never been sick a day in his life until he was 40—see what happens to him: he accumulates a self-consciousness of his own prowess in the fact that he never employed a doctor in his life—"to hang with the doctors, I am all right." The result of it is that he goes to the limit, either physically or in his business or otherwise, and out he goes like a candle. Or if he doesn't go out like a candle, he has not the power within himself; he has not the resistance within himself to overcome it. So that the point I want to make is to have you avoid the necessity of an early knock-out. Take heed to yourselves; learn to play when you are young; learn to take that proper amount of recreation which will ease the tension and the stress of life. For in these days everything is strung to such a high tension that the human system without relaxation is absolutely unable to withstand the strain, any more than any other machine from a mechanical standpoint can stand constant use without a certain amount of repair, a certain amount of restoration. The man who doesn't learn that when he is young, when he goes on and his fall comes, you can't do a thing for him. The woods would be a prison to him. You may get him to do golf, but you can't get him to go back to nature, which is the great source—and speaking personally, if there is any one thing which I think has preserved me it is my love of out-of-doors. I am not speaking egotistically at all. But it is due to the fact of my great love of nature that I get out and get in touch with the basis of all restoration, and that is what we all ought to do.

Gentlemen, I thank you for the attention. I thank you for that courtesy which you have always accorded me. There is no question about my feeling younger when I get with you. I can't help it. I get intoxicated, and not by the ordinary construction which I feared these gentlemen might possibly put upon it. And so I advise you, as you have already been advised here, to continue to attend these gatherings, continue to associate yourself constantly back with the younger element and in that way keep up the very springs of life, which if you do, you will never fail to drink full drafts of life-giving material.

Ah, friends, dear friends, as years go on and heads get gray—how fast the guests do go! Touch hands, touch hands with those who stay. Strong hands to weak, old hands to young, around the Christmas board, touch hands. The false forget, the foe forgive, for every guest will go and every fire burn low and cabin empty stand. Forget, forgive, for who may say that Christmas day may ever come to host or guest again. Touch hands.

—Murray.

ARNOLD C. OTTO, INDUCTOR

With those who came into contact with Arnold C. Otto for the first time at the Chicago convention, it was a case of love at first sight. The cordiality of his hand shake, the irresistibility of his smile, the assurance of his bearing, the quiet pleasantness of his speech were certainly not to be denied. In the sacred name of personality he dominated every group he entered. Successful as a vote-getter among men alone, it is easy to predict that he will enjoy to the full the glory of landslide now that the women are voting too.

As spokesman for the committee on recommendations, Brother Otto displayed all the graces of a public man happy and at home on the job. His presentation of the resolutions and his exposition of tangled odds and ends were easy, succinct, lucid. He did a difficult piece of work exceedingly well.

But Brother Otto is in no sense a new star in the Phi Sigma Kappa firmament. The Editor of the SIGNET, for example, has long known him as one of the few alumni brothers whose interest in the Fraternity has never lagged. He has been a consistent contributor to the quarterly, always of personals about himself and his associates, and lately of an important article upon the development of fraternity life in our colleges. His support has always been of the dependable kind. The petition from a group of loyal active Milwaukee alumni for a charter as a Phi Sigma Kappa club in that city is another testimonial of Brother Otto's interest in the Fraternity. He combines to an unusual degree merit and the appearance thereof.

Brother Otto was born in Forest Junction, Wisconsin, July 27, 1887. He was graduated in turn from the Kaukauna high school, Lawrence College, College of Political Science and Law School, and George Washington University. It was at the last of these institutions that he became a member of Phi Sigma Kappa. He holds the degrees of A.B. and LL.B. He is a member of the bar of the District of Columbia, of Wisconsin and the Supreme Court of the United States. He was an officer in the National Guard of the District of Columbia for four years; he was with the Interstate Commerce Commission, the United States Census Bureau, and he has served as secretary to congressmen. He was instrumental in organizing the Legal Aid Society of Milwaukee. He has been a Republican member from the eighteenth ward of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, since 1916, polling more than twice as many votes as his opponent in 1918. During the war he was government appeal agent in Milwaukee under the Selective Service Act, a member of the Legal Advisory Board, and a member of the Americanization committee of the Milwaukee County Council of Defense.

The Fraternity has done well to enlist his services as a member of its executive council.

SIDELIGHTS

The Congress Hotel was certainly not to blame if the delegates did not get close together at the smoker Thursday evening.

How old must a man be to be indifferent to the beauties on display in Peacock Alley? Dr. Root testified that it would take an older man than he to answer that question. But then, the Doctor was one of the youngest men at the convention anyway.

The sensation of the convention was furnished by Brother Hough, when he reported that his chapter had just been running a little fall campaign for funds among the alumni, and had so far collected $45,000.00.

But here is something which will make you think of Calvin Coolidge. It came from Boston too. "After the war we moved back into our old house, and are being charged less rent than we were before we left". That certainly speaks well of Omicron as tenants. And after making the above statement, Brother Krieger remarked, "We cannot do things in Boston in a spectacular way". If this isn't an instance of Boston humor, what are we to infer might be considered a real sensation at the Hub?

"We have from seven to nine alumni members at every chapter meeting". This from the report of Phi chapter! Some one unkindly remarked that the boys must be running a still at the house.

Brother Lindsay of Beta Deuteron seems to be unpleasantly aware of Darwin's exposition of life as a struggle for existence. This utterance could not have sprung from an untroubled spirit: "Practically every man who was not warring with a wife, was in the army".

Try this one on your friends. Brother Hitchcock got away with it nicely. "When I was appointed chapter delegate to the Detroit Alumni Club, I felt as though I had been appointed admiral of the Swiss navy".

What Treasurer Lawrence didn't know about chapter delinquencies may be safely ignored.

When Arnold Otto began to talk in paradoxes, his friends, who had warned him to avoid politics, nodded their heads as if to say, "I told you so". Take this for a sample of Wisconsin subtlety: "There is no club in Milwaukee, but the Milwaukee Club wishes to report as follows".

The married fellows certainly felt out-of-luck when the discussion got around to Chappie's Phi Sigma Kappa girls.

Brother Vogel successfully defended the sanctity of the constitution,—as usual. May his years increase! But how does he do it: manage a town-ful of New England school-marms month after month and still preserve that perfect poise and that extraordinary equanimity of spirit?

Brothers Hill and Baxter are reported as having done a little social service work on the side,—but that's another story, as Kipling used to say.

Pretty good convention, wasn't it?

PHI SIG FOOTBALL TEAM WEAK

It has been an off year for football in Phi Sigma Kappa. The chapter correspondents were as laudatory as usual, but the sporting press tells the story. There are some good men in our line-up, but the team as such is second-rate. Our selection follows:

MacIntosh	center	Massachusetts Aggie
McMahon	right guard	Pennsylvania State
Larkin	right tackle	Swarthmore
Goebel	right end	Michigan
Eggebrecht	quarterback	Wisconsin
Vanderloo	fullback	Iowa State
Holbrook	right halfback	Dartmouth

All in all Kiger seems to be the best man for left end. West Virginia, although not so strong as sometimes, still has had a team to be reckoned with, and Kiger got into the Yale game, and according to the chapter secretary has been playing regularly since. He is a tall player and handles forward passes rather unusually well. Mahlon Fairchild, as captain of the Nevada team his junior year, made the All-Phi Sig eleven last fall, and ought to be better now than he was then. Bushnell is one of the five Phi Sigs on the Worcester Tech eleven, won his letter a year ago, and is the best man available for his position.

MacIntosh, of Massachusetts Aggie, is a very strong center. The Aggie team was a good one this year, and Mac's playing, particularly on the defensive, was an outstanding feature throughout the season. McMahon, as it happens, is also a center. He was only a substitute, it is true, but in view of the fact that the Pennsylvania State team is ranked among the four best teams in the East and of the further fact that McMahon has played in several games, it has seemed best to place him as right guard. Larkin is our choice for right tackle and captain. Larkin has played varsity football for four years and served as captain the last two. This year Swarthmore beat Columbia handily and scored on Princeton. Larkin received some appointments on the All-American second team last season, and all in all is a very good man. Goebel, six feet and four inches in height, ought to balance Kiger nicely at right end. He has been cited more as a defensive than as an offensive player, however.

The weakest point on the team is quarterback. Strange as it may seem, there is no one upon whom we have sufficient data for selection, who has been playing that position. Eggebrecht is substitute end on the Wisconsin team. He took Captain Weston's place in both the Minnesota and Chicago games, however, and of his latter performance a Chicago paper said: "Otto Eggebrecht was the individual star for the Badgers. He was down on every punt, tackling the Maroon receiver in his tracks, while his ability in receiving passes was the one redeeming feature of the Badger aerial attack." Keegan was captain of his team a year ago, but was in too fast company to make the All-Phi Sig team at that time. This year, however, he does so easily. Vanderloo, thanks to irregularities caused by the war, has the unprecedented distinction of being the only four-letter football man Iowa State has ever had. He is by all odds the best fullback in the Fraternity. Holbrook, Dartmouth's star halfback, was in the Green's line-up for most of the season, and is without question an excellent player.

If we were to recommend a Phi Sig coach for this team, we should suggest Youngstrom, who has been line-coach for Amherst this year. After his team had upset all the sporting dope by defeating Williams in the final game of the season, the Springfield Republican said of him: "No little credit for the superb work of the Purple and White line to-day should go to Swede Youngstrom, who has handled this part of the team all season. This man, All-American guard last year himself, has accomplished another triumph in the way his pupils go to their task."

INVENTORY

THE EDITOR

This is for the alumni; undergraduates are warned to eschew it. If the idealist is utterly bewildered in Russia and in Washington, he is likewise bewildered in the typical American college. He moves about among the groups of young men, talks with them, enjoys them, loves them, and then reverts to a baffling speculation upon the paradox of their personality. For the most part he has found them mature in body and in sophistication but astonishingly childish in mentality and responsibility. They are indeed, as one visitant idealist once remarked, "altogether fascinating and inconsequential." And thus, looking to them, as he does, for the essential leadership in all of the world's affairs, he ponders and puzzles and broods, and gives himself up to disquietude and fears.

And the idealist is not altogether blind and a fool. The undergraduate is certainly little more than the boy grown tall. He is much the same individual who recently was smoking cornsilk cigarettes behind the hen house. He still depends for most of his joy in life upon that irresistible word "Forbidden." He is still motivated by an unwholesome and often morbid curiosity, largely animal in nature. He is still the artless disciple of pose, and the ingenious apostle of bluff. He makes work of his play; but not yet does he make play of his work. And yet there are moments when he is Hamlet; there are moments when he is Plato; there are moments when he is Job.

The most annoying characteristic of the undergraduate is his naïve irresponsibility. It is so perfect that it almost becomes a charm. He is unable to follow directions explicitly, even when they are given out by the senior Senate. He has a most amazing way of oversleeping at critical times. He will make a definite appointment with his mathematics professor and never give it a second thought until reproachfully reminded of it by that genial pedagogue a fortnight later. And then at times he will be so meticulously punctilious in his campus affairs, so doggedly and harassingly businesslike, as to command the wonder and admiration of his little world.

To the idealist there is no answer to the question, Why will the undergraduate persist in getting drunk? With youth fairly bounding through his veins and winged buoyancy in every step, why will he befuddle his brain and cover his shoes with his vomit? What sorrows has he to drown? Which of his joys must be heightened? But, too often, he demands his liquor, even if he must drink it like a common tramp, in hiding and out of a bottle. The writer recalls a Danish-American of his wartime experience, a man who for forty-odd years had temperately had a bottle of beer every night with his supper. With the prohibition law imminent I remarked that no doubt he would plan to stock up for a few years ahead, and I was surprised by his reply. "Why no, of course not. If the majority of the people in this country want the liquor traffic wiped out, I reckon I can give up my bottle of beer." I am sorry that he can never know how low I took off my hat to his superb patriotism.

Meanwhile in one fine old college one boy is shooting another to death in a quarrel over a bottle of smuggled whiskey; in another practically every fraternity has its own private still; in another a fraternity house becomes the scene of so frightful a debauch that it becomes a matter of national scandal; and New York City presents the spectacle of college men staggering about the sidewalks at eight o'clock on Sunday morning. Traveling secretaries agree that the very fact of prohibition makes it more difficult to keep liquor out of the fraternity houses themselves. And the idealist, still marveling at the inexplicable collegiate taste for liquor, worries about the future of democracy when our college boys with all their training in sportsmanship are so prone to break the law and so incapable of deferring to the expressed will of the majority.

In a congested suburban day-coach recently, the writer was picked up by a bobbed, powdered and painted young lady who claimed residence in Greenwich Village. She wanted to talk, and a woman who wants to talk, usually has her way. She told me some very interesting details about her life. Among other things she told me that she had "been drunk" not long before and for the second time had lost a set of furs. And she ended her recital by saying that now she was on her way to a Phi Sigma Kappa house party.

In some colleges it has become an axiom that one does not invite his sister or his sweetheart to the annual prom. An all night dance is a good deal of an orgy anyway; one is tempted to refer to it as a rather animal affair, until he remembers how temperate the animals, by virtue of a stern natural necessity, usually are. There is nothing really bad about it all, but there is a good deal of display, and a good deal of appetite, and a good deal of excess; and, however it may affect the girls, the boys are not good for much for a fortnight afterwards. The college boy's romance, in its native sweetness and beauty, is to be found during vacation time.

And then, of course, the idealist laments the undergraduate's ingenuous lack of interest in books and all that they represent, culture in her manifold forms. The boy is very frank and wholly sincere in saying that scholarship is quite incidental to his college course and to be classified among the necessary evils, like getting up for breakfast and going to the dentist's. He does his work in a superficial way, with a wary eye to his marks, playing his instructor back and forth along the passing grade and planning to be a little on the safe side of it at the end of the term. I attended a chapter banquet this fall at which the chapter president lamented the fact that practically every member of the group had been recently "warned" by the faculty in at least one course. "As it should be," remarked a complacent brother at his side. In the college community the boy who gets good marks may be tolerated, but the boy who gets excellent ones is the object of distrust if not actual disdain.

And yet in the activities of his own invention the undergraduate is often intelligent and thorough and zealous. Under no circumstances is he to be designated "lazy." The multiplicity of his interests and his extraordinary application to them both largely explain his comparative indifference to his college courses. The professors have much to answer for themselves. For these things about the campus seem infinitely more real and personal and vital to him than most of his classroom work. And he has created a situation now which all but precludes the possibility of thorough and thoughtful study. The atmosphere is abuzz with so many organizations, athletic, literary and social, that there is no longer any quiet corner for scholarly reflection, no longer any time for the leisurely, enjoyable preparation of lessons. With the exception of an unnatural compulsion represented by the dean, there is no real incentive to study in the American college; the spirit of gentle learning is disappearing even among the faculty. There is almost no opportunity to ruminate; there is hardly opportunity to swallow.

The idealist notes these things, and many others, and becomes low in mind.

The solace for the present, however, is the past. These deliberate and sagacious veterans of life whom we so rightly revere,—what were they as undergraduates? What was Shakespeare up to at the age of twenty-one? Turn back the clock on both individuals and institutions, and you will find “the good old days” amazingly crude and immature and of the earth, earthy. If we do not like to study, neither did our fathers before us. If we have a way of breaking through all proper restraints in sheer coltishness, our fathers had it the same in their own colt days. If we fill our mouths with filthy bane of all kinds, they unfortunately did the same. It is well that at the grave of youth we should bury its faults with tender memories, but the most intimate mourners remember that the faults were there to be buried.

Still civilization has had its way with us. Reluctantly though it may be, still we are applying ourselves to the serious business of education more faithfully than did our fathers. We are more efficient in both classroom and campus affairs. We are a cleaner generation in speech and habit. We are more amenable to superiors, be they college deans or Society. Our fraternity life is five hundred per cent more creditable than it was twenty-five years ago, and our athletics are likewise improved. And out in the world our young collegians are making good against a keener competition than their fathers ever knew. There has not been a breath about the college becoming effeminate, since 1918. The man who is a pessimist among the lads on a college campus would be a pessimist in heaven.

The writer has heard a good deal of criticism of our colleges and fraternities and the boys who compose them. He has indulged in considerable himself; that is part of his job, and it comes easily anyway. But he has known of boys who were fairly (and unfairly) bullied into passive sullenness by fond and foolish fathers. And he desires to emphasize at this New Year's season the immeasurable advance which our fraternity and all fraternities and our college and all colleges have been making.

The boys who compose them have indeed their vices, virtues running to excess, but taken in the large they are a fine, clean loyal, eager body of young men to whom we may well be devoted, and of whom we may rightly be proud.

SONG BOOK ANNOUNCEMENT

The Song Book Committee, appointed by the Chicago Convention to produce a song book by October, 1921, is on the job. The business of collecting material from the chapters is being done by Brother Reudi in the West and by Brother Hill in the East. There is a sub-committee composed of Brothers Shidle, Golden, Carruth and Dargeon editing and revising part of the material already in. This committee has headquarters in New York. Another sub-committee, Brothers Joy and Krieger, is handling the rest of the material in Boston.

Very little of the material sent in to date consists of individual chapter songs, and we want to emphasize the need of more of that sort.

As an aid in the editorial work, the committee would like to know something about the popularity, past and present, of the various old songs that we now have, such as "Parting Ode" (tune, "Auld Lang Syne"), or the marching song with the chorus beginning, "Phi Sigma Kappa Forever," or "Phi Sigma Kappa Loyalty," which we understand is sung quite a bit in the West. Any information on this point, from active chapters or alumni, would be greatly appreciated. Please address all communications to Armund Krieger, 517 Beacon Street, Boston.

THE CHAPTER INVISIBLE

DR. FRED B. CASEY, BETA '91

Dr. Fred Bellinger Casey, a graduate in the Class of 1891 of the Albany Medical College, died at his home in Mohawk, N. Y., on May 18, 1920, from hemorrhage of the stomach.

Dr. Casey was a native and lifelong resident of Mohawk. He was the son of the late Dr. James E. and Mary Bellinger Casey. Born November 18, 1866, he was in the 54th year of his age. He secured his early education in the Mohawk schools and in turn graduated from Cornell University and the Albany Medical College. After a post-graduate course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York City, he entered upon the practice of his profession with his father to whose practice he succeeded after his father's death. He gained a wide repute and practice which he continued until the last few years which he had devoted to large holdings of real estate which he owned in Mohawk and the town of German Flatts.

In politics Dr. Casey was a Democrat but never sought preferment from his party. He was active in civic affairs and his community honored his integrity with the village trustee and treasurer-ship. He was one of the first members of the Mohawk Municipal Commission, serving for several years and as its president, when this body took over the water, light, sewer, police and fire departments and helped lay the groundwork for the present splendid condition in which these departments are to-day administered, since removed from village politics. When the Weller Library and park came to Mohawk, the gift of the late Frederick U. Weller, a commission was created for their management. Dr. Casey was one of the first commis-sioners and was active in getting the library into use and held a position on the library commission at the time of his death. He had also served as village health officer.

Dr. Casey was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him and his removal is a distinct loss to his community. He was a member of the Herkimer County Medical Society. June 24, 1896, he was united in marriage to May, daughter of Mrs. Mary and the late Henry M. Bellinger of Mohawk, and she survives as do three children, Miss Marion M., James V. S., and Alfred B. Casey. There also survives a brother, Attorney James I. Casey of Utica. A son, Edward P. Casey, died suddenly two years ago.

BETWEEN OURSELVES

THE pun is going the rounds that poetic justice demanded the re-election of Dr. Conley to prevent the Council's becoming Lambda Chi Alpha.

THE Sigma Nu fraternity, following a precedent of its own making, has recently dedicated a monument to Founder J. Frank Hopkins at his burial place in Mabelville, Arkansas. The place of convention was selected to feature this ceremony, and altogether it seems to have been a very impressive affair. In March 1923 there should be held in Amherst a memorial convention in honor of the founding of this Fraternity. It should be the most impressive gathering in our whole history, with a large representation of delegates and a really eminent program. And in that connection there might fittingly be the unveiling of a memorial stone to our Founders, or possibly to The Big Chief in the nearby village of Barre. Some such tribute would be a benign occasion for us who should pay it.

BETA Theta Pi, by unanimous vote in convention, has legislated that after three years no chapter on its roll shall be allowed an active membership of over thirty-nine members, and that some of the chapters shall be limited from year to year, as conditions demand, to an even smaller number. This is one answer to the question recently raised by Epsilon Deuteron in its chapter bulletin. At the time of convention we had three chapters with more than thirty-nine members, due largely to circumstances brought about by the war. Still the fact remains that the danger of unwieldy chapter groups is a serious one, and one to be avoided, if it should prove necessary, even by legislation.

BY Christmas day all of the Christmas magazines have gone the way of all rubbish, and the January, if not the February, issues adorn our tables. It is not so with the fraternity publications. It was largely in response to the occasional letter asking rather loftily when the current SIGNET may be expected, that the Editor has been keeping a record of the date of arrival of the various magazines this fall. It was wholly a posthumous matter as far as the SIGNET is concerned, for the Editor selected about as unfortunate an issue as possible for purposes of triumphant comparison, but he was interested not so much in comparison as in the general situation, and the record is a fair indication. It might be remarked that The Caduceus should be awarded whatever laurels are available, and that on the other hand one or two of the fall numbers have not appeared even yet. Except as otherwise specified, the issue is that for September.

Record (Σ A E), October 4; SIGNET, October 7; Caduceus (Oct.) (K Σ), October 8; Phi Chi Quarterly, October 13; Banta's Greek Exchange, October 21; Delta Upsilon Quarterly, October 25; Carnation (Δ Σ Φ), October 25; Garnet & White (Oct.) (A X P), October 27; Shield (Oct.) (Φ K Ψ), November 1; Delta (Oct.) (Σ N), November 8; Sigma Chi Quarterly, November 14; Beta Theta Pi (Oct.), November 15; Delta Kappa Epsilon Quarterly (Oct.), December 2.

PERHAPS the most striking impression which your delegates received at the annual Inter-fraternity Conference in New York this winter, is that of the undying hostility of the various organizations toward Theta Nu Epsilon. Even members of that organization among the delegates publicly arose and denounced it. Some of the fraternities are already prepared to withdraw the charters of chapters whose members are T N E's, and are waiting only for a little more concertedness among the fraternities concerned, to take the radical step. In view of the resolutions passed at two Phi Sigma Kappa conventions, it would seem that the Council, after due warning, is justified in joining such a movement wherever necessary.

It is well for us to remember, however, that Theta Nu Epsilon is a good deal of a symbol. There are many similar, local organizations, in no sense sub rosa, which are quite as pernicious in their influences as is Theta Nu Epsilon. At their best they do little more than accentuate clique distinction; at their worst they are the clearing houses of political intrigue and social indecency. There is hardly a college that does not need to clean house along these lines. It is up to the undergraduates. When the right men are willing to sacrifice their vanity for the public welfare, they will smother these unwholesome organisms in short order.

“TO the great public,” remarked Dean Clark of Illinois at the Inter-fraternity Conference, “there are no distinctions between fraternities; they are all exactly the same”. That is profoundly true. It is “all Greek” indeed to the public. How many a doting parent stumbles hopelessly over the name of the boy’s fraternity, and finally gets it wrong. Even Dean Clark, who probably knows as much about fraternities as any man on earth, in the talk referred to above, twice used the name Phi Sigma Kappa when he meant Phi Kappa Sigma. Thus unconsciously he emphasized his point that as fraternity men we must stand or fall together. If the Dekes collapse, the Phi Sigs will almost certainly go too. Our common interest is the key-stone to the arch. The bond that makes all Greeks brothers is infinitely stronger than all of the esoteric walls which we have laboriously constructed to keep us apart. At the meeting of fraternity secretaries last month the delegates took to referring to each other as “Cousin”. That is the unanswerable commentary. We may indeed take pride in different branches, but we still belong to one great family. And when it comes to a pinch, the family can be depended upon to stand together.

THE following letter from Brother W. S. Landis is self-explanatory. Of course the Editor regrets exceedingly the error to which Brother Landis refers, and to the extent that he was responsible, offers this public apology.

In the September issue of the SIGNET, I notice on page 88 an announcement that I had been made President of the American Cyanamid Company. This is emphatically an error in that I am still Chief Technologist of this company, and I wish you would correct in your next issue the error which appears in your September journal.

I presume it came from confusing the fact that I am at present President of the American Electrochemical Society, with my business relationship, although it has placed me in a very awkward situation to have such error made.

EVERY one is glad to have Brother “Kid” Farquhar back among the designated leaders of the Fraternity. Congratulations!

OUR NEW AUDITOR

Walter Brandes, elected to the Council to fill the office of Auditor of the fraternity, was initiated at Theta Chapter, graduated at Yale and took his Master's degree at George Washington last June where he is now working for a Ph.D.

It was indeed fortunate for Lambda Chapter that such a man as Walter Brandes was in Washington during the war. While not his Alma Mater he threw himself heart and soul into working for the Chapter and it was practically thru his efforts alone that the Chapter was kept alive. And few know the fight it took. For a time not an active man was living in the house but when the outlook was darkest Walter made the remark, "I'll keep this Chapter going if it is the last thing I do and I'll keep the house if I have to move in and pay the rent myself," and all who heard that remark knew he meant it.

It is characteristic of Walter that the more difficult the undertaking the better he likes it. As he puts it, "The fight we have to make for things is what makes life worth while." He is a man who does things. His steadfastness of purpose and his stubborn refusal to be turned aside despite great opposition marks him as having great strength of character. He has that indomitable spirit that never says die and the tireless energy to accomplish what he sets out to do regardless of obstacles. He carried Lambda Chapter thru a crisis during the War and put her where she is now on a firm footing and in one of the finest fraternity houses in Washington. While not an active member of the Chapter now he spends a great part of his time at the house and offers his counsel and assistance on all matters of importance. Now that he is a member of the Council the fraternity at large will benefit greatly from his wide experience in fraternity matters.

Go, lose or conquer as you can;

But if you fail, or if you rise,

Be each, pray God, a gentleman.

THE CHAPTER AUTHORIAL

American Guide Book to France and its Battlefields, by Enoch B. Garey, Σ '03, in collaboration with O. O. Ellis and R. V. D. Magoffin. Macmillan Company. It is as its name implies. A foreword was written by General Leonard Wood. The New York Times describes it as "peculiarly timely and comprehensive."

Everyday Americans, by Henry Seidel Canby, E '99. The Century Company. The publishers say of it: "a brilliant study of the mind of the plain American, the bourgeois American, the type to which most of us conform, however unwillingly, in our thinking, our prejudices, our ideals, our limitations. It throws new light on the national type we have developed, its problems, its idiosyncrasies, its humors, its possible future."

The Golden Rule and College Fraternities, by Frank Prentice Rand, X '12, in the July Banta's Greek Exchange.

Lost Lady, by Brother Post, in June McCall's.

Yellow Flower, by Brother Post, in October Pictorial Review. Mr. O'Brien includes all three of these stories in The Best Short Stories of 1920, and the last of the three in his three-asterisk honor roll.

The Expert Detective, also by Brother Post, in October Everybody's. Of this the New York Times said, "The more one thinks about it, the more one comes to the conclusion that Mr. Post is one of the most extraordinary writers of detective fiction in America. His ability at weaving an apparently insoluble mystery theme together and then suddenly springing a real surprise upon the reader, which always turns out to be quite logical, is beyond that of any other writer of mystery in the country. Besides that he possesses a finished literary style and real ability as a delineator of character."

The Sleuth of St. James Square, still once more by Brother Post; this time a book published by D. Appleton and Company. The publishers say of it, "The new formula for unfolding of a mystery story which Mr. Post has employed, we confidently believe is the most important innovation in detective fiction that has been contributed to our literature by any writer since Edgar Allan Poe."

Sufficient facilities are provided in the chapter house for any social function, as the outstanding feature of the lower floor is an enormous tapestried ballroom. In addition there is a spacious paneled lounge, a blue tapestried parlor and a very large dining room with the usual kitchen facilities. All brothers intending to visit Washington for the Inaugural season or during the summer are invited to make Lambda Chapter their headquarters. The house remains open all the year. ## OMICRON FOR EFFICIENCY

Just at present Omicron is laying most stress on keeping in touch with her Alumni, on fostering the growth of her new Alumni Association, and on starting the freshmen on the right path by seeing that each new man is well placed and working hard for some Institute activity. The first two of these steps are carried out through the medium of an Alumni Secretary and the Omicron Tech, and the last is taken care of by an Activities Committee.

The best plan proposed and the one now being tried out for keeping in touch with the Alumni in the vicinity of Boston is to have Alumni come in to the house for dinner Sunday noons so that in the afternoons they can tell the brothers what has happened to them since their graduations, what interesting things they have run up against, and how they find their training has fitted them for their work. Then too, these alumni can give the men still in the active chapter advance dope on what employers expect and ask for, how graduates should pick their work, and what they have a right to expect after four years' preparation in a technical school. All this should prove interesting to the undergraduate, and what is just as important, it will bring the Alumni around to the house and give them the feeling they are really wanted and of assistance.

To foster the growth of the Alumni Association each member of the active chapter has been asked to write letters to four of the Alumni who are not at present members of the Association. These are all personal letters and it is hoped that the Alumni will respond when thus approached. Another step taken has been to publish the Omicron Tech twice a year. Half the expenses of publication are borne by the Association, and it is planned to thus give the Alumni more for their money and so get more members.

The third step, that to place the freshmen in activities, is taken care of by an Activities Committee elected by the Active Chapter. This committee talks to each freshman separately, finds out what he likes, tells him what there is for him along his special line, and keeps tabs on how each man is coming out.

ALUMNI NOTES

*The brothers are urged to send in personals about themselves and other alumni. Such notes should, if possible, be typewritten, upon one side of the sheet only, and should conform to the Editor's usage in publication. ## FOREWORD

The man who turns the spigot of a cask and draws off a muddy or polluted fluid doesn't have to strain his reason to deduce that there is something wrong inside. The forthcoming evidence establishes the contents of the cask to be below par.

Out of the fullness of the heart, it hath been said on unimpeachable authority, the mouth speaketh. Further, and with deeper intent, that as a man thinketh in his heart so is he. Yet, to this day men will pour out from their mouths an unwholesome stream of anecdote, story, and song, and still feel grievously offended if they are judged according to their audible output. It is easy enough to understand why a man who is surcharged and saturated with such stuff would want to rid himself of it, but one may well question whether in accomplishing this most desirable end it is really necessary to make sewers out of other people's ears.

There is a sermon not hard to find but too frequently unheeded in the lines "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditations of my heart, be acceptable in Thy sight." Notice the form of expression, the two parts, the conjunction of the two distinct ideas: words of the mouth and thoughts of the heart, both—not one or the other, but both—to be acceptable.*

THE INDUCTION OF THETA DEUTERON

EDWIN WALKER, ΘΔ '21

Zeta Epsilon fraternity of the Oregon Agricultural College formally closed its doors as such on the evening of February 19, 1921, for it was then that the induction of that fraternity into Theta Deuteron of Phi Sigma Kappa was completed.

Since November 13, 1920, a day that no charter member of Theta Deuteron will ever forget, we have waited anxiously for this occasion. When we got into communication with Brother Otto, inductor, and the dates of February 18 and 19 were set as the days for induction, we immediately began preparations, particularly at first, to urge as many of our alumni members as could do so to come back, and in this we were somewhat successful.

The afternoon of the 17th Brothers Otto, and R. R. Lawrence, Grand Treasurer, arrived and early in the evening Brothers W. F. Wood, H. S. Williams, and S. M. Dobbins of Omega Chapter arrived. Brothers J. H. Harrison, J. A. Frost, and M. T. Smith of Eta Deuteron arrived still later in the day, their delay being due to the lateness of the trains.

Brother Otto wanted to begin induction on the evening of Thursday but because of the delay of the Nevada brothers the work could not be started and so he kept us in suspense one more evening.

Friday morning the induction was commenced, the officers of the house being the first. The work continued steadily thru the day and by night there were only fifteen of the brothers who had been allowed entrance to the secret portals of Phi Sigma Kappa. Friday evening all of the visitors were taken to a basketball game between the Oregon Agricultural College and the University of Idaho, at which they were shown a good example of our college spirit. One little incident at this game might be of interest—was a short time after we had seated ourselves in our reserved 'section—the varsity yell-leader gave nine rahs for Phi Sigma Kappa. After the game the visitors were taken to a midnight matinee given by the Men's Glee Club and the Madrigal Club. During the evening we were honored by a short visit from Brothers R. D. Hoyt of Gamma, G. G. Steel of Omega, and E. W. Thrall of Lambda, but Brother Thrall was the only one that was able to remain for our banquet.

Saturday morning saw everyone busy again, with the completion of the induction by noon. In the afternoon our visiting brothers gave us instructive work in the opening and closing of a chapter meeting, and the officers were duly installed.

Nothing brought out better the real Phi Sig spirit than the banquet which was held at the Hotel Albany, Albany, Oregon, on Saturday night. From the beginning at 7:30 until the hour of closing which was shortly after 2:00 there was not one moment of dullness, everything was full of life and spirit and our visiting brothers showed us some of the real fraternity spirit.

Governor Ben W. Olcott, Secretary of State Sam A. Kozer, and Hopkin Jenkins, principal of Jefferson High School of Portland, were unable to be with us during the previous days of induction but came Sunday about noon and were inducted at that time.

Sunday afternoon saw the last work of induction completed when "Open house" was held, which was very successful and our visiting brothers met representatives from all the other fraternities.

HISTORY OF THETA DEUTERON

EDWIN WALKER, @Δ '21

In the autumn of the year 1915 thirteen students of the Oregon Agricultural College organized themselves together to form a club for the purpose of economy in expenses. They saw that by such an organization the expense of each individual was decreased. They gave the Club the name of Umpqua because several of the men came from the Umpqua Valley in southern Oregon. This was the start of the organization that later became one of the leading fraternities on the campus of this college.

They were formally recognized by the Student Affairs Committee during the next semester and were allowed to exist as a club. The men who formed this club saw that although they had organized for the purpose of decreasing their expenses, there were other greater benefits to be obtained by such an association, so entered into the spirit of the campus activities and took an active part in all intramural athletics. They endeavored to foster a fraternal spirit among themselves and to win the respect and the good will of the student body.

That the first members had the ability is shown by their achievements during the first year. During the winter the club won the inter-club championship in basketball. This was not an easy matter, as the league was very strong. Of the personal achievements of the members a mere enumeration will suffice. Gail Miller won a place on the Varsity basketball team. Ballard Buchanan received a commission in the Philippine Constabulary and left to take up his duties in the Islands. Oren Mulkey was elected president and Homer Morris secretary of the Rifle Club. Five other men succeeded in making the rifle team.

In the fall of 1916 the old members returned and secured a better home, new men were taken in, and the number was increased to about twenty. With this increase in size the club became stronger and was better known. During this year the club came out third in inter-club football, and second in inter-club baseball, losing only one game. Andrew Murneek, then a student in agriculture, now in the Horticultural Research

THE INDUCTION PARTY

Department of the College, was elected to the Honorary Agriculture Fraternity, Alpha Zeta. Oren Mulkey was appointed as Major in the Cadet Regiment; Harry Patton made the Varsity wrestling squad; A. Merle Scott made the Varsity in baseball; four men played class football. Homer Morris was elected captain of the rifle team and later made the highest average score for that year. Three other men were successful in making the team.

In the spring the war clouds broke and several of the men left for service, four receiving commissions. The next fall, with the old men who returned and the new pledges, the club continued its good work. Grades began to rise while athletics decreased in importance. Fourth place in indoor baseball was the best accomplishment in intramural athletics. Two men, Homer W. Ferguson and Richard Wilmot, made Varsity soccer. Morris and Ferguson were elected to Sigma Tau, a National Engineering Fraternity, Walter Kocken to Alpha Zeta. Eight men left for service during the spring; later four received their commissions. At the end of the year there were only about twelve men left.

Before the end of the year it was seen that something better than a club could be made of the organization. A constitution was drawn up, a new name chosen and the Student Affairs Committee petitioned that we be recognized as a local fraternity. The ideals and ambitions of the organization were put in the form of a ritual.

In the fall of 1918 all of the fraternities in the college temporarily suspended activity because of the Student Army Training Corps, and their houses were taken over by the college to accommodate the women students whose dormitories had been taken to be used as barracks. During this time we were granted our petition for our local fraternity, Zeta Epsilon. In January, 1919, after the armistice had been signed, the men were allowed to return to their houses and resume activities.

Zeta Epsilon secured a new house near the campus in a very desirable location, and under the able leadership of our President, Fred Entremille, we continued to prosper. The following two quarters of the year were very successful, especially in the way of improved organization and spirit. The position the fraternity was taking on the campus is shown by our record for the year.

Lawrence South made his letter in wrestling, winning the 117-pound championship of the Pacific Coast. Two men were on the Varsity football squad; three men made the college glee club, two of these playing important rôles in an operetta put on by the Glee Club; two men, Entremille and English, were elected to Alpha Zeta; Herman Stone returned to take graduate work and received his Master's degree in Agriculture; and Walter Kocken returned to accept the position of Superintendent of the College Orchard. Grades were not overlooked, and the greatest honor we obtained this year was to receive the highest scholastic standing in college, six of our men being listed among the ten highest in college.

The fall of 1919 found us in a new home, situated on what is known as Fraternity Row, a street on which several fraternities are located. This home was later purchased.

In athletics this year we won the championship in our league in every intramural sport. Four men played on the football team, four men on the Freshman baseball and one on the Freshman track squad. A dance and many dinner parties completed our social schedule for the fall and winter terms. In the spring our picnic on Mary's Peak, a snow-capped mountain some twenty miles from the college, completes the list of large social events for the college year.

The fall of 1920 came with our fraternity listed among the leading organizations on the campus. We were now looking forward eagerly and hopefully to the time which would crown our previous efforts. From early in our history we had looked forward hopefully to the time when we should have proved ourselves worthy of participating in wider activities than are possible to a local organization, and from the time we gave this a full consideration our ambitions had fixed themselves upon a chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa. As one of our men said to a visiting member of Phi Sigma Kappa, "We have decided to petition Phi Sigma Kappa; we want Phi Sigma Kappa; we will petition Phi Sigma Kappa if it takes fifty years."

It was with the most intense pleasure and also a profound sense of responsibility that we received notice of our petition being granted by the Phi Sigma Kappa Convention.

FRATERNITY LIFE ON THE OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE CAMPUS

EDWIN WALKER, @Δ '21

When fraternities first desired to enter the campus of the Oregon Agricultural College, the Board of Regents was uncertain as to the policy to follow, but, after a study of the question and because of the increasing need of housing facilities of the ever-growing student body, it decided to allow them to enter on probation. Fraternities have made good and at no time has there been any action on the part of the college authorities to suppress them.

The first appearance of a fraternity on the campus was in 1882, when a chapter of Alpha Tau Omega was installed. Until 1915 the growth was very slow, but since that date the growth has been very rapid, until now there are some twenty-four national and local social fraternities. The nationals represented are:

Alpha Tau Omega, which was installed in 1882 but later became inactive until 1915, when it was re-installed;

Alpha Sigma Phi, which was installed in 1920;

Phi Kappa Alpha, which was installed in 1920;

Lambda Chi Alpha, which was installed in 1917;

Kappa Sigma, which was installed in 1915;

Phi Delta Theta, which was installed in 1918;

Theta Chi, which was installed in 1916;

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, which was installed in 1915;

Sigma Chi, which was installed in 1916;

Sigma Nu, which was installed in 1917;

Sigma Phi Epsilon, which was installed in 1918.

Kappa Psi, which is a national professional pharmacy fraternity, is in existence as a social fraternity here.

Five of the locals are petitioning strong national organizations at the present time. Those being petitioned are: Phi Gamma Delta, Delta Upsilon, Delta Tau Delta, Beta Theta Pi, Phi Kappa Psi, and Phi Kappa Sigma.

Besides these men's social fraternities there are thirteen women's fraternities, nine of which are national organizations and two more women's fraternities are being petitioned at the present time. The nationals on the campus are: Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Xi Delta, Chi Omega, Delta Zeta, Gamma Phi Beta, Kappa Alpha Theta, Pi Beta Phi, Sigma Kappa and Delta Delta Delta. Alpha Phi, Alpha Gamma Delta and Kappa Kappa Gamma are the ones being petitioned.

There are nine national honorary fraternities besides the social fraternities already named: Gamma Sigma Delta, agricultural honorary; Alpha Zeta, agricultural honorary; Sigma Tau, engineering honorary; Aristolchite, honor society of pharmacy; Delta Psi Kappa, women's national society of athletics; Phi Theta Kappa, women's national commerce; Alpha Kappa Psi, commerce honorary; Sigma Delta Chi, journalistic honorary; Scabbard and Blade, national military.

The recent rapid growth of fraternities has been due largely to the growth of the student body, and to the changed attitude of many national fraternities toward our Western institutions. Our standards have been raised until now we gather students from all over the world and our student body is second in size among the Land Grant colleges of the United States. Our athletics have been raised to the Eastern standards, in fact they had to, as witness of the fact that the Oregon Aggies football team held the University of California to its lowest score during the season—17-7. Everything has been improved until the East has had to recognize us.

At the present time there is very little evidence of a sentiment against fraternities, either on the campus or over the state. During the fall of 1920 at a meeting held in Portland, Oregon college fraternities were under discussion, but nothing very strong was brought against them, and a prominent college president spoke in their behalf, showing that as long as fraternities continued under their present policy they would not be harmful but could be considered beneficial.

Intramural athletics were introduced on a systematic basis five years ago and have been continued ever since, until now every fraternity and club on the campus has a team for every sport. Because of the lack of time and training, football was not considered a safe sport, hence it has been dropped. But all other sports are carried on in their season: cross-country runs and indoor baseball in the fall; basketball, handball, wrestling and boxing in the winter; track, tennis and baseball in the spring. A plaque is given to the organization having the championship team of each sport. At the present time negotiations are being made between this institution and the University of Oregon for a meeting between the champion intramural basketball teams. If this works out satisfactorily there is every indication that it will be extended to include other lines. A swimming tank is now under construction and will be finished in a short time. As soon as this is finished swimming will be entered as an intramural sport. Golf is becoming more popular and it is only a matter of time until it will be an added sport.

Interfraternity debates are also staged, the popular subjects of the day being debated.

A managers' coöperative association has been formed. The various houses have all realized the benefits derived from it and have become members. Through this association all purchases are made and a great saving is realized, thereby cutting down the expenses of the individual members.

The doors of the fraternities are always open and the independent men are just as welcome as the fraternity men. The various fraternities, in order to form a closer bond with each other, have inaugurated the plan of exchanging pledges for dinner once a week. In this way the new men are drawn closer into the fraternity circle. Once a term the men's fraternities hold open house. The women's fraternities hold open house on the first and third Sundays of each month. The dances and house parties held by the fraternities are all under the regulations of the Student Affairs Committee, a committee which is composed of both faculty and students. The parties are limited. One formal dance is allowed each quarter and two informal affairs each month. A high standing must be maintained—each organization must maintain an average which is above the student body average—in all academic work or all social functions are taken from the offender.

All problems which may confront the fraternities are debated and worked out by an interfraternity council, which is composed of one representative from each organization. All regulations regarding fraternities pass through this body and the Student Affairs Committee.

THE PHI SIG BASKETBALL TEAM

It is still a bit early, as this goes to press, to appraise the current season rightly. The sporting editor, however, is fairly well satisfied with his selections as given below, and offers them to his readers for what they are worth. It is necessary to note as preliminary the fact that the New England champion team of 1920, that hailing from Worcester Tech, contained four Phi Sigs as regular players, all of whom are back on the floor this year. The team is again making a good record, having beaten Harvard twice and won most of its other games to date. There are, however, no outstanding stars on it; its success lies largely in excellent passing and accurate shooting from under the basket. It is wholly conceivable that this team, the fifth place being given to one of the three Phi Sig second-string men, would prove a stronger aggregation than our all-star five after a month of practice. But that is idle speculation.

left forward—Roser, Massachusetts Aggie center—Berry, Worcester

Campbell was Oswald Tower's selection for New England right forward a year ago. Although rather unfortunately short in stature, he has an uncanny eye for the basket from his own corner of the court, passes and dodges well, keeps cool, and all in all makes a very formidable player. Roser makes the first team largely because of his skill in shooting fouls. In a game between Massachusetts Aggie and Amherst he made what was probably the season's record by scoring nineteen points from the foul line. Such a man is an asset for any team. Berry, of Worcester, is our choice for center. He is a rangy fellow, dribbles and passes well, covers lots of ground, and gets baskets in goodly number and when they are most needed. Without doubt he was the best center in New England last year, and will probably be rated so again. Woodward's distinction lies in his being a scoring guard. In the Iowa State-University game this season he was the high-score man from both teams. Larkin has been playing varsity basketball for Swarthmore for four years. To date this season his team has lost only one game out of seven, having won from West Point on her own floor.

The following second-string team is suggested:

right forward—Wolf, Penn State
center—Kiger, West Virginia right guard—Settle, Lehigh

BARGAINS

THE EDITOR

My Lady has been shopping this morning. There was nothing in particular that she wanted, but the yearning was strong upon her, and her soul panted after the marts of trade. Besides there was something in the morning paper about aluminum frying pans at $1.98. So My Lady piled the breakfast dishes neatly upon the sink shelf and sallied forth. She seems to have had a very exciting expedition. The first Remnant Sale pennant quickened her pulse like wine. She ran into two or three acquaintances who, flushed and flustered, confessed to some very rare bargains. She found clerks keyed up to emergency enthusiasm. The department stores were garishly aflame with the blazons of opportunity. There were all sorts of alluring creations at truly irresistible prices. Destiny seemed to cry aloud from a thousand tags. And so it came about that My Lady ordered a few modest bundles delivered with the privilege of exchange. She has been looking her purchases over this afternoon. And she has decided that most of them will really have to go back.

He was city born and bred, this boy. But the impulses of nature were atavistically alive in his soul, and he came home to us one day accompanied by a matted and mangy animal with weeping philosopher's eyes, who answered dejectedly to the name of Sickum. Now every boy should have a dog, and for purposes of love one such is as good as another, but it seems that the badge of particular merit which Sickum wore was his purchase price of two dollars. It was to be generally admitted that he presented a very generous supply of dog-stuff, such as it was, for so small a sum. It was a matter only of days, however, when a supplementary bill appeared, this time from the city hall and in the form of a dog tax amounting to three or four times the purchase price of the animal. And then it was that our boy came to realize for the first time that there are practical differences in sex in the animal world, and that a bitch tax is sometimes something to be evaded or avoided if ingenuity can but point a way.

I do not know how it happened that Henry J. ever appeared at that suburban auction. He was not a collector, or a bargain-hunter, or a connoisseur, or a mob-psychology fiend. But among such was he to be found one April afternoon, and as Doctor Syntax' crockery went soaring up to thirty dollars a dish, the subtle auction virus got into his blood, and strange, mad desires ran riot through his veins. And in this mood a dealer, having tardily discovered a flaw in a massive mahogany cabinet which he had just bid in, found him and finally unloaded upon him the truly beautiful piece of furniture at only five dollars more than he had paid for it. Henry J. came home elated. At last he was owner of a genuine and impressive antique. He dissipated his wife's apprehensions with a lordly gesture of disdain. When the cabinet came they gave it a place of honor in the living room, but it had a way of looming out into the family circle like a pompous and pertinacious guest. Indeed it usurped the whole room. It was lovingly decreed that a less conspicuous post must be found, and soon the mahogany cabinet entered awkwardly upon a procession through the house, pausing for considerable lengths of time along the way, but finally finding an unwelcome haven in the musty, crowded attic. And there it stands to this day, stuffed with baby clothes and quilts.

The Gentle Editor would beg your kind indulgence. He is reminiscent this evening, and bargain memories crowd his fancy and plead for narration. And he loves them, too, every one of them, for every one is fraught with human longing, and many indeed with pangs of humiliation or regret. And he himself believes in bargains, and holds in some kind of a vague credo that the game is worth the risk. But it is not all so simple as it may seem. If it is a game, it must have its rules. If it is an art, it must have its laws. And assuredly bargaining is both a game and an art and must be so regarded. Possibly, with the above illustrations simply as background, we may take note of two or three of the more obvious demands which it makes upon its devotees.

Let it be observed, then, that every bargain must be tested from three distinct points of view: its intrinsic value, its price, and its need. Henry J. tested his cabinet from none. His bargain, therefore, lay largely in his imagination, where in fact it still remains. The boy and My Lady were more astute than he; the boy failed in his estimate of value and price. My Lady largely in her estimate of need. The boy paid rather high for something he wanted; My Lady rather low for something she didn't.

Well, the application is this. The typical chapter letter reminds one curiously of the exultant announcements of the buyer of bargains. "We have initiated the cream of the Freshman class," one exuberant scribe will declare. "Undoubtedly our pledges are the very best men to be secured," will add another. I love the zestful way in which at initiation banquets the delegates from distant chapters, hardly distinguishing the initiates from the waiters, congratulate the hosts upon their discerning selection. And then, little by little, complaints sift through. "The reason our chapter rated so low in scholarship was the bad work of two of our freshmen; but now they are happily dropped from college and we ought to do better." Or, "We initiated one man who proves to be no gentleman, and since he has not paid his initiation fee we desire to drop his name from our books." Unfortunately in fraternity membership there is no privilege of exchange.

Sometimes, too, a chapter pays too much for a good man. It may pay too much in actual cash, not as cash, of course—we do not measure men in dollars and cents—but as a precedent for extravagant and unwholesome practices in rushing. It may pay too much in self-respect; it is always deplorable when a chapter humbles itself before an athletic or wealthy underclassman, excepting him from the usual burdens of discipline and subordination. It may pay too much in harmony, due perhaps to rushing disputes and compromises, perhaps to temperamental cliques of one kind or another.

But more often it happens that the quality and price are both right. The man is a bargain,—but not for us. Let a sophomore dark horse appear on the gridiron and every fraternity on the campus will be making eyes at him on the instant. A chapter may be already so large as to be unwieldy, it may already have more athletes than is wholly good for it, it may need an extra junior to balance the delegations, but it scents what seems to be a bargain from afar and covets it with inordinate desire. The man may be a bargain for some other fraternity; under the circumstances he is not a bargain for ours.

And what has been said about the rushing of freshmen applies equally and in much the same way to the granting of charters.

It is a matter of simple observation that some of the older and strongest fraternities are deliberately keeping their chapter enrollment small, and that some of the large ones are deliberately calling a halt. There is still the law of diminishing returns. It does not hold that because one baby is a blessing, twenty babies are twenty times as great a blessing, or that because Mr. and Mrs. A. find happiness in a brood of ten, Mr. and Mrs. B. would find a similar nestful a source of felicity. Then, of course, there are babies and babies; and the one which gladdens parental hearts in a hut on a Southern plantation might prove a paradoxical white elephant in a home on Back Bay, Boston. Not only, then, must the bargain be of good quality and of reasonable price, but it must fit into the bargainer's scheme of life; it must fill a need.

Then there is something else. The bargain must not come too easily. After all, it must not come down like rain,—unless it be in a thirsty land. The whole idea of bargain presupposes yearning, and the true bargain-hunter should be a man of burning wants. Three-fourths of the fun is in the search, and then the other fourth lies in the heightened satisfaction of attainment. Deep in their hearts the chapters have a subtle contempt for the lad who is just hanging around just waiting for a bid, and conversely a self-reliant freshman must be a bit suspicious of a fraternity which debases itself before him in importunity. Likewise, it is a good thing for a national fraternity to have to wait for just the kind of petitions it needs, and for petitioning bodies to be similarly kept in abeyance. Beware of the bargain for which you were not looking; most of the cases of love at first sight never reach the glory of the orange blossoms.

The sum and substance of this informal paper seems to be: don't go after bargains in a hurry. And as I write the words I seem to hear a protesting sophomoric chorus—wholly imaginary, of course, for no sophomore is likely to get as far into a SIGNET editorial as this—"But when a dozen other buyers are after the goods, you have got to hurry." To which in my fancy I seem to be replying, with all the wise and genial philosophy of silver hair, "There are more bargains than you see on the counters this morning; the stores are full of them." Excitement is a joy in the heart of youth, but when one is bargain hunting it is better to keep cool, and go slowly.

New York—Sec. Victor W. Cutting, Φ '08, 356 W. 145th Street.

Chicago—Sec. Harold L. Flodin, AA '15, 5520 Glenwood Avenue.

Baltimore—Sec. Gilbert J. Morgan, H '07, 1806 Park Avenue.

Albany—Sec. Alson J. Hull, B '13, Troy, N. Y.

With this issue the SIGNET opens a new department, this devoted to the alumni clubs. Not since the Editor has been associated with the national organization have the alumni clubs, in any number, been more than nominal. It is not at all surprising that they failed to weather the war. The directory at the head of this column contains only those clubs which are chartered and active at the present time. These at least report activity and a responsible secretary. It will be our pleasure to restore to this directory the names of such other chartered clubs as may be revived.

This department, however, will contain news of alumni organizations other than the clubs included in the above directory. It solicits news of the chapter alumni organizations, which because of a much firmer foundation, namely, a definite job to do, are more substantial institutions than the old chartered clubs and are in many instances, as in Philadelphia, gradually supplanting them. It also solicits news of the informal associations, unchartered clubs if you please, which may spring up here and there to fill a passing need or offer an ephemeral fraternal appeal. It lastly solicits suggestions looking toward a broader and more active coöperation of alumni in our larger towns. The secretaries of the chartered organizations will be notified of press-dates and expected to contribute something for every SIGNET; the secretaries of other organizations are invited to send in material as convenient.

Let's Go!

President J. J. Ferris of the Detroit Club has created a new office, that of scribe, and has appointed to that office Brother H. B. Selleck. The Founders Day Banquet will be held March 19, and Dr. Charles Sumner Howe, president of Case School of Applied Science, and Brother Burrows of the Council, have been secured as guests. Brother Ferris writes further:

In the first place I wish to state that the Detroit Club of Phi Sigma Kappa is very active. Regular monthly meetings have been held since the first get-together after the signing of the armistice. The Club has a regular corps of officers, as you will note, and these, together with Brother Arthur Bassett, form what is known as an Executive Body. This Executive Committee has charge of all the work of the Club. We have had very successful meetings last year and most of the Phi Sigma Kappa men visited the Chapter House at Ann Arbor two or three times during the year, and particularly during the football season. The members are lending aid and assistance in helping the Chapter in some of its matters, particularly in connection with the purchase of some property for the building of a new Chapter House. This, of course, is merely a beginning and it may be some time before it can be floated, yet the Detroit Club expects to give considerable assistance in this particular.

By reason of the many other engagements which were had by most of the boys, no meeting was held in January. There, however, will be a meeting held February 28th, at which time final suggestions from the Club members for the Founders Day Banquet to be held on March 19th at the Detroit Board of Commerce, will be given. Preparation for this banquet has been under way for the past four months, and we expect it will be one of the biggest get-together meetings which has been pulled off in the Middle West since before the war, excepting, of course, the National Convention at Chicago.

The New York Club will hold a banquet March 15 at the Hotel Astor, at seven o'clock.

The Chicago Club will hold a Founders Day Banquet on March 19.

Judge Rolla Watt writes in, confessing that the San Francisco Club is inactive and that he is the nominal secretary, but adding that there is a group of five or six Phi Sigs who make a practice of lunching together on Wednesdays, and that he and Billy Wood will undertake to use this nucleus to put the club back on the map again. Bully, Judge! Here's strength to your arm!

A meeting of the Phi Sigs of Tacoma was held at the home of Brother Roy H. Case, X '07, February 15, to meet Brothers Lawrence and Otto of the Council. At that time a Tacoma Club was organized with the following officers: president, L. A. Love; vice president, F. N. Insinger; secretary, A. H. Lindberg; treasurer, R. H. Case.

The induction of our new chapter at O. A. C. has stimulated the Phi Sigs of Portland. On February 16 they met at the Hotel Benson and organized a club with the following officers: president, R. D. Hoyt; vice president, W. B. Osborne, Jr.; secretary, E. W. Thrall; treasurer, G. Steele. Brothers Lawrence and Otto of the Council were present.

Brothers Jones and South, Δ '94 and Δ '00, respectively, report that the Morgantown Club was organized for a specific piece of work, that it completed this several years ago, and that it should therefore be considered honorably disbanded.

A group of Washington alumni have met this winter with the thought of reviving the Southern Club, but to date this good deed has not been consummated. More later.

The Baltimore Club reports one smoker to date this season.

The Mu Association holds a monthly luncheon meeting, to which all Philadelphia Phi Sigs, irrespective of chapter, are welcome. They are likewise invited to any alumni functions held at the chapter house. The Association is very active. Its officers are: president, C. C. A. Baldi; secretary, Carl Schultz; treasurer, L. P. Stradley. There are also six directors, elected annually in groups of two and serving for three years.

The petition of the Milwaukee Club for a charter was passed on favorably by the Council last December and is pending action by the Court.

A loyal Phi Sig laconically reports of the Springfield Club: "I do not believe that it has been active since it was organized." Well, it's never too late to start.

Rollo Watt hits a nail on the head when he writes that one difficulty with club banquets lies in the fact that many of the brothers really cannot well afford to put five dollars into a feed. They should not be expected to. Cut the style for the sake of the spirit. Secretaries take notice.

The Phi Sigma Kappa Club of Minneapolis is holding a Founders Day banquet on March 12th; the annual meeting of the organization is scheduled for the 11th.

The Seattle Club, George E. Tilton secretary, holds occasionally luncheons and is working for a chapter at University of Washington.

TO FIGHT ANTI-FRATERNITY LEGISLATION IN MISSISSIPPI

Organized efforts are being made to secure the repeal of anti-fraternity legislation in Mississippi. A preliminary meeting looking toward the formation of an association to tackle this job was arranged for January 29, in the Edwards House, Jackson, Miss. Frank T. Scott, of Jackson, was designated by the Committee on Extension of the Inter-Fraternity Conference to take charge of the meeting.

The Committee on Extension entered upon an investigation which showed that at least 51 fraternities have Mississippi alumni. Of that number, 36 organizations appointed representatives for the meeting in Jackson. The others were unable to act on the invitation before the call to the conference was mailed.

It was expected that the new organization will be known as the Mississippi Inter-Fraternity Association. Its avowed purpose will be the promotion and ultimate passage of a bill repealing the anti-fraternity statute in the Gulf State. Acting with Henry H. McCorkle on the committee are Don R. Almy, chairman of the Inter-Fraternity Conference, and Wayne M. Musgrave, treasurer of the conference.

DEAN CLARK OUSTS THETA NU EPSILON FROM ILLINOIS

Dean Thomas Arkle Clark, of the University of Illinois, has won his fight against Theta Nu Epsilon.

Announcement was made a few days before Christmas that all members of the T. N. E. chapter at Urbana had waived their national charter, and signed a pledge renouncing the order. It is predicted that this first rift effected in the ranks of T. N. E. is the forerunner of a nation-wide fight to result in the general dissolution of the objectionable brotherhood.

Dean Clark's move against T. N. E. was foreshadowed by his address at the last session of the Inter-Fraternity Conference, of which he is educational adviser. At that meeting he disclosed the results of a year's investigation into the activities of the organization throughout the country. Dean Clark showed that T. N. E. is in disrepute in nearly all educational institutions. In a recent letter to Chairman Almy of the Inter-Fraternity Conference, he stated that the breaking up of T. N. E. at Illinois had not been accomplished with ease, but that he hoped all other institutions where T. N. E. is now in operation will take similar steps.

BLIND CHAPLAIN TO RETIRE

Rev. Henry N. Couden, D.D., '78, the famous blind chaplain of the House of Representatives, who has served in that body since the opening of the 54th Congress, is to retire. Dr. Couden is a former resident of Canton, N. Y., a graduate of the Theological School of St. Lawrence University, and an honorary member of Xi Chapter.

The following excerpts from a story written by the Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript gives an eloquent pen picture of the esteem in which Dr. Couden is held, and of his remarkably patriotic and zealously religious career.

It is with profound regret that the House of Representatives has accepted the resignation of the Rev. Henry N. Couden, D.D., its blind chaplain. The Fifty-fourth Congress, over which Thomas B. Reed of Maine presided, first elected Dr. Couden, and he has been reelected by each succeeding Congress without regard to political complexion. With the passing of this quarter of a century, he has become one of the most familiar figures at the Capital, beloved by Republicans and Democrats alike, who, as a mark of their appreciation, have passed a resolution making him chaplain-emeritus and giving him a comfortable annuity. Services in his honor will be held before the present session comes to an end, March 4. A Sunday may be set aside for addresses by members of the House, who will tell of the services of Dr. Couden to his country from the time when, a mere stripling, he lost his sight while fighting in the Union Army, of his courageous battle against adversity, of his influence on national affairs, and of his stirring notes of Americanism during the World War.

Dr. Couden was a lad of eighteen when the Civil War broke out and was the first man from his township in Indiana to answer the call for volunteers. He was plowing a field when a neighbor brought him a newspaper announcing that President Lincoln had issued a call for 75,000 volunteers. He drove the team to the end of the furrow, unhitched the horses and took them to the barn. The next day he started for Cincinnati, where he enlisted as a private in the Sixth Regiment of Ohio infantry. He was in the thick of the fight from the beginning, participating in engagements at Laurel Hill, Carrick's Ford, Green Briar, W. Va., Shiloh and Perryville, Ky. It was in an engagement with Confederate troops at Lake Beaver Dam Bayou, near Austin, Miss., that he received a charge of small shot in the face and eyes, destroying his sight, besides gunshot wounds in the left arm and side and foot. He was believed to be beyond surgical aid but finally recovered to find himself in total darkness. No rehabilitation schools were provided at government expense in those days, but he was not discouraged. He attended a school for the blind, where he remained for several years. He then took a theological course at St. Lawrence University, and was graduated with honors. He has been a successful pastor ever since. His first call was to a church in Madrid, N. Y. From there he went to Willoughby, Ohio, then to Chatham, Mass., and then to Port Huron, Mich. It was from Port Huron that he came to Washington to become chaplain of the house.

The chaplain has opened 5,000 daily sessions of the house with prayer since coming to the national Capitol. Until a few years ago, when ill health confined Mrs. Couden to her home, it was a familiar sight at the Capitol to see her accompanying her husband to his duties as religious mentor of the House. The loss of his constant companion, upon whom Dr. Couden depended so much in his work, has told upon his own strength. His fortitude in this adversity, members have remarked, has been in keeping with the character of the man who has sat in physical darkness for years yet has devoted his time to spreading mental and spiritual sunshine through the lives of thousands of others.

HOCKEY AT M. A. C.

The Aggies produced one of the fastest and most consistent hockey teams in the East this year. George Brown, of the Boston Arena management, said of the team, after they held Harvard scoreless for two periods and then were beaten 2-0 in the last period: "They are the cleverest and cleanest visiting team I have seen."

Four regulars on the team are Alpha men: Sunny Mansell, '20, center and coach for two years; Jerry McCarthy, '21, right wing and captain (fastest collegiate wing in the country); Johnnie Snow, '21, left wing (good, steady scorer); Phil Newell, '21, goal tender (ranks among the best in collegiate circles and always received a big hand at the Arena).

Phil Haskins, '22, made all the trips as a substitute and looks good for next year. Newell and McCarthy are three-letter men (Newell, baseball captain, track, hockey; McCarthy, hockey captain, football, baseball); Mansell, football and hockey; Snow, hockey.

A RARE DISTINCTION

Brother R. W. Linden was awarded the scholarship cup for having the highest scholastic average of all "I" men for last semester, at University of Illinois.

THE COMBINED MUSICAL CLUBS

What would you give to attend an all-Phi Sig musical club concert? Do you fancy there would be anything said about lack of fraternal harmony on that evening? Well, light your old pipe, stretch your slippered toes toward the hearth, and let your fancy have its way.

The personnel of these clubs would have been more inclusive and more accurate if the chapter correspondents had followed the Editor's directions more carefully. We have taken the liberty of filling in two or three bass part places with the names of singers whose qualifications were not fully stated, but for the most part we have eliminated all such from our record. If you think that your chapter is inadequately represented, refer to the undergraduate scribe.

LEHIGH LETTER WINS DELINQUENT CHAPTER OFFICERS

The Lehigh chapter letter was the first to cross the tape in the March handicap race for glory, with Columbia, Swarthmore, Cornell and Michigan finishing thereafter in the order named. Many of the letters, as usual, failed to observe just what was asked for, with the result that much of the material submitted was, for one reason or another, unusable. The Editor seeks to change the emphasis in the matter of student activities, issue by issue, and the correspondents should note carefully exactly what is required.

Besides the SIGNET letters there are two other reports due from the chapters to the Council: one the twofold quarterly report of the elections and condition of the chapter, the other the receipts for certificates mailed to the chapter. In the latter instance, the receipt is made out in full, requiring only the secretary's signature and return. Checking the records of the chapters at this halfway milestone, the Editor finds nine chapters whose record is perfect; that is, they have sent in both SIGNET letters on time, both quarterly reports, and all the certificate receipts required. This is a splendid record for the chapters concerned, and the Editor desires to give it some publicity. The chapters are as follows:

Cornell,
West Virginia,
Columbia,
Penn State,
Pennsylvania,
Lehigh,
Iowa,
Michigan,
Worcester.

There are seven chapters that have erred in only one item of report, which means that more than half of the chapters have been thoroughly conscientious in this important matter. In some cases, however, it is time the alumni came to the help of the Council, and the following data is published with that in mind.

There is one chapter which has not sent a letter to the SIGNET this year. That chapter is:

Maryland.

There are three chapters which have not sent in any quarterly report, either that of election of officers or that of the condition of the chapter, this year. The Secretary, however, is recently in receipt of a letter of inquiry from the second. These chapters are:

Union,
Maryland,
St. Lawrence.

There are ten chapters which have failed to return receipts for certificates, and the following have neglected this two and three times respectively:

George Washington,
Minnesota.

There are two chapters which have been delinquent in all three respects. These are:

Union,
California.

PRESS PROVERBS

Fraternities need the advertising that they really deserve, and there is no advertisement like a well-mannered, nicely dressed, respectful, and orderly freshman.—Sigma Chi Quarterly.

He (President Burton of Michigan) gives you to understand that no matter how much you have done, you haven't yet commenced.—Caduceus (Κ Σ).

Sigma Nu ought to be looking toward establishing, in the near future, scholarships by which one senior each year shall be retained in charge of chapter scholarship, and incidentally take his own master's degree.—Delta (ΣΝ).

We are also seeking to learn why fraternities are not represented in 394 of America's educational institutions of collegiate grade.—Tomahawk (Α Σ Φ).

Use the grip at all times; use it right.—Star and Lamp (Π Κ Φ).

We are inducting the freshmen into a Greek Letter Fraternity—not a red Indian war camp where physical torture might be an essential test.—Rainbow (Δ Τ Δ).

It is time that the alumni stopped criticising the notes in the undergraduates' eyes and took thought of the beams in their own.—Delta Upsilon Quarterly.

The fraternities are evidently quite generally receiving the unwelcome attention of imposters and clever defrauders who pass worthless checks or borrow money in the guise of fraternity brothers.—Record (Σ Α Ε).

How many alumni of your chapter heaped showers of invectives on some lazy chapter correspondent who was too busy doing nothing to think of performing his duty?—Rattle (Θ Χ).

The biggest problem we must endeavor to solve in the immediate future is concerning our alumni clubs; many of them are inactive and practically extinct.—Scroll (Φ Δ Θ).

With most rushing agreements, as we know them, we are in profound disagreement; their spirit is wrong and their letter is atrocious.—Garnet and White (Α Χ Ρ).

The popular idea is that a winning team advertises and then builds up a school; this may be questioned.—Beta Theta Pi.

The banquet could be made a great success by using more brains and less money.—Banta's Greek Exchange.

BETWEEN OURSELVES

TO our newly inducted brothers of Theta Deuteron the SIGNET extends most cordial greetings. We are happy in welcoming them into the brotherhood known as Phi Sigma Kappa. They are a stalwart body of three score, including in their number the governor and secretary of state of Oregon, and we find satisfaction in the assurance that Phi Sigma Kappa is to be henceforth a force for collegiate fraternalism in its finest sense, there in the far Northwest. There is a great field for you, Theta Deuteron. You are stepping forth into a glorious career.

TAU CHAPTER, upon the authorization of the Convention, has initiated into honorary membership of the Fraternity Mr. Antonio S. Andretta of Hartford, Connecticut. Brother Andretta's son is a Phi Sig at Dartmouth and in this connection he has become intimate with the men of Tau. Furthermore he is neighbor to Dr. Root of imperishable fame. Phi Sigma Kappa is glad to add his name to our roll.

IN a semi-historical and facetious almanac for March in the number of Judge issued on the fifth of that month, there is reference to the founding of Phi Sigma Kappa. You will read it with a grimace, and then reflect that this is our American unsavory idea of fame.

IT seems necessary to call again to the attention of the alumni the fact that all Phi Sigma Kappa badges must be ordered through the secretary of the Council. The official jeweller will not honor any orders for such sent direct to him, and unofficial jewellers, although they may be willing to sell you a Phi Sigma Kappa badge, will of necessity charge you considerably more than our wholesale price.

DAD'S DAY" certainly sounds good to us.

BANTA'S GREEK EXCHANGE in its enlargement is a very attractive appearing magazine. Those of us who know of the difficulties which persistently dogged its editor in the early days of this venture, cannot but take particular satisfaction in this new evidence that it is here to stay. Mr. Banta's faith in himself and the Greek letter world is mightily justified.

FOR the information of the Grand Chapter it has seemed wise to publish in the SIGNET the districting of the Fraternity as it has been effected by the new Council. It is as follows:

New England District—Rand

Massachusetts Aggie
 Yale
 Massachusetts Tech
 Dartmouth
 Brown
 Williams
 Worcester

New York District—Lawrence

Union
 Cornell
 College of the City of New York
 Columbia
 Stevens
 Lehigh
 St. Lawrence

Central Atlantic States District—Brandes

Penn State
 West Virginia
 Maryland
 George Washington
 Pennsylvania
 Swarthmore
 Franklin and Marshall
 St. Johns'

Middle Western States District—Burrows

Illinois
Iowa
Michigan

Western District—Otto

Wisconsin
Minnesota
California
Oregon

The President was designated visitor-at-large. In the instance of the other men, they are charged with the oversight of the various districts as specified. It is obvious that in dividing the Fraternity as indicated, the Council were influenced by considerations other than mere geography, and the names of the districts are not accurately descriptive. It is further obvious that the division was made with reference to the present council and is therefore a tentative one at the best. When it comes to district conferences Wisconsin and Minnesota will doubtless convene with Illinois, Iowa and Michigan, and perhaps it would be more accurate to designate these five as the Middle States District with divided supervision. However the arrangement is clearly of value from the standpoint of executive efficiency.

IN connection with the induction of Theta Deuteron a conference of the chapters in the Northwest was held at Corvallis. Brother Wood, alumni adviser for Omega, was elected chairman, and Brother James J. Richardson, alumni adviser for Theta Deuteron, secretary-treasurer. The principal topic for discussion seems to have been further extension in the far west.

DID you think of March 15 as a red-letter day, Brother? We are forty-eight this year.

THE CHAPTER INVISIBLE

EDWIN MEYER KIRKLAND, XI

Edwin Meyer Kirkland, honorary member of Xi Chapter, died very suddenly at his home in Canton, N. Y., on Wednesday, January 5, 1921.

Mr. Kirkland was born at Mannsville, Jefferson County, N. Y., July 2, 1870. He attended the local schools at that place, continuing at Jamestown, N. Y., and the Cazenovia Seminary. At the age of eighteen he went to Omaha, Neb., and lived with a brother for two years. Returning to Lacona, N. Y., he entered the office of Dr. Fred Austin and began the study of medicine. In October, 1892, he was joined in marriage with Miss Minnie L. Salisbury and three children were born to them at Lacona, viz.: Mary Alice, who died in infancy; Kenneth, now living in New York City; and Pauline.

In 1896 Mr. Kirkland moved to Gouverneur, N. Y., where he was employed as a pharmacist. Later he moved to Canton and entered the Geo. S. Conkey pharmacy and there remained until 1911 when, Mr. Conkey desiring to retire, disposed of the business to Mr. Kirkland, who from that time had continued as proprietor, doing a very successful business.

Mr. Kirkland was a man of fine nature, flawless in his business and social relations, liked by all who came to know him, and highly esteemed as a business man. His loss to the business section of Canton is felt deeply, and his family has the sympathy of a wide circle.

To Xi men, "Dad" was something more than an honorary brother; he was a good friend, a good fellow, and a strong backer of the chapter in all its activities.

RALPH HARNED, IOTA '22

There are many times when we are wont to wonder at the relentless hand of fate. When one of us, in the very prime of life, is taken from our midst, is just such a time. On the morning of September 14, 1920, Brother Ralph Harned was found dead by his parents. The evening before he was apparently in the best of health and was preparing to enter his Junior year here at Stevens.

Ralph came to Stevens from Stuyvesant High School of New York City. No sooner had he become fairly settled in his Freshman year than the Stute, our college weekly, realized that they had a worker of no mean ability. He was elected to the board and at his untimely death was editor-in-chief. The short time he was at the helm Brother Harned made many significant improvements; among them were, increasing the size of the paper, introducing illustrations in every issue, and many other ideas which have become realities. His journalistic interest was not alone confined to the Stute, for at the end of his Sophomore year he was elected to the Link board, our year book. Involved as Brother Harned was in publications, his loyal and vigorous support was liberally given to all class and college functions. In recognition of this superb spirit, he became a member of Gear and Triangle, an honorary order for the promotion of sincere Stevens spirit.

Brother Ralph Harned was a true Phi Sigma Kappa man, who had taken the welfare of his fraternity to the innermost part of his heart. Although he is not here in physical being, the brothers of Iota will always be grateful for the fineness of his spirit that will ever remain. What more can be said than that we are better Phi Sigma Kappa men for having been associated with Brother Harned!

WILLIAM HENRY HAPPEL, M.D., BETA '90

Dr. William H. Happel died at St. Peter's Hospital on the morning of December 10, 1920. Dr. Happel had had symptoms of diabetes for several years, but the final expression of the disease was acute, and his last illness was comparatively short. Dr. Happel was the son of Henry J. and Caroline H. Happel, and received his preliminary education in the Albany High School and at Fort Wayne, Ind. He graduated from the Albany Medical College with the Class of 1890, with a record of studiousness and intelligent appreciation of his work. After a term of service in the Albany Hospital he began general practice, and was soon practically overburdened with the extent of his work and the demands of his patients. After some fifteen years of this constant devotion to duty he made special study of X-ray, and became the radiographer for St. Peter's Hospital. He was a member of the County and State Medical Societies, of the University Club, and of the Knights Templar.

Dr. Happel married Miss Irene Shill of Ballston Spa, N. Y., whom he survived ten years. He leaves three children.

—Albany Medical Annals

"Bill" Happel was initiated by Beta soon after the induction. Fine, splendid appearing in figure, he was one of the most highly educated men the fraternity has ever had within its fold. At the convention held in Albany in 1891 he was elected President of the Grand Chapter. This convention did very much forward work and at a time when feeling existed between Albany and New York. The men we had inducted into Beta and their initiates were unusually strong, self-reliant, and ready to take on anything that was at hand. There was considerable feeling, but the convention wound up with four officers from Albany, one from Boston, and the writer, in New York. Our three chapters were added to soon after by the fourth at West Virginia, and on the next convention meeting in Ithaca, in 1892, in the small rented house of Gamma, the serious problem was: shall the majority of the officers hereafter be in New York or shall the headquarters be itinerant? Happel was in the chair—he had presented a fine report for his term of office. The convention was overwhelmingly Beta and Gamma—for there were only four Alpha men there. The headquarters matter was finally settled by electing the Big Chief again to the presidency and putting the majority of the Council in New York. Character is the final thing and when character is linked with a fine logical mind, as in the life of “dear Bill Happel,” there was no other result than for him to shape things so that he retired. At the present, when so many young men not yet thirty years of age want to drink fully of the cup of life, thereby experiencing everything, this vital matter in the history of  $\Phi \Sigma \kappa$  is well worth recording. God rest the soul of Happel and give his fine mind and spirit new constructive activities.

FOREST H. HARDIN, GAMMA DEUTERON '14

The following note from Brother Hardin's mother is self-explanatory:

“It is a most painful duty that I have had to perform on several occasions, that of notifying his fraternity of the sudden death of my son several years ago, in fact shortly after he became a Phi Sigma Kappa; and you will do me a great favor if you will have his death announced in your fraternity magazine.”
